The words of c. 1, § 1, art. 4, of the Constitution of the Commonwealth, already quoted, are seemingly as broad in respect to excises as those in art. 1, § 8 of the Constitution of the United States, whereby Congress is given power "to lay and collect . . . duties, imposts and excises . . . uniform throughout the United States." That power has been held to include an excise upon the sale of property; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509; Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. 363, 370; American Manuf. Co. v. St. Louis, 250 U. S. 459, 463; the gift of property, Bromley v. McCaughn, 280 U. S. 124, 136-137; and the manufacture and sale of specified property, McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27. In Thomas v. United States, 192 U. S. at 370, it was said of those words of the Federal Constitution, "they were used comprehensively to cover customs and excise duties imposed on importation, consumption, manufacture and sale of certain commodities, privileges, particular business transactions, vocations, occupations and the like. Taxes of this sort have been repeatedly sustained . . . As in Hyllton v. United States, 3 Dallas, 171, on the use of carriages; in Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, on sales at exchanges or boards of trade; in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, on the transmission of property from the dead to the living; in Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, on agreements to sell shares of stock denominated 'calls' by New York stock brokers; in Patton v.

Since none of the proposed bills accompanying the order levy an excise on the consumption, or to be exacted at the time of consumption, of produce, goods, wares, or merchandise, question three is construed as not requiring consideration or answer concerning that factor. Opinion of the Justices, 148 Mass. 623; 261 Mass. 556, 612. Thus construed, questions one, two and three of the order are answered in the affirmative.

The fourth question relates to legislative power to regulate sales of tobacco to the extent of requiring registration of dealers and imposing an excise in the form of a substantial fee upon the privilege of registration as an essential prerequisite to making sales. Other words of the Constitution bearing upon this inquiry are that "full power and authority" are granted to the General Court "from time to time to make, ordain, and establish all manner of wholesome and reasonable orders, laws, statutes and ordinances, directions and instructions" not repugnant to its other provisions. C. 1, § 1, art. 4. This is language of broad import. It includes the exercise of the police power. The policy of courts has been not to limit that power by attempts to define it. Necessary and lawful business of a nature liable, in the absence of regulation and supervision, to harm the public health, the public safety, or the public morals, may be required to be licensed. It is common knowledge that the use of tobacco by youth is regarded as deleterious. Sales or gifts of tobacco in its various forms to persons under certain ages are prohibited under penalty by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 270, § 6. Legislation of this nature has been adopted in several of the States. So far as we are aware, it has always been upheld against assaults upon its constitutionality. In Packer Corp. v. Utah, 285 U. S. 105, 108, it was said in substance and effect that it could not be successfully denied that the State may, in the exercise of the police power, regulate the business of selling tobacco products. The ground upon which such statutes have been upheld is that tobacco is an article of such characteristics that it is within the province of the Legislature to say under what conditions it may be sold or to prohibit its sale entirely in certain forms for the protection of public health and public morals. Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 188. Austin v. Tennessee, 179 U. S. 343, 348.

The selection of dealers in tobacco from among other dealers as subject to license is a permissible classification and is not arbitrary or capricious.

We are of opinion that the regulations suggested by question four come within the lawful exercise of the police power. Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 315. Commonwealth v. Strauss, 191 Mass. 545. Laurence v. Board of Registration, 239 Mass. 424. Commonwealth v. National City Bank of Boston, 280 Mass. 439.

The reasons already stated in answering questions one, two and three show that an excise in way of license fee lawfully may be laid upon vendors of tobacco measured by a percentage on sales.

A requirement that those who dispense or deal in beverages shall be registered and pay a license fee stands in its constitutional aspects upon the same footing as a similar requirement as to tobacco. Beverage in its common meaning signifies a liquid designed for drinking by human beings. Supervision and regulation of persons by whom, and conditions under which, beverages are sold and dispensed may be thought to have close connection with the public health. Cleanliness and purity of the liquids and of the places where they are kept and sold may be regarded as necessary to the innocuous use of beverages.

Questions four and five are answered in the affirmative.

These answers have been confined to the questions and do not extend to the details of proposed bills. Opinion of the Justices, 239 Mass. 606, 612. The suggestion is ventured, however, that in two drafts of bills printed in House Document No. 410 there is provision to the effect that the proposed excise is in lieu of local property tax. Whether such provision would be valid may be open to grave doubt. Opinion of the Justices, 195 Mass. 607; 208 Mass. 616; 220 Mass. 613. Perkins v. Westwood, 226 Mass. 268.

ADMINISTRATION

The Department is under the supervision and control of the Commissioner, who is assisted by two deputies, and, in addition to the general office, consists of an Income Tax Division, a Division of Corporations, a Division of Inheritance Taxes, a Division of Local Taxation, a Division of Miscellaneous Taxes, a Division of Excise Taxes, and a Division of Accounts, each division being in charge of a director.

There were employed, on November 30, 1933, 439 assistants in the work of the Department, which occupies in office space 13,660 square feet in the State House, 22,139 square feet at 40 Court Street, Boston, and a total area of 7,670 square feet in Pittsfield, Springfield, Worcester, Fitchburg, Cambridge, Lowell, Salem, Brockton and Fall River, to accommodate branch income tax offices. All taxes laid by the Department are collected at 40 Court Street, Boston, except such as are paid in the branch income tax offices.

DUTIES

The work of the Department consists in examining and approving the agreement of association, articles of organization and by-laws of all new corporations except insurance companies and certain public-service corporations; the examination and approval of all amendments to the charters, increases and decreases of capital stock and the annual financial statements of all domestic and foreign corporations, except certain public-service corporations; the registration of all foreign corporations, except insurance companies, which desire to establish a usual place of business in this Commonwealth; the filing of copies of the deed of trust of voluntary associations with transferable shares; the levying and collection of various taxes and special assessments; the distribution of the income and certain other taxes; the supervision of the work of local assessors and tax collectors and the approval of the form of collector's, deputy collector's and treasurer's bonds; the auditing of county, city and town accounts and special audits, installation of the standard system of municipal accounting established by the Department, the compiling of statistics of municipal and county finances, the certification of town and district notes, assisting those interested in city and town affairs and the classification of positions in the service of the several counties, for the setting up of salary standards, and for the allocation of county employees to the classes established.

TAXATION

As the major portion of the work of the Department relates directly to taxation, a brief account of the system is here given.

The taxation laws of Massachusetts are contained in the General Laws, Tercentenary Edition, subject to such additions and amendments as have been added by the General Court since January 1, 1932. The thirteen chapters of the General Laws relating to taxation are divided as follows: —

Chapter 58. — General provisions relative to taxation. Covering that part of taxation dealing with the supervision of local taxation; the State tax; the adjustment of veterans' exemption; the reimbursement for loss of taxes on land used for public institutions; the distribution of taxes; the repayment of illegal taxes; the assessment for deposits with the State Treasurer; reports; and the destruction of certain documents.

Chapter 58A. — Board of tax appeals. Dealing with establishment of board of tax appeals, etc.; principal office, meetings, hearings; publication and sale of reports and opinions; annual report; traveling expenses, compensation clerk and employees, expenditures; jurisdiction; appeals to board, petition, abatement by appellee, answer, entry fee, etc.; "informal procedure" defined, rules and regulations, waiver of appeal; hearings; service of process, etc.; stenographic reports of proceedings; administering of oaths, witnesses, depositions; costs; reports of findings, decisions and opinions, appeals to supreme judicial court.

Chapter 59. — Assessment of local taxes. Dealing with taxation affecting each city and town, in regard to persons and property subject to taxation locally; persons and property exempt from taxation locally; payment in lieu of tax on property held for certain municipal purposes; excise tax on certain ships or vessels; where and to whom polls and property shall be assessed; duty and manner of assessing taxes; notices and lists; valuation of property; books, lists, tables and returns of assessors; collector's list and warrant; interest on taxes (no discount allowed); abatements; omitted assessments; reassessment of taxes; apportionment of taxes on real estate subsequently divided; illegal assessments; additional duties of assessors; responsibility of assessors; evasion of taxation; and neglect by assessors.

Chapter 60. — Collection of local taxes. Dealing with the collection of taxes by each city and town, by defining certain terms of the statute; showing general duties of collectors; describing the tax bill; the collection of poll taxes; the collector's books, records, accounts and vouchers; the bond of the collector; the special collector; the fees; the proceedings prior to sale, distress or arrest; the certificate of taxes and other assessments on real estate; collection by distress; collection by imprisonment; collection by suit; collection by sale or taking of land; collection of taxes subsequent to sale or taking; redemption; tax titles; sale of lands of low value held by city or town under tax titles; proceedings if tax title is deemed invalid; lien of co-tenants; miscellaneous provisions; penalties and forms.

Chapter 60A. — Excise tax on registered motor vehicles in lieu of local tax. Dealing with excise tax on registered motor vehicles, assessment and levy; collection of tax and abatement; local collectors to have certain remedies; law respecting registration of motor vehicles not affected; rules and regulations; where taxes laid and collected.

Chapter 61. — Taxation of forest lands. Dealing with taxation in cities and towns as it affects forest lands and describing the right of classification; procedure in classification; taxation of land without the forest growth; forest products tax; consolidation of classified lands; sales of classified lands; withdrawal from classification, and reports of owner to the assessors and of the assessors to Commissioner in regard to these lands; the duties of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation in regard to forest lands; the distribution of these taxes; the management of classified land; the cancellation of classification; the compensation of forest warden; and penalties.

Chapter 62. — Taxation of incomes. Dealing with the taxation of incomes from certain intangibles; taxation of income from annuities, professions, employments, trade and business; exemptions; taxation of estates and fiduciaries; taxation of partnerships; income tax returns; information at the source for income taxation purposes; assessment and administration; collection of the tax; abatements; constitutionality, and penalties.

Chapter 63. — Taxation of corporations. Dealing with the taxation of banks, trust companies, etc.; taxation of savings banks and savings departments of trust companies; taxation of savings bank insurance; certain exemptions from taxation allowed co-operative banks; taxation of insurance companies; taxation of business corporations; relative to domestic corporations; foreign corporations; assessment and collection of the tax, and its constitutionality; the taxation of corporate franchises; excise on corporations interested in ships and vessels; collection of the tax; miscellaneous provisions and penalties and their enforcement.

Chapter 64. — Taxation of stock transfers. Dealing with an excise on transfers of shares of stock; the preparation and sale of stamps; rules and regulations; collection; recovery by suit; and miscellaneous provisions.

Chapter 64A. — Taxation of sales of gasoline and certain other motor vehicle fuel. Dealing with definitions; licenses; records of sales, etc.; monthly returns and payment of excise; determination of excise upon failure to file return, etc.; penalty; reimbursement of excise, sale free from excise regulated; application of chapter to foreign and interstate commerce; purchaser to bear tax, sales separate from tax forbidden, penalty; recovery of excise, penalties, etc., suspension of distributors' licenses; general penalty; restraining collection of excise on sales exempted by federal law; all receipts credited to the Highway Fund.

Chapter 65. — Taxation of legacies and successions. Dealing with the taxation of property passing by will or by laws regulating intestate succession, or by deed, grant or gift; indicating subjects and rates of taxation; payment of tax; value of property for taxation; special provisions for payment of taxes on future interests; provisions affecting administration of estates; valuation and appraisal; assessment of tax; proceedings to determine and collect taxes; and general provisions relating to this kind of an excise.

Chapter 65A. — Taxation of transfers of certain estates. Dealing with taxation of transfers of certain estates; tax when payable; tax when credited against tax upon certain future interests; certain laws applicable to repayment, collection, etc.; reimbursement, etc., to certain persons paying tax; effect of change in federal revenue act; effect of repeal, etc.

Chapter 138, section 21. — Alcoholic beverages excise. Dealing with excise for privilege of manufacturing and selling, or importing and selling, alcoholic beverages.

LEVIES

According to the 1930 census Massachusetts had 4,249,614 inhabitants and these annually contribute in direct taxes to the support of the government of the United States, of the Commonwealth, of its 14 counties, and of its 316 towns and 39 cities, and in addition special taxes are levied for the support of districts called fire, water, light and improvement districts, which are established in certain communities and paid for by the residents of those communities benefited thereby. The largest is the Metropolitan District, which includes Boston and certain near-by cities and towns, and there are about 60 smaller districts in other parts of the State. The district tax is levied and collected in the same manner and at the same time as other local taxes, except that the metropolitan district taxes are levied and collected by the Commonwealth. Other special taxes are assessed against and through the local governments in certain sections of the Commonwealth to cover deficits in the operation of street cars, elevated trains and subways.

EXPENDITURES

The large portion of the cost of maintaining the local city and town governments is for the support of the public schools, public welfare, the building and repairing of roads and bridges, the establishment and maintenance of police, fire, water, light and sewerage departments; and the smaller portion is for the maintenance of a large number of minor municipal activities. The larger portion of the cost of maintaining the government of the counties is for the maintenance of the county courts, the building and maintenance of county courthouses, registries of deeds and probate, jails, houses of correction, county roads and bridges; and the smaller portion for various minor county activities. The larger portion of the cost of maintaining the State government is for the building and maintenance of institutions for the retention and care of those suffering from mental diseases, the feeble-minded, the indigent, the drug addicts, the felons and the misdemeanants, and sufferers from tuberculosis; the building and maintenance of roads and bridges; the development of harbors and public lands and their maintenance; the diffusion of education; the building and maintenance of normal and trade schools; the maintenance of a State militia and State police force; the care and protection of industrial workers; the care and protection of the public health, the supervision of public service activities, the maintenance of the judiciary and the expenses of the General Court. The smaller portion is for many other State-wide activities.

That portion of the expense of maintaining the government of the Commonwealth which is not met by revenue or taxes levied by the State and kept entirely for its own use is assessed upon the cities and towns on a basis of valuation, measured by their ability to pay, falling as a direct tax upon the real estate and tangible personal property locally situated.

The cities and towns, for the purpose of meeting their regular expenses and for obligations incurred by issuing loans for permanent improvements, use the revenue they obtain from minor sources, such as fees and fines, and the revenue they receive from the Commonwealth for taxes assessed and collected on business corporations, incomes and certain public-service corporations; and for the major portion levy an assessment through an elected or appointed board of assessors, usually three in number, upon all the real estate and tangible personal property locally situated, except registered motor vehicles and merchandise owned by a foreign or domestic corporation. Machinery of corporations used in the conduct of the business as well as their real estate and registered motor vehicles are taxed locally. A local excise is assessed upon registered motor vehicles for the privilege of using the highways at the rate of taxation used for corporate franchises by the state with the provision for a minimum tax of two dollars. Property being held for literary, temperance, benevolent, charitable or scientific purposes is expressly exempted from taxation. Forest lands are taxed by special provision of law to encourage forestation, and ships and vessels engaged in interstate or foreign carrying trade or engaged exclusively in fishing, and documented and carrying "papers" of the United States (provided certain tax returns are made) are taxed on a different basis from other tangible property.

RAISING OF REVENUE

Boards of assessors have nothing to do with the appropriation of money other than as good citizens, but, having taken oath that they "will neither overvalue nor undervalue any property subject to taxation," are charged with the duty of determining as of April [after 1934 January] first of each year the value of all the real estate and tangible personal property subject to taxation and situated in their city or town.

The proper town or city officers having furnished to the assessors the amount appropriated, together with a statement of the provisions, if any, made for meeting any portion of it, the assessors, by adding the State and county tax and any other sum required by law to be raised by taxation, determine the total amount that must be provided for; and, by deducting from this amount the amount certified to them by the Commissioner as the estimated sum they will receive from the proceeds of the income, bank and corporation taxes, and reimbursement for state owned land and also the amount to be raised on polls and estimated receipts, as more fully specified by Chapters 59 and 60A, the amount to be assessed on the real estate and the tangible personal property is determined. The tax rate per $1,000 of value is determined by dividing the amount to be raised on property by the value of such property.

When the property owner of a city or town pays the tax bill rendered by the tax collector of his city or town, he pays a direct tax for city or town, State and county expenses, but inasmuch as the receipts from the State including income tax about take care of the State and county levies, his tax bill represents a direct tax for purely local needs.

Under authority of an annual act of the Legislature, counties are authorized to levy a direct tax upon each city or town within the county for such sums as the county requires for its expenses, and, like the city and town, the county derives revenue from miscellaneous sources such as fines and fees which are applied toward meeting expenses, as previously indicated, before a tax is levied.

The Commonwealth derives revenue from taxes, rentals, sales, refunds, interest, gifts and grants, fines and fees of miscellaneous character. The motor vehicle registration fees are a substantial contribution to the revenue of the Commonwealth, which is restricted for highway purposes. The registered motor vehicle itself is locally taxed at the rate of taxation of corporate franchises by the state, and the tax received is used for general purposes. The alcoholic beverages fees for licensing dealers in alcoholic beverages and tax on beverages is restricted to old age assistance. Almost all the other sources of revenue are available for the general purposes of the Commonwealth.

Under the Massachusetts law all receipts must be paid into the treasury and direct appropriations made in specific sums for governmental activities.

EXCISES

The Commonwealth annually assesses and collects an excise tax upon foreign, foreign manufacturing, domestic business and domestic manufacturing corporations, five-sixths of which is distributed to the cities and towns on the basis of the proportion of tangible property of corporations in each, and one-sixth of which is retained by the Commonwealth for its general purposes. The present tax law became effective January 1, 1920, and the excise is determined by two measures: one, a  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent tax upon such portion of net income of the corporation as is derived from carrying on business within the Commonwealth; and the other by a tax at \$5 per \$1,000 on the value of the corporate excess which by statute, in the case of a domestic business corporation, is the fair value of its capital stock less (a) the equity in real estate locally assessable and machinery and motor vehicles subject to local taxation in Massachusetts, (b) certain classes of securities, (c) equity in tangible property located without the Commonwealth, and (d) a proportionate part of cash, accounts and bills receivable, in case the corporation maintains an office outside the Commonwealth. In addition to a  $\frac{1}{8}$  of 1% minimum tax based on share value, there is also provision for a minimum tax of  $\frac{1}{8}$  of 1% on the gross receipts of those corporations dealing in tangible property. Domestic business corporations engaged exclusively in buying, selling, dealing in, or holding securities on their own behalf and not as brokers are taxed under special provisions. In the case of a foreign business corporation the tax is based upon similar general principles, although the method of apportionment is somewhat different.

In normal times the yield from the income measure is slightly less than from corporate excess while in time of depression it is very much less. The tax has yielded an average of approximately $12,500,000 annually since the present law became effective.

A franchise tax is assessed upon all other corporations organized for business or profit; except insurance companies, savings banks, national banks and trust companies, which are otherwise taxed; at a rate per $1,000 of value, called the State tax rate, arrived at by using the total valuation of the real estate and tangible personal property locally taxed in the State and dividing it into the total amount raised by taxation by all the cities and towns within the State. For the year ending November 30, 1933, this rate was $31.55 per $1,000, and the franchise tax was levied upon the corporate excess of railroads, street railways, telephone and telegraph companies, water companies, gas and electric companies, power and miscellaneous companies. This tax is distributed to the cities and towns of the Commonwealth in the following manner, as provided by statute.

The tax paid by street railway corporations is distributed to cities and towns according to the mileage in each municipality where the company operates. [Not to be distributed after 1934.]

The tax paid by railroads, telephone and telegraph companies, after retaining for the Commonwealth the tax on shares owned by non-residents, is distributed to cities and towns in proportion to the assessed value of property actually taxed in each city or town for the preceding year. [Not to be distributed after 1934.]

The tax paid by gas, electric light and water companies, after retaining for the Commonwealth the tax on shares owned by non-residents, is distributed to cities and towns where the corporation operates in the proportion of tangible property in each.

The franchise tax of all other corporations is distributed to the cities and towns where the shareholders reside, or retained by the Commonwealth when stock is held by non-residents. [Not to be distributed after 1934.]

NATIONAL BANKS — TRUST COMPANIES

National banks and trust companies are taxed locally upon real estate. The Commonwealth levies annually an excise tax measured by net income as defined in General Laws, chapter 63, section 1. The maximum rate is 6%. The present yield is approximately $567,000 annually.

SAVINGS INSTITUTIONS

The Commonwealth levies an excise tax upon deposits in savings banks and upon deposits in the savings departments of trust companies, the annual rate being one-half of 1 per cent, payable semi-annually, and the entire tax is retained for the general purposes of the Commonwealth. Certain investments are deductible from the deposits before assessment. The average annual yield is over $2,000,000.

INSURANCE COMPANIES

The Commonwealth levies an excise upon domestic and foreign life insurance companies on the net value of Massachusetts policies, or reserve, at the rate of one-fourth of 1 per cent. All other classes of insurance companies are taxable on the basis of premium income at the rate of 1 per cent in the case of domestic, and 2 per cent in the case of foreign companies. Under retaliatory provisions, which at present necessitate examination of the insurance tax laws of 35 other States, the tax paid by a foreign insurance company must not be less in amount than would be imposed by the laws of its parent state or country upon a like Massachusetts company if doing business to the same extent in such state or country. Savings and insurance banks and the General Insurance Guaranty Fund of Massachusetts are taxed on all funds held as part of the insurance reserve or surplus at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent less certain deductions. The entire tax is retained for the general purposes of the Commonwealth. The average annual yield is approximately $3,750,000.

STOCK TRANSFER

An excise is levied upon the transfer, sale or delivery of shares in foreign or domestic corporations and voluntary associations at a rate of 2 cents on each $100 of the par value, and 2 cents a share on shares having no par value. This tax is evidenced by stamps, and the entire revenue is retained for the general purposes of the Commonwealth. The average annual yield is approximately $400,000.

INHERITANCES

The State levies an excise upon legacies and successions and upon gifts which take effect at the death of the donor or were given in contemplation of his death. The rate of tax in these cases varies from 1 to 12 per cent, and depends upon the relationship of the parties and the amount of property involved. Liberal exemptions are provided. In the case of property so passing to members of the immediate family of the deceased, no tax is imposed unless the individual beneficiary receives more than $10,000. The exemption of more remote relatives and strangers is $1,000 each. There is also an Estate Tax in Massachusetts which becomes effective for the purpose of taxing the difference between the estate, legacy, succession and inheritance taxes paid to the several states of the United States and 80% of the Federal Estate Tax. (Acts of 1926.) This tax applies only to large estates. The proceeds of the inheritance and estate taxes are all retained by the Commonwealth for its general purposes. The annual yield varies from $6,000,000 to $14,000,000.

INCOME TAX

The Income Tax Law replaces the general property tax laws formerly in force on intangible personal property and incomes, and provides for the taxation by the Commonwealth of the income from business, investments and profits, classified by the sources of the income. It is not a general income tax law, but rather a series of special income tax laws. In order that double taxation shall be avoided, income from certain sources is exempt from taxation, e.g., from rentals of real estate, dividends on shares in Massachusetts corporations [not exempt on income received in 1933, 1934 and 1935], deposits in Massachusetts savings banks and savings departments of trust companies, interest from mortgages secured exclusively by real estate taxed in Massachusetts, and the like. The law contemplates the taxation of individuals, partnerships and fiduciaries, but does not include the taxation of corporations. The tax is laid on various taxable classes at  $1\frac{1}{2}$ , 3 and 6 per cent. A large part of the total tax is received from the 6 per cent class which is a tax on dividends and interest received. The proceeds, after a deduction for actual expenses of assessment and collection, and the sum retained under the provisions of chapter 357 of the Acts of 1933, are distributed to the cities and towns, for the purpose of reducing the tax on real estate and tangible personal property. The average yield is approximately \$19,000,000.

WINE AND MALT BEVERAGES EXCISE

(Effective from April 7, 1933, to December 5, 1933.)

The State levied on every manufacturer of wines or malt beverages and every holder of a foreign manufacturer's agency license for the sale thereof in addition to the license fees elsewhere provided in this act, an excise for the privilege enjoyed by him as such manufacturer or foreign manufacturer's agency, the sum of one dollar for each and every barrel of thirty-one gallons of wine or malt beverages sold within the Commonwealth by such manufacturer or foreign manufacturer's agency, respectively, or a proportionate amount where any other form of container is used. All moneys paid into the treasury of the Commonwealth, after the expenses of the commission have been paid are used for reimbursing cities and towns for assistance given by them to aged citizens.

ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES EXCISE

(Effective from December 5, 1933.)

The State levies on every licensed manufacturer of alcoholic beverages and every holder of a wholesaler's and importer's license for the sale thereof in addition to the license fees elsewhere provided in this chapter, and he shall be liable for and pay to the Commonwealth as an excise, for the privilege enjoyed by him as such manufacturer or wholesaler and importer, the sum of forty cents for each proof gallon of all alcoholic beverages containing in excess of twenty-four per cent of alcohol by volume, the sum of ten cents for each gallon of wine, including vermouth, and the sum of one dollar for each barrel of thirty-one gallons of malt beverages, sold within the Commonwealth, or a proportionate amount when any other form of container is used. All moneys received by the commission and by the commissioner of corporations and taxation are to be paid into the treasury of the Commonwealth and, after the expenses of the commission have been paid, used so far as necessary, for reimbursing cities and towns for assistance given by them to aged citizens.

GASOLINE TAX

An excise is levied by the state for the privilege of registering a motor vehicle as fit for use over the highways and is measured by gasoline or other fuels used in combustion type engines. The tax is paid by distributors licensed by the commissioner to manufacture, compound or import fuel. The rate, which is two cents on each gallon of fuel sold, has been increased to three cents, in effect through April 30, 1936. The receipts from this excise including penalties or forfeitures, interest, costs of suit and fines are credited to the Highway Fund. At present the tax is upward of $16,000,000 per annum.

WHY MASSACHUSETTS MUNICIPALITIES COLLECT TAXES

Cities and towns are the important units of government in Massachusetts and the entire three hundred and fifty-five trace their governmental activities to the early efforts of the Puritan and Pilgrim settlements. Each city and town finds itself a part of one of the fourteen counties comprising the Commonwealth, but as the counties must annually obtain authority from the Legislature to spend money for county functions of government and at the same time authority from the General Court to levy an assessment upon its cities and towns for support the problem of tax collection for county activities becomes a municipal and not a county one. The State administers the personal income tax but distributes the entire collection, after deducting administrative costs, to the cities and towns in proportions established by law, and also collects various forms of corporation taxes and excises which in large part are distributed to the cities and towns under statutory direction, as is the tax on national banks and trust companies, but retains for the State treasury the entire revenue from the inheritance and estate taxes, gasoline taxes, insurance taxes, savings bank taxes, stock transfer and miscellaneous taxes and excises which, always proving insufficient, requires the Legislature annually to levy a Deficiency Bill (State Tax) upon each city and town to raise in proportions established by law, thus establishing a small but certain problem of municipal tax collection for the support of the State government. Statutory authority to aid in the collection of state taxes finds its origin and support in the tax collection laws and practices employed for the collection of municipal levies. The maintenance of educational establishments, the care of the poor and the unfortunate, the development of traffic needs, the protection of life and property, correctional and health measures and the manifold collateral activities modern government has assumed, which in large part are the functions of municipal government, require if they are to be made effective the payment for them in money. Massachusetts has traditionally desired widespread and sufficient educational advantages for its people and since the early colonial days has been content to sacrifice in order to obtain for the rising generations the benefits that would tend to develop the abilities of its future citizens. With the same spirit it has adopted a similar attitude toward the many additional forms of social service present day life has demanded through government. It has learned from experience that only through prompt tax collection can it sustain its credit for capital outlays or in order to borrow in anticipation of taxes for the purpose of obtaining even a skeleton form of government or to discharge debt obligations or to pay for the actual individual benefits that government gives to the many that have translated personal costs from the private to the public budget.

Experience has indicated that there can be no easing off in the provisions of law that encourage prompt tax payments. The earliest enacted tax collection laws bear witness to the fact that human nature changes but little through the years and that while it may be well to trust to the patriotism of the citizen to pay taxes it is nevertheless the way of wisdom to provide by law the most effective provisions through compulsion to assure a flow of money to the municipal treasury. The interest of the citizen in governmental costs is likely to be more active if it is stimulated by the actual requirement of tax contribution when taxes are due and the certain knowledge that the payment cannot be postponed.

Each Massachusetts city and town through its elected or appointed assessors, annually determines the tax levy. This is the sum total to discharge the municipalities' obligation; necessary to make full payment for their debt service, interest and principal payment, legal claims and judgments, revenue deficits of previous year, county and state taxes, special assessments, and the necessary funds to discharge the obligations for local government assumed by the citizens through the annual town meetings or the budget appropriations made by the representatives of the people acting through city governments; after deducting the revenue received from the State as the proceeds of the income and corporation taxes, and the locally administered poll tax and motor excise, miscellaneous revenue, and from locally received fees and the like for governmental services rendered for which a charge is made to the person requesting such service.

The assessors having determined the local tax rate, applicable to taxable real estate and tangible personal property, commit to the locally elected or appointed tax collector a list of individuals, corporations, partnerships and others from whom taxes are to be collected with the amounts due from each together with a warrant commanding the collector to make collection and pay over to the municipal treasurer at least once each week the sum total of taxes collected during the preceding week or shorter period. The collector can not receive the commitment list for collection unless he has qualified by taking an oath of office and annually furnishing a surety company bond, in an amount proportionate to the annual commitment, insuring not only his honesty but as well his faithful performance of duty in promptly collecting taxes. The warrant from the assessors to the collector is of ancient origin, which since 1785, when the tax laws of Massachusetts took permanent shape, has continued without substantial change the form used since the earliest days. The collector is charged by the assessors in their warrant to him, acting under the law for the municipality, to "collect of the several persons named in the list herewith committed to you, and of each one, his respective proportion therein set down, of the sum total of such list . . . . And if any person shall refuse or neglect upon demand by you made and for fourteen days after such demand, to pay to you the sum he is assessed in said list, herewith committed to you with this warrant, you are to levy and collect the said sum or tax, or so much thereof as shall not be abated agreeably to law, by distress or seizure and sale of the goods or chattels of the person so assessed sufficient to satisfy and pay the amount due for such tax and interest and all fees and charges of keeping and selling the same, saving and excepting the tools or implements necessary for the trade or occupation of the said person so assessed; beasts of the plough necessary for the cultivation of his improved land; military arms, uniforms and equipments; utensils for house-keeping necessary for upholding life; and bedding and apparel necessary for the said person so assessed and his family . . . . And if you cannot find sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the person assessed whereon to make distress, you shall take the body of the said person and him commit to one of the common jails in the county in which you shall arrest him, there to remain until he shall pay said tax, interest, charges, and fees, and for an arrest, one dollar and actual travelling expenses incurred in making such arrest, or until he shall be discharged therefrom by due course of law; . . . . And you are to have and exercise all the powers conferred upon Collectors of Taxes by the laws of the Commonwealth for levying and collecting the sums assessed or otherwise."

The collector of taxes is obligated to send forthwith upon receipt of the commitment list, to each named, a tax bill, called a notice, with name, address, kind of tax and amount due clearly stated, with such other information as he may care to have placed upon the tax bill.

All local tax bills issued by the three hundred and fifty-five collectors must be dated April first, the taxing day. While taxes do not begin to bear interest until the due date as determined by law, the collector can proceed to collect taxes immediately upon the issuance of the tax bills. As a practical matter no great effort is made to collect taxes until after interest at six per cent has commenced to run. In order to fully protect the collector the law provides that: "If the assessors are of opinion that the credit of a person taxed is doubtful or that he is about to leave the Commonwealth, they may, by a special warrant, direct the collector forthwith, without demand or notice, to compel payment by distress or imprisonment, whether the tax is payable immediately or at a future day, by instalments or otherwise."

The collector is obligated to collect all real estate taxes within a year and all tangible personal property taxes within two years of October first of the year of assessment. If he fails in this he becomes liable on his surety company bond. The law provides that after sending the notice the collector can not exercise the remedies provided by law without first sending a Demand to the delinquent notifying him, "that unless your tax is paid within fourteen days from this date . . . the collector will then proceed to collect the same according to law."

The Demand having been sent the collector has the option of bringing suit, advertising real estate for sale, or issuing a warrant for the arrest of the person who has failed to pay a tax.

The power to arrest applies to all taxes locally levied and to the personal income tax administered by the state. The tax on real estate, "shall with all incidental charges and fees be a lien thereon from April first in the year of assessment. Such lien shall terminate at the expiration of two years from October first in said year, . . . ."

In the event real estate is "sold" for taxes, the collector is cleared on his warrant if the municipality takes the property as well as when some one purchases the lien and pays the delinquent tax and accrued charges to the collector. For two years subsequent to the "tax sale" the delinquent tax payer has the right to redeem his property, either by payment to the municipality or to the "tax title" buyer. If the "title" is taken by the municipality the local treasurer carries it in a "tax title account." At the expiration of two years, if redemption is not made, the municipality through its treasurer or the tax title buyer can file a petition with the Land Court and after investigation and hearing if legally entitled will receive a Land Court decree giving a good title to the property with all clouds on it removed. If the municipality gets title it can sell the property at public auction or retain it as municipally owned real estate. Massachusetts provides, through recourse to a state Board, authority for each municipality for a limited period to borrow outside the debt limit to an amount not exceeding its Tax Title Account. The tax title includes not only the tax for which the property was sold but subsequent taxes and all legal charges as well. The practice of advertising property for "sale" at an early date subsequent to the beginning of the interest running period on delinquent taxes tends to encourage the payment of taxes by those so constituted as to delay the liquidation of any obligation until the last possible moment. In the event the delinquent will not or cannot pay and no "tax title" buyer appears the municipality must take the "tax title" and aside from the privilege of borrowing against it has no opportunity of getting any money until it can foreclose at the end of two years, get good title and find a purchaser for the municipal property thus acquired. The practice of collecting delinquent taxes by suit is seldom resorted to because of the long delay before judgment and settlement. The interest rate of six per cent or twelve per cent after the com-menement of legal procedure running against delinquent taxes has practically no effect on the chronic slow tax payer, nor has the threat of "tax sale" with its resultant eight per cent interest rate and charges operated to more speedily get the necessary money into the treasury to insure the continuation of necessary municipal activities. The Massachusetts law provides ample protection against oppression either through its provisions for abatement of excessive or unwarranted taxes or upon failure to receive abatement on appeal to the Board of Tax Appeals. Provision is even provided for abatement of a tax if in the opinion of the Board of Assessors the person taxed is unable because of poverty to contribute to the public charges. The collectors who have year after year promptly pressed for the payment of taxes and by so doing created a habit of prompt tax paying on the part of the public experience but little difficulty in clearing their tax warrants at an early date. The Supreme Judicial Court has through its many years of existence upheld the collectors of taxes in their actions to collect taxes if it was clear they were careful not to step outside of the provisions of the law. The court has also held that the provisions of law to aid in the collection of delinquent taxes are cumulative and all or any one of the remedies can be used. Arrest was one of the earliest methods adopted in Massachusetts of enforcing the payment of taxes and is still one of the most effective ways for the collector to clear his warrant, to insure full compliance with his oath of office and to obtain freedom from the liability of his surety company bond. Sufficient legal safeguards are thrown around the power to arrest to prevent its use as a weapon of persecution and yet retain its full effectiveness. It is the only method employed by the State in the collection of delinquent personal income taxes and the fact that more than ninety-seven per cent of the personal income tax for each of the seventeen years that tax law has been in force has been collected within forty-five days of the due date and the funds thus obtained distributed to the cities and towns of Massachusetts on November twentieth of each year, speaks for its potent qualities.

A collector of taxes can issue his warrant to a constable of the city or town or a sheriff or deputy sheriff of the county, for service in collecting a delinquent tax but the usual practice is for the collector to appoint a deputy collector skilled in serving warrants to whom the collector issues them for uncollected taxes. These deputy collectors need not be residents of the town or city that the collector who issues the warrants represents but they must be approved by the State Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, and furnish a surety company bond running to the collector and the municipality in a sum and in the form as approved by the Commissioner. The Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation in selecting officers for the service of income and other tax warrants on State taxes uses care in selecting persons of tact and ability but also requires from them a surety company bond. This practice tends to develop a group particularly well qualified to sense where the full pressure of the law should be applied and where through the discovery of conditions other ways of adjusting the delinquent tax are to be suggested. These officers receive their compensation through fees set up under the law which charges the delinquent tax payer must pay in addition to the tax and interest. The warrant issued by the collector or the Commissioner to the officers selected to serve them follows the wording of the warrant issued by the assessors to the collector. The warrant which the deputy collector or other qualified officer receives as his authority to collect a delinquent tax provides that: ". . . you are required and directed to distrain the goods or chattels of the said person so assessed sufficient to satisfy and pay the amount due for such tax and interest, and all fees and charges of keeping and selling the same, saving and excepting the tools or implements necessary for the trade or occupation of the said person so assessed; military arms, uniforms and equipment; utensils for housekeeping necessary for upholding life; and bedding and apparel necessary for the said person so assessed and his family . . . . And if you cannot find sufficient goods and chattels belonging to the person assessed, whereon to make distress, you shall take the body of the said person and him commit to one of the common jails in the county in which you shall arrest him, there to remain until he shall pay said tax, interest, charges, and fees, and for an arrest, one dollar and actual traveling expenses, incurred in making such arrest; . . . ." This procedure requires that before making an arrest the officer must inquire of the delinquent tax payer if he has any "goods or chattels . . . sufficient to satisfy and pay the amount due," and if he has the officer is required to distrain such "goods and chattels" and "to keep at the cost and charge of the owner for four days at least and within seven days after the seizure to sell the same at public auction for the payment of the said amount due," and, "if said distress shall be sold for more than the said amount due," he "shall return the surplus to the owner of such goods or chattels upon demand, with an account in writing of the sale and charges." In the event the arrest is made the arresting officer may under the authority of his warrant, at his "discretion allow such person to go free for a period not exceeding fourteen days after said service, at which time if said person does not pay his tax with all fees and charges due thereon . . . you shall then arrest said person on this warrant and commit to jail as aforesaid." When the person is jailed, the jailer is prevented from releasing the delinquent tax payer until he has paid to the jailer the amount shown on the copy of the warrant, which is handed the keeper of the jail with the person arrested, has taken a poor debtor's oath or in some other way released from custody. A small sum is deposited as a requirement for board but the county must stand the charges for lodging unless the delinquent tax payer finds himself able to make full payment and obtain complete release.

The courts have universally held for the collectors in cases where delinquent tax payers have raised the question of false arrest if the collector produced his warrant and showed that the tax was not paid. The law provides that a delinquent tax payer, "shall not be committed to jail for the non payment of a tax, nor shall a person so committed be further detained therein, if he gives to the collector . . . a bond running to the collector sufficient in amount to cover the amount of the tax and all interest and other charges and fees which are or may become due thereon . . .," the surety bond to run for thirty days or "such further time as the collector may fix," and "a person shall not be committed . . . until he has been given a reasonable time to procure such a bond." In practice the collector issues his warrant to a deputy collector for the arrest of a delinquent tax payer, and the deputy as an initial step sends a card or letter to the delinquent saying he has a warrant for his arrest and stating the amount that can be paid in full settlement of the tax and interest and the deputy collector's fees which under the law he can at that point collect from the delinquent. The next step is to contact the delinquent and request if he has any goods that can be distrained and if not to indicate arrest allowing if the delinquent is so inclined a period within which the money may be paid to the officer serving a warrant. This payment may be paid in installments, or the officer may allow the delinquent a few days within which to gather funds to satisfy the warrant. If payment is not made the delinquent is taken to a common jail for commitment. It usually transpires that when a delinquent finds he must pay he can either settle with the officer by payments in installments or borrow the money from a friend. A few arrests in a community become known and voluntary payments are made by delinquents before the officer reaches them. It has been strikingly demonstrated over and over again that when determination is shown delinquency vanishes and where the determination is sustained a municipality chronically a slow tax paying unit becomes tax paying conscious, quickly re-establishes its credit, and develops a much higher standard of governmental life. The Massachusetts law contemplates certain cases where through poverty warrants should not be served and relief is to be afforded through abatement or payment by installments but tax paying ability is assumed by all who have taxable property and local government being of greatest importance contemplates no superior demand over the tax payer's obligation to pay his taxes and if not paid contemplates rigid compulsion to make him.

The power to arrest a delinquent taxpayer tends to steady the officer making service and not only do they refrain from arresting where there is a poor delinquent taxpayer without funds and with six or eight children to support but cases are known where they have discovered such destitution as to prompt them to leave some of their own money for immediate needs of the family and in calling to the attention of the proper officials as to the situation found afforded relief not only as to taxes but as to actual living conditions. Quite frequently, however, the officer making service discovers one actually with ample funds but resisting to the last ditch the payment of a tax properly payable. This may in one case be due to the fact that the person is by design one who never pays any bill until forced or one who feels the interest and penalty payments accruing on the delinquent tax is actually less of a charge for the use of the principal than would be true if he was obliged to borrow in open market, where perhaps his credit was none too good. Some there are who believe taxes should be paid only when the delinquent feels they should be paid, if ever, and not when the law requires payment. In collecting personal income taxes in the early days of the law a rather typical attitude was experienced in the collection of taxes on dividends from stock held by a group of individual employees who by virtue of the management feeling it highly desirable had required them to own stock in the enterprise. The taxes in these cases, numbering two hundred or more, were not large in amount but the group, feeling they should not be called upon to pay taxes, announced that they would not pay the taxes under any circumstances. They happened to live in a municipality where the collector was lax and infrequently used the remedy of arrest to collect delinquent taxes. An officer skilled in handling warrants for the arrest of delinquent tax payers and sizable enough to handle industrial operators of this kind visited the plant with several hundred warrants made out for the arrest of each of the persons who refused payment. They resisted and hurled epithets at him apparently with the thought of making it so uncomfortable that he would retreat before the onslaught of their abuse. Selecting one who seemed to be a ringleader, the officer placed him under arrest and having an assistant with him forcibly carried him to a waiting automobile and started for the jail. When the recalcitrant leader of the delinquent tax group saw the jail and found himself being turned over to the keeper, he turned to the officer and said, "You apparently mean business." The officer indicated that he did and that all of the others in his group would be promptly arrested in the event they did not make payment when he returned to the plant. The arrested leader thereupon took off a money belt in which there was nearly $1500 in money and paid the twelve odd dollars that was due for the tax and the officer's charges to the arresting officer. Upon being assured that he was free, he thereupon changed his attitude completely and advised the officer with the warrants that he would go back with him to the plant and as he had to pay compel the other two hundred odd to also make payment. Upon returning to the plant with the officer he told the group who were again brought together that they must pay and told it to them in their native language sufficiently effective so that the officer instead of being obligated to serve some two hundred odd warrants was able to collect from each delinquent not only the tax and penalties but his fees for service, making it not only a successful conclusion for the State but an interesting and profitable one for the officer.

Even those of large means sometimes refuse to pay as was exemplified by a very wealthy person who refused absolutely to pay, and yet when threatened with arrest by an officer at his summer home not only willingly paid a very heavy tax but in addition gave the officer something over $400 which represented his fees in the collection of this delinquent tax, thus not only indicating that when really brought to the point of decision, he was not nearly as good a resistant against the law as he anticipated, and also being somewhat generous was willing to give the officer a very large fee for the service of what was as to amount an exceptionally large warrant. The fees that an officer can receive for his own use from the delinquent tax payer while controlled by law are of necessity larger in some cases than others.

The experiences of all the officers in the serving of tax delinquent warrants are quite similar, and all bad traits of human nature are very likely to be disclosed when there is an attempt forcibly to get the taxes which are rightly due to the taxing jurisdiction. The officer, knowing that there is ample law to protect the individual against any injustices, proceeds out of the wisdom that has been given him through experience to collect from those whom he can very readily size up as those who can and will not pay the taxes that are rightly due from them.

The law provides that the collector can demand any funds due a tax payer for materials or service furnished the municipality in settlement of a delinquent tax and the municipal treasurer must make such payment upon the collector's order. While Massachusetts laws are being gradually adjusted to permit less borrowing in anticipation of taxes, there is still the requirement of prompt and complete collection of municipal taxes in order to create and sustain a credit standing that will permit borrowings when needed at low rates of interest. There is also the urge to collect taxes in order to save the tax payer the expense of not only carrying the charge for social service but in addition interest on money hired to maintain governmental activity. The personal responsibility of the collector is another urge because without a good tax collection record, the collector finds no surety company willing to bond him thus preventing him from holding the office to which he has been elected or appointed. The collectors of Massachusetts in conjunction with the municipal treasurers, who are frequently also collectors, have an association which holds monthly meetings. At these meetings questions as to law, practice and procedure are asked and the answers given by the State taxing officials are mimeographed and forwarded to each collector in the three hundred and fifty-five cities and towns thus giving those unable to attend the questions and answers of assistance to them in their work. At these meetings as well as the state and county meetings to which come the assessors and collectors new legislation, recent court decisions and other pertinent subject matters are made the subject of an address by the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation. This form of contact together with the very frequent direct communication by circular letter of important matters by the Commissioner to all local collectors tends to create and maintain a spirit of cooperation and a high degree of uniformity and effectiveness in municipal tax collections in Massachusetts. The Commissioner has within his department a division exclusively devoted to local taxation matters and through this arm of service uses four supervisors who visit some municipal tax officials, both assessors and collectors, every day and give particular attention to collectors who are slow or likely to act improperly in tax collecting procedure.

The practice of publishing in the newspapers at the quarterly period of reporting the then uncollected municipal taxes has had a tendency to stimulate the collectors with poor showings to improve and those with good showings to sustain their own record.

The Massachusetts municipalities collect taxes because the money is needed to maintain the local governments which are still very near to the hearts of the people and because traditionally the people have accustomed themselves to pay taxes and failure to collect destroys the credit of the municipality and makes it impossible for a collector to hold his position. The payment of taxes is expected both by the tax payer and the municipality. Such an attitude results in no delinquency and government at a cost for service only, to which has not been added a charge on the taxpayer to provide the funds to fill the hole caused by uncollected taxes which by the very act of delay become uncollectible. Massachusetts collects taxes because it desires to pay its bills. It knows no other way to pay bills than to collect taxes.

STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES

Statement of Principles of the New England State Tax Officials

Presented at the Ninth New England Conference at the Hotel Statler November 24, 1933 by Henry F. Long

Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation

The New England State Tax Officials welcome this opportunity to express complete approval of the leadership developed and consistently pursued by the New England Council in constantly pressing for an aroused citizenship which understandingly will adapt the needs of government and the cost thereof to the present ability of the people to contribute.

The statement of principles subscribed by the heads of all departments of state taxation in New England in the fall of 1931, reaffirmed and somewhat amplified by the statement in the fall of 1932, seems so comprehensive in scope as to call for little other than further reaffirmation. Although elaboration of a theory is possible and may be quite limitless, nevertheless it is hardly the province of a composite expression of this character to enter into a detailed discussion of ways and means which can only result in an invasion of the realm of divergent viewpoints.

Subsequent experience appears to have demonstrated the soundness of the principles heretofore expressed. We note with satisfaction the trend toward increasing tax consciousness and the growing concern over the employment of identical tax bases by a plurality of governmental agencies, the multiplicity of overlapping taxing jurisdictions and the constantly increasing burdens upon real estate. Such concern is at least some evidence of a healthy awakening which should in time secure to the respective units of government, each without encroachment upon the other, those sources of revenue naturally belonging to each and best fitted to each, and develop a better understanding of governmental limitations as to expenditures. It should also be a source of satisfaction to the residents of New England that this section of the country has already accomplished considerable in the matter of the reduction of expenditures by municipalities and that in the main New England is on a far sounder basis with reference to town and city finances than is true in other parts of the country.

It is believed that we should voice a warning against the danger of carrying too far so-called relief measures. Not only is there menace to our financial structure in encouraging people to believe that they may look upon the government as a means of support, but a still greater menace in character forming habit which such a practice tends to inculcate.

It appears evident to us that until real estate is restored to its essential place as the most attractive class of property to own, both from the point of view of investment and from the point of view of permanent ownership, there can be no restoration of a properly correlated tax structure nor can there be until then an adequate restoration of ability to contribute to the costs of government by the many depositories of the people's money such as institutions for savings and insurance companies which have found security in the past in investments in or secured by land and buildings visible to all and reflecting sensitively the values of community development. The return of this class of property to its normal place in our structure of value will be retarded, if indeed not rendered altogether impossible, by continued drains resulting from the expansion and institution and support of new governmental activities, which demand ever-increasing tax contributions from owners of real estate, — a demand to which already many are impotent to respond.

To the extent that demands for governmental service continue to increase, it would appear that they must be satisfied through the broadening of the tax base so far as such expansion of governmental activities cannot fairly be avoided. Such an undertaking should be entered upon with sedulous regard for both of those theories of taxation commonly referred to as the benefit theory and the ability to pay theory. Neither can be wholly substituted for the other and each must be supplementary to the other.

The problem of taxation remains, however, to be largely a problem of expenditures. The problem of expenditures remains as the problem growing out of expressed desires for governmental activities expensive in character which the small percentage of those paying direct taxes are at least during periods of depression incapable of carrying.

THE TAX SITUATION

The year 1933 saw the cities and towns of Massachusetts sorely pressed to meet the obligations of government. There was a very decided movement on the part of many people to join forces in an attempt to reduce the cost of government and many ideas were advanced as to how control could be exercised over governmental costs.

Massachusetts, like every state in the Union, has always used the general property tax which in the last analysis means the real estate tax to absorb all of the demands made upon government not cared for by other revenues. The personal income tax, which is a main source of revenue for the cities and towns of Massachusetts, was substantially shrunk in 1933 as against revenue received in the year 1930 and previously. The receipts from the foreign and domestic business corporation taxes, five-sixths of which is distributed to the cities and towns of the Commonwealth, likewise took a very decided slump. As the foreign and domestic business corporation tax is measured in part by income it was a natural result that the income feature of the tax, because of the years of the depression, yielded practically nothing to be distributed to the cities and towns. What little there was that came from the business tax was that expressed by real estate, tangible personal property and assets carried which were not locally assessable and representing the corporate excess feature of the business corporation tax. The bank taxes yielded practically nothing as profit making by the banks had practically ceased in 1933. The stock transfer tax, because of lack of trading, shrunk very severely. The insurance tax maintained its levels fairly well but did not respond with an increase of revenue which had been true in previous years. The savings bank tax began to sag in 1933 as more and more real estate properties were taken by the savings banks and savings departments of trust companies. The gasoline tax maintained the best level of any tax.

Cities and towns, however, were very earnest in their attempts to reduce the cost of government but the tremendous demands for public welfare activities and unemployment relief were so pronounced that the savings made in one direction operated only to reduce slightly the load which ultimately real estate had to bear. The Commonwealth faced with a budget which could not be materially reduced was obligated to take a portion of the receipts of the gasoline tax for the purpose of relieving the "State Tax" on the municipalities. The municipalities spending the major portion of the money in Massachusetts found that the receipts heretofore coming from the state with an increased state tax lessened only by use of gasoline tax revenue placed them in a position where it was necessary to lay a very heavy tax on real estate in order to meet the demand.

The tangible personal property tax represented in large part by a tax on the machinery of corporations lessened as machinery was moved from the Commonwealth or ceased to have the value that would promise much of a yield. The municipalities undertook by reduction of wages and by other means like the postponement of necessary repairs and things of that nature to lessen the tax load but the amount to be carried after deductions had been made was so great that real estate was threatened with very serious consequences in 1933. The Legislature of 1933 recognizing the situation provided a new method of borrowing, which seemed to be better than to spread the existing provision of municipal law permitting borrowings of  $2\frac{1}{2}\%$  by cities on three years' valuation preceeding the time of borrowing and 3% for towns, by permitting the community to borrow, on the theory that public welfare relief was the main cause of the distress of the communities, against tax titles and against revenue from an income tax on dividends from domestic corporations which was provided by the passage of Chapter 307 of the Acts of 1933. Chapter 49 of the Acts of 1933 permitted borrowing against tax titles, with the approval of the Emergency Finance Board, a board created by the 1933 Legislature to operate in respect to federal projects.

In Massachusetts uncollected taxes on real estate can, if they are not collected, be secured by a continuation of the lien which is impressed on the taxing day by extending it for a two-year period under a so-called tax sale, the recording of the deed and setting up on the Treasurer's book of a tax title account. These tax titles can be redeemed, but in the event that they are not the Treasurer of a municipality proceeds to foreclose at the expiration of the redemption period. These tax titles carried as an asset are lessened each year by redemption proceedings. It seemed advisable to the 1933 General Court to grant authority to borrow against these in order to relieve the 1933 tax levy. Many communities availed themselves of this opportunity.

The 1933 Legislature provided that all income received in the form of dividends in 1933, 1934 and 1935 from domestic business corporations should be subject to a tax. The estimate of this yield was sufficient to warrant the borrowing of $30,000,000 which was to be made available to the cities and towns of Massachusetts to reduce their tax rates. A substantial number of them borrowed in anticipation of this revenue. As a matter of record it is to be noted that the following municipalities borrowed from the Commonwealth in the following amounts on the following dates the sum of $6,418,080 against tax title accounts with approval of the Emergency Finance Board established by Chapter 49 of the Acts of 1933 and subsequently mentioned in Chapter 366.

In addition to these borrowings some communities being so authorized borrowed other than from the Commonwealth and of these borrowings no record is here given. The provision of the statute was that if borrowing from the Commonwealth was resorted to with the approval of the Emergency Finance Board then each municipality must submit itself in subsequent years to the Emergency Finance Board's approval or disapproval of appropriations that might be made in excess of those made in previous years.

Under the authority of Chapter 307 of the Acts of 1933 the following communities borrowed $12,217,053.23.

(It may be noted that Chapter 335 of the Acts of 1934 extended the provision of Chapter 307 of the Acts of 1933.)

In connection with the relief from taxation and the borrowings permitted under Chapter 49 and Chapter 307 the amount of federal money furnished to assist the towns in unemployment relief must be considered because it operated to reduce the direct tax.

A partial list of borrowings shown by the following table was approved by Emergency Finance Board and sent to Federal Advisory Board for approval.

The municipalities with the aid of the borrowed money and with every effort expended to reduce the cost of local government succeeded in the establishment of reasonable tax rates in view of the strained conditions for 1933. Tables which are to be found further on in this report will indicate the extent to which some communities were obligated to go. The municipalities being certain to have a rate that definitely carried the certainty of obtaining necessary funds did not face revenue deficits for 1934. In many instances municipalities had been able to accumulate a reserve which became available in 1933 as "available funds" or "free cash" which was used by direct vote of the city or town through the assessors for reduction of the direct tax on real estate.

It was found in 1933, however, that a large amount of property formerly in the hands of individuals had moved through foreclosure and other processes into the hands of savings institutions, insurance companies and corporate bodies which necessitated a tax directly on these instead of the occupant. The valuation of real estate in Massachusetts kept up fairly well in 1933 and it is of importance to record that during the five years of depression something rising $1,100,000,000 was paid in cash through the real estate tax to forward the municipal activities. In Massachusetts during the year 1933 no activity of government was abandoned although many things which would ordinarily have taken some of the current tax dollar were postponed with the thought that the day might arrive when the community would be in a better position to discharge the requirement.

The tax situation generally at the close of 1933 indicated that there was but little if any hope for an increased income or corporation tax in 1934 other than that which would flow because of the requirement that the holders of dividends from domestic business corporations should pay the income tax. There was an indication at the end of 1933 that while the municipalities had done well for that year there was more than an even prospect that the demand for relief would be substantial in 1934 and would require a high tax rate unless the Federal Government was in a position to assume much of the burden through federal aid. The Federal Government had refunded to Massachusetts in 1933 a portion of the relief cost which it had been agreed was to act as a direct distribution to the cities and towns and used for the reduction of the direct tax in 1933. This distribution was based on a table found in another part of this report representing the 1929 expenditures for relief as against those of 1932, which formed the base of Federal Emergency Relief distributions.

The Legislature of Massachusetts did not look with favor upon proposals to add additional tax revenue to assist the state or its political subdivisions but did temporarily take care of the situation by the passage of the acts heretofore mentioned. The retail sales tax proposal received but little support and no other major tax proposal was advanced for consideration by the General Court. There was the apparent feeling that if the state and its political subdivisions could get along for a while longer it would not be advisable to lay any new tax as there seemed to be general opposition on the part of the press and the people.

The year 1933 closed, however, with great uncertainty as to possibilities of revenue for the future but with some thought that the period when the state was likely to borrow itself out of debt had passed and that either a sharp reduction in the operations or cost of government would occur or some other means of increasing the revenue of the Commonwealth and its political subdivisions be devised. The revenues for the State's own budget aside from the gasoline tax are comparatively small because the insurance tax, the savings bank tax and the inheritance tax, main sources of revenue for the Commonwealth, have materially shrunk, particularly in respect to the inheritance tax which is an excise measured by the value of property passing in estates. The local communities have suffered some loss in their motor vehicle excise tax and their tangible personal property tax so that there remains at the end of the year so far as the Commonwealth is concerned reasonable certainty of obtaining a substantial amount of money from the gasoline tax which is the only tax which has stood the strain of the depression, from the insurance tax which in part is due to automobiles and the Massachusetts requirement for compulsory insurance, and the real estate tax, which even in the face of shrinking values and despite the increased rates has tended to furnish revenues necessary to support the municipality. The question as to whether or not real estate can continue in the future to give such enormous sums to the support of government is the troublesome thing facing Massachusetts for the years to come.

It can be said that Massachusetts has weathered the year 1933 with a reasonable amount of its ability left but as to the future much will depend upon the strain of the depression as to what the outcome ultimately will be.

MISCELLANEOUS

The special tax at one dollar on each male above the age of twenty to provide money for old age assistance has been administered without difficulty.

The State laying a direct tax on the municipalities and they obtaining the money by direct taxation has netted less than half the sum needed for Old Age Assistance. No proposal was made in 1932 for finding the funds because the one dollar head tax was continued in 1932, but ceases with 1933, being abandoned because the legislature provided revenue from the granting of licenses and the excise on the sales of wines and malt beverages that would be sufficient to meet the State's requirement of refunding to the municipalities one-third of the cost of Old Age Assistance.

The Motor Excise has continued to be a good revenue producer for the cities and towns but has consistently shrunk each year in amount of yield.

The Gasoline Excise was increased to three cents from May 1, 1931, to April 30, 1933, one-half the proceeds thus added being given the cities and towns to use as an estimated receipt to apply against the appropriation made for highways. In 1932 the entire additional amount is given the municipalities and the period of the three cent excise extended to April 30, 1936.

Under various Division headings additional information will be found respecting the tax situation.

The following items are ones that have been included year after year in the report and will be helpful by way of comparisons with previous reports, and are more or less descriptive of this brief outline of the taxation situation in Massachusetts.

PUBLIC BEQUEST FUND

Massachusetts has created an opportunity for gifts and bequests to a State controlled Public Bequest Fund. The income is to be used to aid male citizens of this State above the age of 65 and female citizens above the age of 60, who, in the opinion of the Massachusetts Public Bequest Commission, are entitled to such benefit. In drawing a will or creating a trust (or during lifetime by gift) you may perpetuate your benevolence by adding to this fund, which is held in the custody of the State Treasurer and administered without deduction for expenses. The income is to be devoted exclusively to the object specifically set forth in General Laws, Chapter 6, Sections 28A to 28E, as amended. The Public Bequest Commission consists of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, the State Treasurer and the Commissioner of State Aid and Pensions.

[CHAP. 313]

AN ACT INCREASING THE FUNDS AVAILABLE TO MEET LOANS TO CITIES AND TOWNS ON ACCOUNT OF TAX TITLES HELD BY THEM.

Whereas, The deferred operation of this act would tend to defeat its purpose, therefore it is hereby declared to be an emergency law, necessary for the immediate preservation of the public convenience.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

Section five of chapter forty-nine of the acts of nineteen hundred and thirty-three is hereby amended by striking out in line five the word "ten" and inserting in place thereof the word: — sixteen, — so as to read as follows: — Section 5. The state treasurer, with the approval of the governor and council, may borrow from time to time, on the credit of the commonwealth, such sums as may be necessary to provide funds for loans to municipalities as aforesaid, but not exceeding sixteen million dollars, and may issue and renew notes of the commonwealth therefor, bearing interest payable at such times and at such rate as shall be fixed by the state treasurer, with the approval of the governor and council. Such notes shall be issued for such maximum term of years as the governor may recommend to the general court in accordance with section three of Article LXII of the amendments to the constitution of the commonwealth, but such notes, whether original or renewal, shall be payable not later than November thirtieth, nineteen hundred and thirty-nine. All notes issued under this section shall be signed by the state treasurer, approved by the governor and countersigned by the comptroller.

Approved June 23, 1934.

NATIONAL BANK TAXATION

The provisions of Section 5219 of the United States Revised Statutes remain the same in respect to bank taxation as heretofore, as no change was made in 1933-1934 Congressional Sessions. A great deal of litigation is found in many of the States of the Union and revenue generally has still shown decline in most of the States from bank taxation.

The Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives at Washington reported an amendment which did not succeed in getting through the House worded as follows:—

SEC. 5219. The legislature of each State may determine and direct the manner and place of taxing national banking associations located within its limits upon their real and personal property and also upon their shares: Provided, That in lieu of such tax upon the shares, the legislature may impose either a tax upon the net income of such associations or an excise tax measured by net income received by them from all sources: Provided further, That such taxation shall not be at greater rates than are imposed, respectively, upon the real and personal property or shares or income of, or by way of excise (or franchise) tax upon, State banks: And provided further, That a State which imposes a tax on the net income of individuals or corporations, or an excise or a franchise tax on corporations measured by their net income, may also include in such income of individuals or corporations the dividends from national banking associations located in the State, but only if dividends from the State banks of such State are similarly included; and may also tax dividends from such associations located without the State, but in such case at no higher rate than is imposed on the dividends from foreign corporations. As herein used the words "State banks" shall mean and include all persons and corporations engaged primarily in the business of commercial banking; and the word "shares" in its application to individuals engaged primarily in the business of commercial banking shall mean the capital and surplus of such business, and the word "dividends" shall in such case mean the distributed profits therefrom.

The Finance Committee of the Senate filed a report which died in the Senate before any action was taken on it which provided as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That subdivision (b) of paragraph 1 of section 5219 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(b) In the case of a tax on said shares, no tax burden shall be imposed in any taxing district upon said shares greater than the average burden imposed in that district on other taxable intangible personal property therein."

SEC. 2. Such section 5219 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"5. As a further condition upon the exercise of the permission for the State taxation of national banking associations, their net income, shares, or dividends thereon, State banks or trust companies which are members of a Federal Reserve bank shall not be taxed at a greater rate than national banking associations, their net income, shares, or dividends thereon are taxed by the taxing State as provided by this section."

It appearing that a deadlock exists in the Congress, the possibilities of changes in the base for national bank taxation are slight, although banking or revenue exigencies may bring about a change in the enabling act.

Massachusetts is in no position to enact any new national bank taxation law until there is a change in the Congressional authority or some different method can be devised of taxing competing money.

LOCAL TAXATION

The total value as found by local assessors for the 1933 local assessment on taxable real estate and tangible personal property amounted to $6,741,559,304. The comparative amount for 1932 is $7,001,697,802, and for 1931, $7,181,358,958. This shows a loss in 1933 of $260,138,498 in local taxable values. The real estate subject to 1933 local assessment shows an assessed value of $6,040,797,955 as against the 1932 value of $6,255,519,862. The land shows a valuation of $2,091,950,084 as against the 1932 value of $2,178,915,584, and buildings a valuation of $3,948,847,871 as against the 1932 value of $4,076,604,278. It is unlikely that the 1930 value of $7,233,539,128 will be again reached for many years.

Of the total value found by the local assessors for taxable tangible personal property amounting to $700,761,349 as against the 1932 value of $746,177,940, the assessed value of stock in trade shows $62,512,407 as against the 1932 value of $71,825,041; taxable machinery shows a value of $474,195,048 as against a 1932 value of $508,417,359; the 1933 value of livestock shows $11,675,817, and all of the many other kinds of taxable tangible personal property show a total 1933 value of $152,378,077. The total excise value found in the motor excise tax for 1933 approximates $212,093,824 as against the 1932 value of $240,317,775.

As compared with 1932 the $2 poll taxpayers increased in number from 1,269,517 to 1,274,772 and the number of "Head Taxes" assessed under Chapter 398 of the Acts of 1931 ("imposing an old age assistance tax on male inhabitants . . .") which was in operation for the first time in 1931 was 1,289,741 in 1932 and in 1933, 1,294,286 at $1 each; the personal property tax decreased from $25,229,354 in 1932 to $22,333,398, and the real estate tax decreased from $210,814,418 to $190,751,981. The total direct local tax of $238,582,806 in 1932 (the highest levy ever made on polls and property) decreased in 1933 to $215,634,923 and includes poll taxes in the sum of $2,549,544 or about 2% of the total, tangible personal property taxes in the sum of $22,333,398 or about 10% of the total and real estate taxes in the sum of $190,751,981, being about 88% of the total. For this partially complete picture there should be considered in addition to these local direct taxes the revenue of over $5,287,000 the cities and towns received from the locally assessed motor excise and about $12,366,000 from the personal income tax, making a direct tax in 1933 for city and town purposes of over $233,287,923 as against the comparative 1932 amount of $263,265,806, which was the largest direct tax ever levied for city and town purposes in the history of Massachusetts. The total appropriations made by municipalities in 1933 was $266,368,627 as against $276,867,537 in 1932, some of which comes from other than direct taxes. Using the total assessed property value (exclusive of motor vehicles which are taxed at a uniform rate for all cities and towns) of $6,741,559,304, a tax rate in 1933 of $31.61 per $1,000 would be required to raise the $213,085,379 assessed locally as against a similarly computed rate of $33.71 in 1932. Comparing 1932 with 1933, there were assessed by the local assessors, 42,913 horses in 1932 as against 39,584 in 1933; 131,491 cows as against 126,977; 10,024 sheep as against 10,081; 36,431 neat cattle as against 34,124; 35,639 swine as against 29,633; 774,344 dwelling houses as against 777,591, an increase of 3,247; 4,417,823 acres of land as against 4,404,886, a loss of 12,937 acres, possibly going into exempted property, and 1,832,008 fowls as against 1,907,890.

The number of recorded local direct property taxpayers increased from 908,295 in 1932 to 945,607 in 1933. In all the foregoing, the figures presented include both the April assessments and the December "omitted assessments."

These taxpayers paid at different local tax rates ranging from $9.00 per $1,000 of value in the town of Monroe, to $55.00 per $1,000 of value in the town of Holland. Three towns showed rates of from $9.00 to $12.50; thirteen towns, rates from $16.60 to $19.60; one city and sixty-two towns, rates from $20.00 to $24.80; four cities and eighty towns, rates from $25.00 to $29.70; twenty-two cities and ninety-two towns, rates from $30.00 to $34.90; ten cities and forty-six towns, rates from $35.00 to $39.60; two cities and thirteen towns, rates from $40.00 to $44.00; seven towns, rates from $45.00 to $55.00.

GOVERNMENTAL COSTS

For the year ending November 30, 1933, there was levied as taxes upon the real estate, tangible personal and other property located within Massachusetts the following sums: As a state tax, $9,000,000; as a county tax, $10,426,274; as a direct tax for the support of municipal activities in the cities and towns, $198,948,006, $2,549,544 assessed as a poll tax of $2 on each male inhabitant twenty years of age or over and also $1,294,286 under the provisions of Chapter 398 of the Acts of 1931 for old age assistance $1 assessed on each male inhabitant twenty years of age or over — a total of $222,218,110, being the total amount assessed by the cities and towns, including the amount assessed on motor vehicles under General Laws, Chapter 60A (Chapter 379 of 1928); first effective in 1929; in the sum of $5,287,438 to meet with other revenue a total appropriation charge of $266,368,627 in 1933 in the cities and towns. This local tax was levied at the varying tax rates of the several cities and towns, which ranged from the lowest, $9.00 per $1,000, to the highest $55 per $1,000, the average rate being $30.02. The total valuation of the real estate and tangible personal property upon which this tax was levied was $6,953,653,128. (This amount includes motor vehicles.)

The Commonwealth assessed upon corporations, insurance companies, national banks, trust companies, savings banks, legacies and successions, stock transfers, incomes, gasoline, and upon miscellaneous the sum of $55,052,970.04; $20,122,123.13 of which was distributed to the cities and towns and the balance retained for the general purposes of the Commonwealth.

To these sums are also to be added approximately $52,333,032, received by the counties, cities and towns from fines, fees and miscellaneous sources; and about $11,724,952 in revenue received by the Commonwealth.

These items combined make a total of $341,329,064.04.

The contribution made in the form of taxation by the inhabitants of Massachusetts to the support of the government of the United States must not be forgotten. This sum for the year ending June 30, 1933 was not less than $49,388,570.82, making a total direct contribution for government for the year 1933 by the 4,326,912 (estimated) inhabitants of this Commonwealth of approximately $390,717,634.86 or a per capita of $90.29.

STATISTICAL

There are about 24,511 business corporations, 22,248 of which are domestic, and 2,263 registered foreign business corporations subject to taxation. A franchise tax return was received on each of the 234 public service corporations, and 139 were subjected to a tax assessment; 44 trust companies and 62 national banks were taxed on income. Under the Income Tax Law 214,774 returns were assessable. In the collection of the inheritance tax 14,865 estates were dealt with. The insurance tax was assessed upon 26 foreign life companies, 350 fire and marine companies of which 53 were Massachusetts companies, 150 miscellaneous companies of which 36 were Massachusetts companies, the insurance departments of 22 savings banks, and the General Insurance Guaranty Fund of Massachusetts. A tax was assessed against 193 savings banks and 67 savings departments of trust companies. 146 national banks were subject to tax.

For the year ending November 30, 1933, 3,049 corporations of all classes were organized, 2,498 of which were domestic business corporations. About 2,208 domestic business corporations were dissolved and about 16 corporations of other classes.

During the year ending November 30, 1933, the accounts of 197 cities and towns have been audited; the standard system of accounts recommended to be installed is now in use in 213 cities and towns (a gain of 4) and assistance rendered under Sec. 37 of Chapter 44 to 13 cities and towns. 4,161 town and district notes have been certified representing indebtedness amounting to $49,425,102.88.

The net direct debt of the State on November 30, 1933, was $10,518,415.30 and the net funded debt of all the counties except Suffolk on December 31, 1933 was $7,634,036.82; Suffolk Co., $138,172,661.03. The net funded debt of the cities and towns on December 31, 1933 was $316,745,605.18.

STATISTICAL TABLES

The tables relating to Sources of Tax Revenue, Massachusetts Wealth, Tax Rates and Valuations, County tax, State tax, County Aggregates of the Polls and Property tax, Business Corporation tax, Bank taxes, Public Service Corporation taxes, Income taxes, the Gasoline tax, Direct Local taxes, Treasurers' and Collectors' Bonds, Municipal Appropriations and Receipts, Uncollected taxes, Tax Titles, Municipal Indebtedness and Revenue and Loans appear under appropriate headings.

Table A is a list of assessments by the department during the year; Tables B and BB relate to the collection of taxes; and Table C deals with all taxes and revenue both state and local with which the department has to do. Three tables relate to the distribution of taxes to the cities and towns. A tabulation relating to the classes and the value of the property exempted from taxation in the cities and towns under the first fifteen clauses of Section 5 of Chapter 59 of the General Laws as amended relating to local taxation, also includes the valuations of property of the United States, property of the Commonwealth and of the cities, towns and counties, which is put to a public use. A transcript of the returns filed with the assessors of cities and towns relating to the classes of property owned by Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and other miscellaneous institutions claiming exemption from local taxation, also contains a statement as to income and disbursements by these organizations.

EXEMPTION FROM LOCAL TAXATION

The table which has appeared as a part of this report since 1923, differs somewhat from the similar table in reports previous to 1923, by reason of the fact that Section 51 of Chapter 59 of the General Laws as amended by Chapter 421 of the Acts of 1923 requires of assessors that more information be entered upon the valuation lists, respecting property which is exempted from local taxation, than in former years.

In making return to the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, assessors are instructed to report only the classes of property which are subject to tax under Chapter 59 of the General Laws, while in former years the figures included certain intangible personal property, the taxation of which is provided for by Chapter 62 of the General Laws, upon the income therefrom.

This explanation is to be borne in mind in a comparison of the figures with those of years prior to 1923.

$1,502,372,386, or $9,558,654 above the amount reported as exempted in 1932, is the total valuation, as reported by the assessors, of the property exempted from taxation, and it is to be borne in mind that assessors, being unaccustomed to revaluing exempted property each year, may, in some instances, not have estimated it at its full value.

The division of this total is into the first fifteen clauses of Section 5 of Chapter 59, and Property put to a Public Use, and is the exempted property covered by the above figures, and as shown in detail in Table N further on in this report.

AUDIT GAINS

During the year ending November 30, 1933, the following amounts have accrued by reason of departmental audits of tax returns and field audits:

|                                   |              |
|-----------------------------------|--------------|
| Income . . . . .                  | $251,812.57 |
| Business . . . . .                | 211,067.96   |
| Gasoline . . . . .                | 26,036.36    |
| Wine and Malt Beverages . . . . . | 8,036.23     |

CHARTS

The charts that follow correctly state the tax laws as of January 1, 1934, except as is noted below.

"Property Taxation in Massachusetts"

Motor Vehicles if registered, subject to excise. Beginning in 1929 registered motor vehicles are no longer included in the property tax, but are subject to the Motor Vehicle Excise, Chapter 379 of the Acts of 1928, which created Chapter 60A of the General Laws amended by Chapter 244, Acts of 1930.

Ships and vessels engaged in commercial fishing are now classified with those in the interstate and foreign carrying trade. Fourth footnote: There shall be added the following: If owned by or held in trust for a city or town, taxable to occupant lessee or person in possession if used for other than a public purpose.

To household furniture in the place of "domicile" only (Section 5, Clause 20, Chapter 59, General Laws) there is added: Effects, jewelry, plate, works of art, musical instruments, radios, garage or stable accessories and boats, fishing gear and nets not exceeding $1,000 in value. Chapter 75, Acts of 1931.

Money in hand exempt (Section 5, Clause 20, Chapter 59, General Laws, as amended by Chapter 75, Acts of 1931).

Exemption of widows, minors and aged (Column No. 16 in table) $2,000 instead of $1,000. Chapter 247, Acts of 1930.

Veterans' exemption (Column No. 19 in table) includes other veterans. Chapter 189, Acts of 1930.

"Public Service and Bank Taxation"

Chapter 379 of the Acts of 1928, which created Chapter 60A of the General Laws (Motor Vehicle Excise) taxes registered motor vehicles.

Railroads in list at bottom of page.

National Banks and Trust Companies taxed on "net income." Chap. 327 of 1933 by Sect. 1 defines as "Net income," the gross income from all sources, without exclusion, for the taxable year, less the deductions, other than losses sustained by the bank in other fiscal or calendar years and other than dividends, allowable by the federal revenue act applicable for said taxable year; and by Sect. 2 defines the rate of tax. Section 2. Every bank shall pay annually a tax measured by its net income, as defined in section one, at the rate assessed upon other financial corporations; provided, that such rate shall not be higher than the highest of the rates assessed under this chapter upon mercantile and business corporations doing business in the commonwealth; and, provided, further, that such rate shall not be higher than six per cent.

"Insurance Companies"

Such change as may have been made by Chapter 379 of the Acts of 1928, which created Chapter 60A of the General Laws (Motor Vehicle Excise), taxes registered motor vehicles.

"Stock Transfer Tax"

High (1929) to read $866,857.24. Average to read $309,116.62.

"Liability of Property to Inheritance Tax"

Non-resident interests in real estate represented by mortgages or shares of real estate trusts exempted by Chapter 292, Acts of 1929.

"Income Tax"

Item No. 18 to read Income received from deposits in National Banks taxable.

TAXATION OF BUSINESS AND MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS DOMESTIC CORPORATIONS

P.D. 16

41

I. Property Tax (Ch. 59).

Property taxable to Corporation.

Real Estate, underground conduits, wires and pipes. (G. L., C. 59, Sec. 2.)

Property exempt to Corporation.

All tangible personal property (including merchandise) other than machinery used in the conduct of the business. (G. L., C. 59, Sec. 5, cl. 16.)

Intangible Property.

Machinery used in the conduct of the business. (idem)

Note: Registered motor vehicles are subject to the excise imposed by G. L., Ch. 60A.

II. Excise Tax (G. L., Ch. 63, secs. 30 to 52, inclusive).

(1) $5 per thousand upon the value of its corporate excess* (Ch. 63, secs. 32 and 38C).

(2) 2½% of net income derived from Massachusetts business, subject in the case of manufacturing corporations to the deduction for machinery used in manufacturing, provided in section 38C (Ch. 63, secs. 32 and 38C).

Provided that no corporation shall pay a total excise less than

(a) 1/20 of one percent of the fair value of its capital stock (Ch. 63, sec. 32).

or (b) (If its profits are derived from tangible property) 1/20 of one percent of its gross receipts from business assignable to Massachusetts (Ch. 63, secs. 32A and 38C).

*"Corporate excess" is the fair value of the corporation's capital stock less the value of

- (a) Its works, structures, real estate, motor vehicles, machinery, poles, underground conduits, wires and pipes subject to local taxation in Massachusetts, except such part of the real estate as represents the interest of a mortgagee.
- (b) Its securities, the income of which would not be liable to taxation, except shares in national banks and voluntary associations, trusts and partnerships.
- (c) Its tangible property situated outside Massachusetts, except the interest of a mortgagee therein.
- (d) Its cash and accounts and bills receivable attributable to an office outside Massachusetts. (G. L., Ch. 63, sec. 30, cl. 3, sec. 38C.)

Chapter 359 of the Acts of 1929 as amended (See G. L. Ch. 63, sec. 38B) makes a relatively small group of domestic business corporations, exempt from the above provisions. The group is limited to corporations engaged exclusively in buying, selling, dealing in, or holding, securities on their own behalf and not as brokers. Such corporations are required to pay an excise equal to the sum of the following: (a) 6% of dividends and interest received which would be taxable under the provisions of Chapter 62 of the General Laws to an individual if received by him, subject to a deduction for interest paid, (b) 1½% of business income, (c) 3% of gains from dealing in intangibles. It is further provided that the excise shall not be less than 1/20 of 1 per cent of the fair value of the corporation's capital stock.

Note. Special provisions relate to the determination of the tax of subsidiary corporations which do not disclose the capital truly employed nor true earnings (Ch. 63, sec. 33). An excise is imposed of 1/3 of one per cent upon the value of ships and vessels engaged in interstate or foreign carrying trade or commercial fishing (Ch. 63, sec. 67), in which event the value of the ships and vessels is deducted in determining corporate excess.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS*

I. Property Tax (G. L., Ch. 59).

Property taxable to Foreign Corporation.

Machinery used in the conduct of the business. (idem)

Note: Registered motor vehicles are subject to the excise imposed by G. L., Ch. 60A. Intangible Property.

Property exempt to Foreign Corporation.
All tangible personal property (including merchandise) other than machinery used in the conduct of the business. (G. L., Ch. 59, Sec. 5, cl. 16.)

II. Excise Tax (G. L., Ch. 63, secs. 30 to 52, inclusive).

(1) $5 per thousand upon the value of the corporate excess employed by it in Massachusetts† (Ch. 63, secs. 39 and 42B).

(2) 2½% upon its net income derived from Massachusetts business subject in the case of a manufacturing corporation to deduction for machinery used in manufacturing, as provided by section 42B, and subject to credit for dividends paid to Massachusetts inhabitants as provided by section 43** (Ch. 63, secs. 39 and 42B).

Provided that every such corporation shall pay a total excise not less than

(a) 1/20 of one percent of such proportion of the fair value of its capital stock as the value of its assets employed in Massachusetts bears to the value of all its assets. (Ch. 63, secs. 39 and 42B.)

or (b) (If it derives its profits from tangible property) 1/20 of one percent of its gross receipts assignable to Massachusetts business. (Ch. 63, secs. 39C and 42B.)

†“Corporate excess employed within the Commonwealth” is such proportion of the fair value of its capital stock, as the value of the assets employed in business in Massachusetts bears to the value of all its assets, less the value of the following: —

(a) Its works, structures, real estate, motor vehicles, machinery, poles, underground conduits, wires and pipes, subject to local taxation in Massachusetts, except the interest of a mortgagee in its real estate.

(b) Its securities held in Massachusetts, the income of which, if received by an inhabitant of Massachusetts, would not be subject to taxation, except shares in National Banks, Voluntary Associations, Trusts and Partnerships. (Ch. 63, sec. 30, cl. 4, and sec. 42B.)

Note. Special provisions relate to the determination of the tax of subsidiary corporations which do not disclose the capital truly employed nor true earnings (Ch. 63, sec. 39A).

**“Foreign Corporation” is here used to mean a foreign corporation doing business in Massachusetts. Foreign corporations not doing business in Massachusetts are subject to local taxation upon real estate and all tangible personal property, including merchandise, and are, of course, subject to no excise.

** The credit for dividends is temporarily suspended with respect to dividends paid in 1933, 1934 and 1935 by Acts of 1933, Ch. 307.

SAME vs. CITY OF NORTH ADAMS

283 Mass. 1.

Berkshire. September 20, 1932. — May 23, 1933.

Commissioner of Public Works. Statute, Amendment, Revision. Eminent Domain. Public Officer. Municipal Corporations, Officers and agents. Equity Pleading and Practice, Appeal. Equity Jurisdiction. To enjoin continuing trespass, Laches. Trespass.

This case is of interest here for its discussion of the requirements of eminent domain procedure.

As a result of the very unusual flood conditions of November, 1927, which laid waste considerable property in the region of North Adams, a concrete wall was constructed to replace one which had served as a barrier along the river. It was built partly on land, the owners of which refused to give their consent to such public improvement, stoutly objecting to it. After the work was completed, they brought suit against the city and also the contractor to compel the removal of the wall, and of certain filling placed upon their land, and to obtain damages for the loss of a substantial area rendered practically useless by the better relocation of the wall.

It was averred in answer that the construction and work of which the plaintiffs complained were ordered by the commissioner of public works, and that the land lost to their use was taken by him in an emergency which required instant action to protect streets and public property in accordance with law, because he was clothed with the powers of road commissioners of towns for the protection of streets.

There was no question but that all action was taken in good faith and with the intent of promoting the public welfare, notwithstanding the plaintiffs' contention that the entry upon their land was unwarranted, and the finding that the emergency created by the flood had passed, and that there was no similar danger impending at the time the work was performed.

In carrying out the duties imposed upon the commissioner of public works by statute, he was not the agent of the city, but a public officer for whose acts the city was not responsible. Even if an appropriation had been made by the city for the work, as required by law, before the contract was signed [G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 40, §14], this principle would not have been affected. It was not shown that the city through any authorized agents had assumed the custody or management of the wall.

The court accordingly held that the plaintiffs failed to make out any ground for equitable relief against the city, especially in view of the fact that although they did not know of the making of the contract for the construction, they knew all about the work from the beginning, took no steps to prevent it and gave no notice of their contention that the contractor was a trespasser, expecting, however, and demanding grossly excessive damages. The court said equity will refuse to grant injunctive relief where the expense to the defendant, who acted in good faith, would be out of all proportion to the benefit to be gained by the plaintiff.

This finding did not depend upon the defense that the commissioner of public works took the land by eminent domain, nor upon the city's pleading that subsequent to the filing of the suit it had made a taking of the land in question by eminent domain. To determine whether a taking was made the court pointed out that resort must be had to G. L. c. 79.

The authority to "take any land" by eminent domain was conferred first by St. 1868, c. 264. See Pub. Sts. c. 52, § 14; R. L. c. 61, § 14; St. 1917, c. 344, Part 4, §21. Those statutes contained no direction as to the way in which such taking should be made. The court said to what extent under those enactments a taking could have been accomplished by acts performed without legal formalities, need not be determined because when the General Laws were enacted there were inserted in the section as theretofore framed after the word "take" the further words "by eminent domain under chapter seventy-nine." This addition was more than a verbal change in the revision of a statute not varying its meaning. It was an alteration of substance, a limitation and a specification. It prescribes the only way in which the taking of land now can legally be made.

The commissioners who consolidated and arranged the General Laws had as their purpose in respect to this chapter to devise "a simple and coherent system of eminent domain procedure . . . the same . . . so far as possible for the taking of land for all purposes." The adoption of Chapter 79 was in furtherance of a general design to the end that "everybody concerned will know how to take land by eminent domain and how to ascertain whether land or any interest therein has been seized" under eminent domain. It promotes the general scheme of the law that the state of titles of real estate ought to be disclosed on public records rather than by acts performed without legal formalities.

The court pointed out that takings by eminent domain under chapter 79 must by sections 1 and 3 be by a formal order of taking which contains:

(1) A description of the land or interest in land seized sufficiently accurate for identification,

(2) A statement of the interest taken, and

(3) The purpose for which the property is taken, with certain other matters. A copy of such order must be recorded in the appropriate registry of deeds.

In the present case the commissioner of public works, possessing the powers of road commissioners of towns, was authorized by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 84, § 10 to "enter upon, use or survey or take by eminent domain under chapter seventy-nine any land" which he deemed "necessary for the purpose of securing or protecting a public way." Since even the word "use" falls short of describing a permanent possession such as here results, the only part of the statutory power sufficiently broad to cover what was done upon the plaintiffs' land is that authorizing a taking by eminent domain under chapter 79.

The commissioner of public works did not follow the procedure therein laid down as it is the plain purpose of chapter 84, section 10 to require. He made no written or formal order of taking. The result is that, so far as he is concerned, there was no taking of the plaintiffs' land before or in connection with the construction of the concrete wall.

The contention is not tenable that chapter 84, section 10, authorizes a taking by road commissioners by informal acts on the ground that by chapter 79, section 10, damages are recoverable for takings made in that way. It is also untenable that G. L. c. 79, §45, authorizes as a part of its procedure any taking except by a formal order. This conclusion is emphasized by the circumstance that takings of certain rights in private land for public use by informal acts are in certain instances authorized by other statutory provisions without such limitations and specifications as prescribed by chapter 79. See for example G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 41, §79; c. 48, §3; c. 82, §25; c. 162, §17. It may be that such authority is conferred by other private or public laws. Decisions rendered before the enactment of G. L. c. 79, as to informal takings by eminent domain are no longer applicable save in the restricted instances still expressly authorized.

The subsequent attempt by the city to take the land in question was also fatally defective in that the order adopted by the city council failed to comply with the mandatory requirement of chapter 79, section 1, to "state the interest . . . taken" in the land. It did not state whether the taking was in fee, or of an easement, or, if of an easement, its nature and extent. Such an omission rendered the city's taking invalid.

The court said that on every question argued the plaintiffs failed to show that they are entitled to equitable relief. It is unnecessary to consider what defenses would be open to the city if petition for damages had been brought on the assumption that there had been a taking, or to decide whether, if equitably entitled to relief, the entry of decree should be suspended to enable the city to make a valid taking.

MARY G. AMERO & OTHERS vs. BOARD OF APPEAL OF THE CITY OF GLOUCESTER.
283 Mass. 45.

Essex. February 8, 1933. — May 23, 1933.

Zoning, Variation. Board of Appeal. Certiorari.

G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 40, §27A, authorizes a board of appeal of a city or town to vary the application of any zoning ordinance or by-law in specific cases "wherein its enforcement would involve practical difficulty or unnecessary hardship and wherein desirable relief may be granted without substantially derogating from the interest and purpose of such by-law or ordinance, but not otherwise." It prescribes the following procedure:

There must be a written petition addressed to the local board of appeal and a public hearing, notice of which must be mailed to the petitioner and to the owners of all property deemed by the board to be affected as they appear "on the most recent local tax list" and must also be advertised in a newspaper.

Any such variance must be authorized by the unanimous decision of the entire membership of the board, which must make a detailed record of all its proceedings relative to the petition, setting forth the reasons for its decision, the vote of all members participating and the absence of a member or his failure to vote. "Immediately following the board's final decision" the record must be filed in the office of the city or town clerk, open to public inspection, and notice of the decision must be "mailed forthwith to each party in interest as aforesaid." Within fifteen days "any person aggrieved . . . whether previously a party to the proceeding or not," or any municipal officer or board may bring in the Supreme Judicial Court a petition for a writ to compel the board to review its action for the correction of errors of law.

In the case under consideration, where a board of appeal under the above statute granted permission to install a second gasoline pump upon premises zoned within a single residential district, the petitioners sought to have such variance invalidated principally on the following grounds: that the reasons set forth in the board's decision were not sufficient in law; that it was not shown that the "most recent" tax list was used to determine the owners to be notified of the public hearing; that a delay of four days in filing the board's decision and giving notice thereof did not fulfil the condition that notice should be given "immediately following the board's final decision"; that notice was not mailed forthwith "to each party in interest," and further that it was not shown that public convenience would be served by granting the permit sought.

The court sustained the ruling of the single justice that the petition be dismissed, but not as a matter of discretion except as to the failure to mail a notice of the board's decision to each party in interest. The ruling that notice of the decision was not mailed to each party in interest was right, but this defect was not sufficient to invalidate the board's grant. Ordinarily "party" is confined to the named petitioner or remonstrant in a case; but here the statute requires a wider significance. In granting the right of appeal so broadly to "any person aggrieved . . . whether previously a party to the proceeding or not," and requiring notice of decision to all owners deemed by the board to be affected, the legislature indicated its intention that the proceeding was not to be considered merely adversary between the named petitioners and respondents. Here the record was abundantly clear that all other parties notified of the hearing had assented in advance to it and no one was hurt by the failure to comply strictly with the requirement.

Although errors not of high magnitude may be made grounds for quashing before a board of appeal, a writ to secure correction by such a board need not be issued if an error is slight or no one is harmed.

It was not argued that by the delay in filing and mailing the notice of the board's decision after its rendition on Thursday, October 29th, until Monday, November 2nd, the required action was not taken "immediately" or "forthwith" and the court held this point properly waived. Nor did it consider as fatal the omission "most recent" in describing the tax list used. It held it to be a reasonable implication that in referring to "the local tax list," the board meant that tax list which the law called for, that is, the most recent one.

Pecuniary advantage to the petitioner standing alone would not have warranted a variance by the board from a zoning ordinance but the removal of an unnecessary hardship upon the petitioner while conferring a benefit upon abutting owners and many in the neighborhood was held to bring the board's action within its powers under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) 40, § 27A, which requires a public convenience to be served by the permit granted.

COMMONWEALTH vs. CHARLES M. BALLOU & OTHERS.
283 Mass. 304.

Franklin. May 11, 1933. — June 27, 1933.

Municipal Corporations, Officers and Agents. Corrupt Practice. Jurisdiction. Pleading, Criminal, Indictment. Domicil. Practice, Criminal, Requests, rulings and instructions. Evidence, Of intent, Relevancy.

The board of selectmen and the town clerk acting by virtue of G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 51, § 16, as the board of registrars of voters of the town of Wendell were indicted for fraud and corrupt conduct in the execution of the duties of their offices in that, for political reasons, they caused the name of a lifelong resident of the town, the leader of an opposing faction, together with those of his wife and daughter, to be stricken from the voting list, well knowing that they were then legal voters in the town. The removal was alleged to have been made to strengthen the defendant's political position.

Each defendant was found guilty on each count in the indictment and the case came before the present court on bills of exception of the defendants. All the exceptions were overruled, the principal issues being as follows: the motion to dismiss the indictment for lack of jurisdiction on the ground that the word "political" as used therein does not in any manner import any fraud or corrupt conduct, was held to be rightly denied. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 56, § 3, under which the indictment was drawn, does not set forth that the wrongful striking off of the voting list of the name of a legally qualified voter is a crime, but such denomination is consistent with the conduct therein specifically called criminal, and the court said it seems clear that such an act is one that is embraced by the phrase "corrupt conduct." It likewise seemed clear to the court that the phrase "list of legal voters" in the town is sufficiently definite to charge the defendants with striking a name from the official registry of voters. See G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 277, § 34.

The ruling requested that the defendant registrars should not be found guilty on all the charges in the indictment if the jury found that they had acted under advice of counsel, was also held rightly denied. The instructions given the jury, namely, that consultation of the registrars with counsel would have a bearing on their good faith and that if after a full and frank disclosure of all the facts in the case they could show that they acted upon the advice of persons reasonably supposed to be skilled in such matters, it might detract to a considerable extent from the fact that they acted corruptly, were adequate and in accord with what was said in Commonwealth v. Bradford, 9 Met. 268, 272.

Two questions were involved in the motion for a directed verdict of not guilty which was held properly denied; first, the question of whether the domicil of the person whose name was stricken from the voting list would entitle him legally to vote in the town, and second, whether there was evidence to justify the finding that the registrars were influenced by personal considerations, that is, by corrupt motives.

As to domicil, there was ample evidence that the person deprived by the registrars of his right to vote in the town was born there, had lived there with his family almost continuously until 1923 and had always voted there up to 1932 when his name was stricken from the voting list. He had held office in Wendell several times and in 1931 ran unchallenged for the office of selectman. Since 1923, the family had lived in Montague almost nine months of the year but had kept the house and farm in Wendell fully equipped and ready to occupy, many times spending the day there while living in Montague. There was no change in the family's custom in regard to their residence since 1923 and they had always claimed Wendell as their residence. The court said it was plain on the undisputed facts that their domicil of origin was in Wendell and that inasmuch as a man retains his domicil of origin until he voluntarily surrenders it and acquires another, the residence of the family such as it was in Montague since 1923 did not constitute as a matter of law a change of domicil. As to whether if the father were actually a legal resident of Wendell, he would have been required to pay the tuition of a minor child in the high school in Montague, the court said that that question could have no bearing on the issue whether the actual and legal domicil of the family was in Wendell or in Montague. There is nothing in G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 71, § 6; c. 76, §§ 5, 6, 12, which requires that tuition be paid for schooling in some other town than the town of domicil.

There was much other evidence which would warrant a jury in finding that political opponents as members of the board of assessors in bad faith saw to it that the head of the family was not assessed a poll tax on April 1, 1931, and then used his nonassessment as a cloak to cover the removal of the family's names from the voting list for their own selfish ends. There were material and competent evidence to show the political hostility which provided motive for the later acts of the defendants.

GROVE HALL SAVINGS BANK vs. TOWN OF DEDHAM.

Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933), 1663.

284 Mass. 92.

Norfolk. March 13, 1933. — September 19, 1933.

Municipal Corporations, Building line. Eminent Domain, Notice, Time for bringing petition for the assessment of damages, Rights of mortgagee. Mortgage, Of real estate. Words, "Actual injury."

The establishment of a building line by a town under G. L. c. 82, § 37, constitutes an encumbrance upon land in the nature of an equitable easement for the benefit of the public; it is a taking of private property by eminent domain for public use and the procedure prescribed for such taking must be followed. Watertown v. Dana, 255 Mass. 67, 70.

It is provided by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 79, § 3, that upon the record of a taking under eminent domain title vests in the body politic or corporate on behalf of which the taking is made and the right to damages vests in the persons entitled thereto. Under § 8 of said chapter, provision is made for notice to be given forthwith after the right to damages becomes fixed to every person who is entitled to damages on account of the taking but that failure "to give notice shall not affect the validity of the proceedings, or the time within which a petition for damages may be filed, except as provided" by § 16.

The provision of § 16 is that a petition for the assessment of damages "may be filed within one year after the right to such damages has vested; but any person whose property has been taken or injured, and who has not received notice under section eight or otherwise of the proceedings whereby he is entitled to damages at least sixty days before the expiration of such year, may file such petition within six months from the time when possession of his property has been taken or he has otherwise suffered actual injury in his property.

A bank brought suit for damages caused to land upon which it held a mortgage by reason of the valid establishment of a building line by the town. It did not learn of the taking of the property until over a year after it was recorded. The only point for decision was whether in view of the quoted provisions of G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 79, § 16, its petition then brought could be held to have been seasonably filed.

No notice of the taking was given to the bank which was doubtless entitled to one as mortgagee (G. L. c. 79, § 32). There was no evidence that such notice was given to the owner of the equity of redemption or to the holder of a second mortgage. But such failure to give notice did not invalidate the taking according to the express terms of G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 79, § 8. No such notice after a taking is essential to the validity of a taking by eminent domain. Appleton v. Newton, 178 Mass. 276, 281. Frost Coal Co. v. Boston, 259 Mass. 354, 357. Barnes v. Peck, Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933), 1641.

The court said, however, that in order to avoid the absolute bar of the one year fixed by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 79, § 16, as a limitation for filing a petition for damages, the petitioner must bring itself within some of the exceptions thereby provided.

The first of these exceptions is that the petition may be brought within six months from the time when possession of the property has been taken. The shelter of this exception was held not to extend to the bank because there was no evidence that possession of its property was ever taken by anybody under the eminent domain taking. There could be no entry by public officers for the purpose of taking possession or making constructions because the establishment of a building line constitutes simply a limitation or restriction upon the right of the landowner to erect constructions within the area embraced by the building line. No public work by public authorities was contemplated within that area.

The second exception in said § 16, extending the time for bringing a petition for damages beyond the year from the taking, enables the landowner to file such petition within six months from the time when "he has otherwise suffered actual injury in his property." The court said that the word "actual" in this connection naturally, though perhaps not necessarily, imports some physical act done to the harm of the real estate. There is indicated by this exception a factor of injury of such nature as to direct the special attention of the owner to the intervention of some superior right. Nothing of that nature appears in the present record. The bank did not learn of the taking until, preliminary to beginning proceedings to foreclose its mortgage, it had the records in the registry of deeds examined. This could not rightly be held to be a suffering of "actual injury" in its property within the meaning of § 16.

The court concluded that while it is to be assumed that the legislature intended to enlarge somewhat the inflexible limitation on the bringing of petitions for damages theretofore existing under eminent domain, the words of the statute could not be stretched beyond their fair meaning in order to relieve against what may appear to be a hard case. The bank was accordingly held not entitled to recover because its petition was filed too late.

DECISION AFFECTING BETTERMENT ASSESSMENT.

CITY OF WORCESTER vs. COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF WORCESTER.
283 Mass. 577.

Worcester. May 8, 1933. — July 21, 1933.

Tax, Abatement, Betterment. Worcester. Rules of Order. Municipal Corporations. County Commissioners.

Two assessments were levied upon land in the City of Worcester, which abutted upon a street accepted by an order of the city council and laid out and constructed under the betterment act. On March 16, 1931, the owner filed a petition for an abatement of both these street betterment assessments with the city council within six months from their date as provided in G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 80, § 5.

Both branches of the city council immediately referred the petition to the committee on streets which gave a hearing on the case and recommended to the city council an abatement. The council recommitted the report and recommendation to the street committee which then voted that the petition be returned to the city council with the recommendation "leave to withdraw." This report was accepted and in accordance with the council's vote of June 8, 1931, the owner of the land was so notified. On July 16, 1931, the owner of the land filed another petition with the city council asking for an abatement of the same betterment assessments. This petition was likewise referred to the street committee which after a hearing, upon having their attention brought to the prior petition, voted to recommend to the city council that the petitioner be given "leave to withdraw." The second notice of the failure of his petition for abatement issued in due course in accordance with the vote of the city council on November 9, 1931, also gave notice of his right of appeal, if aggrieved, to the county commissioners or the Superior Court within thirty days, as provided by G. L. c. 80, §§ 7 and 10.

On December 8, 1931, the land owner filed a petition for abatement with the county commissioners to which the City of Worcester was made a party. The city in its answer set forth that the petitioner was entitled to file only the first petition and that since he had neglected to appeal to the county commissioners within thirty days after receiving notice of the city council's decision of June 8, 1931, the county commissioners had no jurisdiction in the case. Thereafter, however, the county commissioners considered the petition and granted an abatement.

On these facts the City of Worcester asked the Supreme Court to issue a writ of certiorari directed to the county commissioners commanding them to return a true and complete record of their proceedings relative to the abatement of the street betterment assessments in question in order that any error therein could be corrected and further dealt with.

In the case which came before this court on the demurrer of the county commissioners, the interpretation of the words "leave to withdraw" has been given great importance. Notwithstanding the usual parliamentary rule that the acceptance of a committee report of "leave to withdraw" imports that "the petition, although not granted, is not refused, but may be withdrawn and presented again," the city contended that in the present case the words "that you be given leave to withdraw" should be interpreted in accord with the customary method of procedure of the city council of Worcester, that is, as a denial of a petition which it declines to grant. Under this interpretation, the owner of the land was not entitled to file a new petition under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 80, § 5. His only remedy was by appeal either to the county commissioners or to the Superior Court. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 80, §§ 7, 10. No such appeal was taken within thirty days of the denial of his petition for abatement, as required by law. It was therefore urged that the county commissioners were without jurisdiction to entertain an appeal from the vote of June 8, 1931, whether that vote operated as a denial of the petition or as an order which declined to grant it without concluding the petitioner's right to withdraw his petition and file a new one. The court said that if the first notice of "leave to withdraw" was ineffective as a denial of the petition, it was difficult to see how the same form of declining to grant the second petition was tantamount to a refusal to abate the betterment assessment because, as contended by the county commissioners, if the petitioner accepted the decision and withdrew his petition, he could not file another in season to appeal from an order against granting the petition and so would be deprived of his right to its judicial review by means of an appeal to the county commissioners or to the Superior Court. It is plain that no right of appeal is given before a final adjudication by the board which made the order of assessment; and equally plain that the county commissioners were without jurisdiction to act before such final order of the assessing board. The court accordingly held that whether the city council's first order on June 8, 1931, of "leave to withdraw" was a final order, or whether both the orders of June 8 and November 9, 1931, were denials of the petitions "without concluding the petitioners," the county commissioners were without jurisdiction to act, the writ to review their action should be issued and their proceedings be quashed.

DECISIONS AFFECTING LOCAL TAXATION.

JAMES C. BURKE vs. COMMONWEALTH & OTHERS.

283 Mass. 63.

Plymouth. October 4, 5, 1932. — May 26, 1933.

Boundary, "On the ocean," Change by alluvial deposit.

The owner of a shore lot on Duxbury Beach, in the Green Harbor section of Marshfield, sought to register title to land which had been substantially increased in area over the boundaries as laid down in the original deed given by the town, by reason of the formation of new land by natural accretion. Breakwaters built by the Commonwealth to improve the harbor and protect the entrance to the channel were inferred to have aided the causes of this accretion. The town contested the right to register title to any land not shown on the plan mentioned in the owner's deed, putting in issue the question of ownership of the land formed by accretion. The trial judge found for the petitioner, his easterly boundary to be "by the ocean." But before determining the side lines of the land, the judge required notification of other lot owners on the same plan who might also have acquired land by accretion, although there was the distinction that their land bounded "on the beach," giving them no title to the foreshore between high and low water mark.

In resulting appeals taken, the court upheld the decision first, that the petitioner was entitled to his proportionate share of the land formed by accretions. A boundary described as "on the ocean" has been held to include not only all above high water mark but also to extend to low water mark when it does not exceed one hundred rods. Green v. Chelsea, 24 Pick. 71, 77. Saltonstall v. Proprietors of Long Wharf, 7 Cush. 195, 200. Boston v. Richardson, 105 Mass. 351, 354. Haskell v. Friend, 196 Mass. 198, 201. The court cited as a governing principle that "Whenever, in the description of land conveyed by deed, known monuments are referred to as boundaries, they must govern; although neither courses, nor distances, nor the computed contents correspond with such boundaries." In this case the reference in the original deed was not merely to the number of the lot on the plan but was followed by a particular description including the ocean as a monument. Since it is settled that where accretions are made to land along the seashore "the line of ownership follows the changing water line," the circumstance that the building of the breakwater by public authority may have aided the operation of natural causes in the deposit of accretions does not modify the general rule that the proprietor of land along the seashore is entitled to his proportionate share of such accretions.

The second point upheld was that, in a case where at the time of the original deed the line of high-water mark was practically a straight line, the rule as to division of accretions is that a straight line should be drawn according to that general course of the shore at high-water mark and the side lines of all the estates extended at right angles with it toward low-water mark. The court said that while the other lot owners ostensibly contested the application of this rule to the present case on the ground that it violated the great principle that such a division must do justice to each owner, the underlying reason for their objection appears to be that when lines are thus drawn in conformity to the general rule their land will be bounded by the breakwater, and they will be cut off from the beach. They insist therefore that the lines should be drawn at such an angle as to give their lots the same proportion on the high-water line of the new beach as they had on the old.

It is the opinion of the court that this contention cannot be supported. The fact that the commonwealth has located a breakwater in front of these lots has no bearing on the equitable division of land formed by accretion. It has been held that the owner of upland without flats may be deprived of access to the sea and the ebb and flow of the tide by the erection of structures on the flats. "Even a title in flats by grant from the colony or commonwealth is subject, so long as they have not been built upon, to the authority of the legislature, for the protection of the harbors and of the public right of navigation." Boston v. Richardson, 105 Mass. 351, 362. As to these lots the breakwaters must be treated as the shore line.

The contending owners made claim to a portion of the accretion in no sense in front of their lands so far as the original shore line is concerned. Owners should not be required to share the natural shore line confessedly opposite their estates merely because the shore line of other owners is now limited and bounded by an artificial structure erected by the commonwealth. If no question of accretion were involved, it could hardly be contended that such land would be entitled to a share on the natural beach front at the expense of lands originally and continuously fronting on the beach. The circumstance that accretion has intervened does not alter the application of the legal principle.

Under the description of one of the boundaries of the petitioner on a certain lot as "being separated from it by an avenue" which is now a public way, the court held that no title was acquired to the fee in the street. Codman v. Evans, 1 Allen, 443, 446.

SPRINGFIELD YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION vs. BOARD OF ASSESSORS OF THE CITY OF SPRINGFIELD.

Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933), 1655.

284 Mass. 1.

Hampden. November 18, 1932. — September 19, 1933.

Tax, Exemption: literary, benevolent and charitable organization. Corporation, Charitable. Board of Tax Appeals. Evidence, Competency.

The issue in this case was whether the parts of real estate owned by a Young Men's Christian Association which were devoted to dormitory uses, together with certain personal property consisting of the furnishing of the rooms, were subject to taxation under a law which exempts "Personal property of literary, benevolent, charitable and scientific institutions . . . (and) the real estate owned and occupied by them . . . for the purposes for which they are incorporated."

In sustaining the decision of the Board of Tax Appeals abating taxes so assessed, the court said that by a previous decision where a Young Men's Christian Association was involved, it is settled that the taxpayer falls within the description of a literary, benevolent and charitable institution. Its personal property was therefore exempt from taxation.

The second requirement of the exempting statute was also fulfilled in that the entire building was occupied by the taxpayer and not let by it to tenants. The difficult question for determination was whether the occupancy of the portion of the building used for roomers under the following described conditions was for the purposes for which the taxpayer was incorporated as shown by its charter, that is, "the spiritual, mental, moral, social and physical improvement of young men, the promotion of kindly intercourse between them and the providing of places for reading rooms, libraries, and social and religious meetings."

The maintenance of dormitories for their members has been established as a general policy of Young Men's Christian Associations throughout the United States. The Board of Tax Appeals found, and the court accepted as fact, that the primary and dominant purpose of this corporation in maintaining dormitory rooms is to provide a home for young men living away from home and to benefit them by shielding them from the dangers and temptations of indiscriminate rooming houses and surrounding them with associations and influences stimulating to character. The dormitories furnished an efficient means of contact with young men in the work of the association.

The rooms were rented at an extremely moderate rate mainly to young men under thirty years of age of small income. The use of the rooms was a privilege extended only to members, revocable at any time, and in no sense created the relation of landlord and tenant.

The receipts from the dormitory considerably exceeded the operating expenses of that part of the building even including a fair proportion of the overhead expense. The expenses of the building as a whole, however, always exceeded the receipts, the balance being made up out of general funds derived from fees, endowments and subscriptions.

The court said that the legal principle here involved on the use of the real estate, which runs through many Massachusetts cases, is "that the purposes mentioned in the statute refer to the direct and immediate result of the occupation of the property, and not to the consequential benefit to be derived from the use of it. An occupation and use of real estate to produce income to be expended for the purposes for which the institution was incorporated is not within the statute, while an occupation whose dominant purpose is directly to accomplish some one of the objects for which the corporation was established is within it. If incidentally there are results of the use which would not entitle the property to exemption, that is immaterial, so long as the dominant purpose of the occupation is within the statute. The dominant purpose of the managing officers of the corporation, in the use of the property which they direct or permit, is often, although not always, controlling. So long as they act in good faith and not unreasonably in determining how to occupy and use the real estate of the corporation, their determination cannot be interfered with by the courts. . . ."

It was strongly urged by the assessors that the clause in the charter of the tax-paying corporation expressly authorizing it to provide "places for reading rooms, libraries, and social and religious meetings" by implication prohibits it from providing dormitories. The court said that a corporation organized and conducted without capital stock or stock holders for the purpose of providing rooms and a home for young women at a moderate cost had been held to be charitable and exempt from taxation. Likewise, it has been held to be a charity to provide wholesome and sanitary homes for working people and those of small means at a nominal cost. The use of dormitories for young men would, in similar conditions, fall within that principle. Dormitories, dining halls and boarding houses intended primarily for and actually devoted to the use and benefit of students attending incorporated institutions of learning have also been held to be exempt from taxation.

In the opinion of the court, therefore, the words of the charter of this corporation as quoted above are to be read in conjunction with its wider corporate purpose of ministering to the spiritual, mental, social and physical improvement of young men and promoting kindly intercourse between them. These expressions of corporate purposes are designed not to be mutually exclusive or to constitute limitations one upon the other, but to comprise all the different factors and classes mentioned. The field of service thus declared to be the purpose of the taxpayer is as broad as the changing needs of young men may require. It comprehends whatever may be deemed essential to meet new conditions of life. The court deemed that as a matter of law it was not outside the corporate purposes of the taxpayer to attempt to accomplish these aims through the combination of a dormitory possessing the opportunities of the taxpayer for fostering these attributes of good citizenship with the other facilities mentioned in the charter. Charity and charitable corporations are not limited to almsgiving but comprehend a wider field of activity for the improvement of mankind.

The court found no merit in the further contention that the dormitory was not used exclusively for "young men," the sole object of the charity of the taxpayer. The fact that some occupants of the dormitory were not young men would not serve to defeat the dominant purpose of the taxpayer in maintaining these rooms. There is no hard and fast rule by which to separate young men from the middle-aged or those no longer young. That description is not susceptible of precise definition according to the common and approved usage of the language. Indeed it might reasonably be thought that the corporate purpose heretofore described might be directly aided by the occupancy of some of the rooms by mature men of firm character and elevating and strengthening influence among their juniors.

It was accordingly held from the facts found that no part of the income or profits from the dormitory was used or appropriated for any other than the charitable uses set forth in the charter of the association. The conditions of exemption from taxation on account of the dormitory property are thus completed.

Landlord and Tenant, Construction of lease, Taxes.

In a case where lessees, exercising their option, surrendered and gave up possession of leased property on January 1, 1932, paying at that time three-fourths of the annual tax upon the premises assessed as of April 1, 1931, and leaving unpaid one-fourth of the proportionate part of the tax from January 1, 1932, to the next assessment day on April 1, 1932, the plaintiff lessors sued to recover such unpaid balance.

The lease was drawn upon a partly printed blank and contained in print a covenant on the part of the lessees "during the said term" to pay the rent "and also all taxes and assessments whatsoever, which may be assessed on the land and the buildings thereon or any part thereof, except assessments for betterments." Although the tax was for the twelve months following April 1, 1931 (J. L. Hammett Co. v. Alfred Peats Co., 217 Mass. 520), and was payable on October 1, 1931 (see G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 59, § 57), in contemplation of law it was assessed on April 1, 1931. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, §§ 11, 21.

The court said that if the quoted provision of the lease stood alone, reported decisions would give ground for the contention that the lessees are bound to pay the entire tax of April 1, 1931, although their lease was terminated before the end of the twelve months for which the tax was assessed. Wood v. Bogle, 115 Mass. 30. Paul v. Chickering, 117 Mass. 265. Sargent v. Pray, 117 Mass. 267. Carnes v. Hersey, 117 Mass. 269. Welch v. Phillips, 224 Mass. 267. Baker v. Horan, 227 Mass. 415. Compare Security System Co. v. S. S. Pierce Co. 258 Mass. 4.

But that provision, the court said, must be read together with a typewritten insertion in an earlier part of the lease, which, in case of conflict, is entitled to greater weight as more likely to express the actual intention of the parties. Under that provision it was agreed that taxes and assessments under the lease were to be paid "in monthly payments as nearly equal as may be estimated on the first day of each month with the rent hereinafter reserved with an annual settlement to be made ten days after the receipt of the tax bill from the City of Boston, in each year," . . . arrangement being made for additional payments in case of a deficiency or refunds in case of overpayment.

The court said there was no real conflict between the two provisions. It expressed itself in agreement with the decision of the Appellate Division of the Municipal Court of the City of Boston, from which appeal was taken, that "the parcelling of the annual tax was intended to turn it into a mere surcharge upon the rent, to live with it and die with it," and "that the monthly payment is of something only contingently payable 'with the rent,' for eviction might occur, or the lease be otherwise ended, and not something absolutely due now, but payable later."

It was accordingly held that when the lease was terminated by a surrender in accordance with its terms, the lessees were absolved from any duty to continue monthly payments of rent or taxes. Deane v. Caldwell, 197 Mass. 242. Security System Co. v. S. S. Pierce Co. 258 Mass. 4. Hall v. Middleby, 197 Mass. 485, 490.

Mortgage, Of real estate: accounting after foreclosure. Statute, Amendment.

A piece of property on which there was a mortgage outstanding was sold on January 9, 1924, for the taxes of 1922, and subsequently for the taxes of each of the next three years. The mortgage note being long overdue and, after July, 1925, the interest also in arrears, the note was then assigned, for the convenience of the administratrix of the mortgagee, to the present defendant.

The plaintiff, who had inherited the mortgaged property from the original mortgagor, was unable to pay the note as then called upon to do and foreclosure proceedings were had under the power of sale contained in the mortgage, and the property and tax titles conveyed to the purchaser. From the proceeds of the foreclosure sale, the principal and interest due on the mortgage were paid, leaving, after the payment of costs and charges, a balance in the hands of the defendant.

About five years later, after the property had been conveyed by the purchaser to a corporation, now made co-defendant, the plaintiff brought suit for an accounting as to this surplus, claiming as owner of the equity of redemption of the mortgaged real estate. Up to the time of this suit there had been no attempt or offer on the part of any interested person to redeem the tax titles nor to foreclose the right to redeem them. A proceeding to foreclose the tax titles was begun by the corporation, however, late in the following year. Its deed made no reference to tax titles but from the foreclosure deed and affidavit it appeared that the mortgaged property was advertised to be sold and was conveyed — "subject to any and all . . . tax titles."

The contention that the plaintiff at the time of the sale in foreclosure did not occupy a position which entitled him to the accounting claimed was based on the ground that the right of the plaintiff arose from equitable consideration only, that the mortgage was a paramount encumbrance which included an irrevocable power to sell the whole property, and that the plaintiff's right to a surplus arising from the exercise of this power was subject to liens such as other mortgages, mechanic's liens and judgment liens. The court said that this is undoubtedly true as to mortgages, liens and judgments which attach to the equity of redemption subsequently to the mortgage foreclosed, but is not applicable to existing mortgages or other liens which are paramount to the mortgage foreclosed. It was apparent that there were no rights to the surplus outstanding superior to the plaintiff's, if he had any rights, since the corporation which had acquired tax title to the property through mesne conveyance from the purchasers at the tax sales of the mortgaged premises, had been denied its claim for an accounting of the surplus and had not appealed. The specific contention was that the plaintiff had no interest in the surplus over the mortgage debt, interest and legal charges because, on June 18, 1926, when the property was sold under the power of sale in foreclosure the paramount title to it was in the one who purchased the property on January 9, 1924, at a tax sale for the collection of the 1922 tax.

The court said that since on January 10, 1926, two years had passed from the date of this first tax sale, it was clear that the plaintiff had no interest in the property when it was sold on June 18, 1926, under the mortgage foreclosure proceedings, unless St. 1925, c. 51, was applicable. That statute changed the time within which one having an interest in the land might redeem from a tax sale, from two years, to "any time prior to the filing of a petition (in the Land Court) for foreclosure under section sixty-five" G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 60. The court pointed out that the decision in 1904 in Rogers v. Nichols, 186 Mass. 440, established that a purchaser at a tax sale takes his title subject to the law relating to the redemption of lands from tax sales, as it stands at the time of the sale.

In many cases, collected in a note to 1 A. L. R. 143 and 38 A. L. R. 229, the court said it has been held that the contractual obligation of a power of sale mortgage, or of a deed of trust, or of an assessment of taxes is impaired by applying to a foreclosure sale thereunder a statute, enacted since the sale, which granted a time of redemption of property sold where no right of redemption previously existed or extended the period of redemption beyond the time as it existed by statute or contract at the time of the sale.

In the present case the court held it must be assumed that St. 1925, c. 51, was intended to extend the time for the redemption of tax titles acquired after its enactment and not retroactively to tax sales had before its enactment and accordingly does not here apply.

Under the law as it existed at the time of the tax sale on January 9, 1924, all rights to redeem therefrom expired on January 10, 1926. It followed, in the opinion of the court that the owner and mortgagor of real estate, and all persons claiming by, through and under him, had no right or interest in the mortgaged premises as against the purchaser of the tax title, or against the mortgagee whose title in the mortgage was extinguished by the tax sale and expiration of the time of redemption without redemption.

Land Court, Appeal, Foreclosure of tax title. Tax, Sale; description; Foreclosure of tax title. Deed, Tax deed.

In a petition to foreclose a tax title the question for decision was whether the description in the advertisement for tax sale as a "lot of land containing 202,864 square feet with building thereon situate on the easterly side of Page Boulevard adjoining estate now or formerly of other land of said Arcade Malleable Iron Company" was sufficient for a valid advertisement and tax deed. The court held that such a description was not sufficient for purposes of a tax sale. It was distinguishable from a case where there was a reference to a plan and also from a case where the description although meagre was of land in a small town with widespread knowledge of particular parcels.

The requirements for a description in adequate conformity with the law were stated by the court in the following language: "The object and purpose of a notice for a tax sale is to appraise the owner and the public that a specified parcel of land is to be sold. It must be sufficiently accurate to enable the owner and the public to identify the premises. It must give information so adequate that from its terms both owner and prospective bidders may locate the land to be sold with substantial certainty. While it need not be so detailed as to point out precise boundaries with the exactness of a technical survey, it must convey reasonably definite knowledge as to the tract of land intended."

Pledge, Of corporate stock, Bona fide pledge. Corporation, Assignment of stock, Pledge of stock. Assignment.

The defendant corporation made a loan for the benefit of another corporation receiving its collateral note and the delivery of certain certificates of stock of a corporation which is the plaintiff in this suit to recover such certificates. The loan was made in good faith, for consideration, and without knowledge or reason to believe that the borrowing corporation had already made an assignment of the same shares of stock as security for loans made by the plaintiff corporation. The first question for decision is whether the plaintiff corporation could compel the delivery to it of its stock which it alleged had been later unlawfully transferred to the defendant corporation in violation of the plaintiff's rights.

The shares of stock referred to were never delivered to the plaintiff, were not indorsed and were retained by the borrowing corporation until it delivered them to the defendant corporation as collateral security for another loan, although the borrowing corporation had delivered to the plaintiff a document entitled "Transfer of Stock" reciting that the borrower did grant, sell, assign, transfer, set over and deliver to the plaintiff corporation all the shares of its capital stock standing in the borrower's name on the books of the plaintiff corporation.

The court held that the document so delivered to the plaintiff corporation as security was not effective under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 155, § 27, to transfer the title to the shares of stock absolutely or in mortgage or pledge, because the certificates were not delivered indorsed in blank or to a specified person. In the opinion of the court it follows that the only title which vested in the plaintiff corporation by force of such documents was an equitable title to the stock by way of pledge or mortgage which might be enforced only between the parties and against all persons taking the certificates of stock with notice of the plaintiff's equitable right. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 155, § 36.

The question then became whether or not the defendant corporation had actual or constructive notice on the date when it made its loan and received a collateral note and the shares of stock as security that the shares had already been assigned to the plaintiff corporation as security for a previous loan. This did not appear and the court found that the mere fact that at the time of the "transfer of stock" the general manager in complete charge of the business of the defendant corporation was also a stockholder in the plaintiff corporation did not warrant an inference that he, or the defendant corporation through him, had knowledge of such assignment. The law is settled that in the absence of statute, by-law or agreement, a corporation has no lien upon the stock of a stockholder for a debt due from the stockholder. Lask v. Bedell, 91 N. J. Eq. 341, 345. 33 A. L. R. 1272 note.

The borrowing corporation having later been adjudicated a bankrupt, the defendant corporation which made the second loan served notice, in accordance with the restriction printed on the back of the certificate, upon the plaintiff corporation which made the first loan, that it desired to sell the shares of the plaintiff corporation's stock assigned to it as collateral. The plaintiff corporation did not accept the offer within ten days as provided in its by-law, but, on the contrary, stated in writing that since the shares in question had already been assigned to itself, it did not recognize the title of the defendant corporation to the stock. It was then necessary to decide whether in view of the facts the defendant corporation was prevented from obtaining a title to the stock under the restriction printed on the certificates, so that it was entitled to sell the stock and apply the proceeds to its loans.

The court said it was plain that the defendant corporation did not hold title to the stock as owner, but held such in pledge, with power to sell upon default, subject to the specified restrictions. It is obvious that the restriction looks to a sale and has no natural application to a pledge of stock which does not transfer title as a mortgage does. But, upon the refusal of the plaintiff corporation to purchase the stock, the defendant corporation became entitled under the restriction to have the plaintiff corporation issue new certificates of stock.

Receiver. Equity Jurisdiction, Receiver. Corporation, Receiver. Equity Pleading and Practice. Hearing on bill and answer: Decree: pro confesso.

G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 51, provides that in the circumstances set forth in G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 155, § 52, "or if a judgment has been recovered against a corporation, and it has neglected for thirty days after demand made on execution to pay the amount due with the officer's fees, or to exhibit to the officer real or personal property belonging to it and subject to be taken on execution sufficient to satisfy the same, and the execution has been returned unsatisfied, one or more receivers may be appointed with the powers and duties provided in, and subject to, said section."

In suits in equity brought in consolidation by judgment creditors against a Massachusetts corporation under the first mentioned statute, for the appointment of a receiver, the only question raised in appeal from the appointment of a permanent receiver was that the corporation neither owned nor possessed any property real or personal within the jurisdiction of the courts of this Commonwealth, whatever property it owned, consisting of real estate subject only to the jurisdiction of the Republic of Cuba.

The defendant domestic corporation was subject to the jurisdiction of Massachusetts courts acquired by service in accordance with G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 223, § 37. The court held that it was not necessary that the property constituting the subject matter of the receivership should be within the jurisdiction of the court, so long as the parties in interest were subject to its control. Huston v. Cox, 103 Kan. 73. Bayne v. Brewer Pottery Co. 82 Fed. Rep. 391. High on Receivers (4th ed.) § 44.

Although the appointment of a receiver did not vest in him title to or possession of the property of the defendant in Cuba, the court would have power to compel the defendant, which was subject to its jurisdiction to execute conveyances of the property in such foreign jurisdiction. *Fahey v. Bond, Of corporation: clause respecting "no recourse" to stockholders, officers or directors. Contract, Construction, Validity. Statute, Construction. Corporation, Officers and agents.

This case raises a question as to the liability of directors of a Massachusetts corporation for the debts of the corporation.

A plaintiff who held twenty-eight promissory notes of the defendant corporation brought a suit in equity under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 38, to establish the indebtedness of the corporation upon the notes or bonds, and, chiefly, to enforce the personal liability, under G. L. c. 156, § 36, of the directors of the corporation for such corporate indebtedness.

The notes were described as "a series of coupon bonds . . . issued under and secured by a mortgage, or deed of trust." Each note or bond contained the following "no recourse clause": "These bonds are issued without recourse against the stockholders, officers, or directors, under or by reason of any covenants or agreements, expressed or implied, in this bond or in the coupons hereof, or in said trust deed or mortgage." The corporation was adjudged bankrupt about a year and a half after the bond issue.

The question for determination was whether or not, where stock had been issued in violation of G. L. c. 156, §§ 15 and 16, or false statements had been made (all as guarded against in G. L. c. 156, § 36) after these bonds were issued, the statutory personal liability of the directors for the debts and contracts of the corporation in such a case also included a liability for the debt created while they were in office by the issue of the bonds, in view of the above quoted "no recourse clause" contained in the bonds.

The court held that the no recourse clause was to be interpreted as if it had provided in terms that the directors of the defendant corporation should not be liable for the payment of such bonds by reason of any statute imposing liabilities upon them for the debts and contracts of the corporation.

The statutes governing the personal liabilities of the individual defendants are G. L. c. 156, §§ 36, 37, 38. Before amendment § 36 was as follows: "The president, treasurer and directors of every corporation shall be jointly and severally liable for all the debts and contracts of the corporation contracted or entered into while they are officers thereof if any stock is issued in violation of section fifteen or sixteen, or if any statement or report required by this chapter is made by them which is false in any material representation and which they know, or on reasonable examination could have known, to be false; but directors who vote against such issue, and are recorded as so voting, shall not be so liable, and only the officers signing such statement or report shall be so liable." St. 1931, c. 313, struck out the words "or on reasonable examination could have known," and added a provision in regard to reports of condition. (See Tercentenary Edition of the General Laws for the sections under consideration.) But the court said, since the false statements which were alleged in part as the basis of personal liability, were known to the defendants to be false and since they were not contained in reports of condition it was unnecessary here to decide whether the statute before or after amendment controlled.

It is provided by § 37 that directors shall be liable "for the debts and contracts of the corporation" in certain circumstances which do not exist in this case.

§ 38 provides in part that "A stockholder of a corporation shall be held liable for its debts and contracts under section thirty-five, and the president or treasurer, or a director of any such corporation, shall be held so liable under section thirty-six or thirty-seven, if the corporation has been duly adjudicated bankrupt. The president or treasurer, or a director, shall also be held so liable under section thirty-six or thirty-seven, if before a suit to enforce such liability is brought by a creditor of said corporation, a written demand by or on behalf of the creditor upon such corporation for the payment of his claim has been made, and said corporation has for ten days thereafter neglected to pay it. Except as above provided, no suit shall be maintained against a stockholder or officer for the debts or contracts of the corporation."

The plaintiff contended that the statutory liabilities of the directors did not arise "under or by reason of any covenants or agreements, expressed or implied" in the bonds, coupons, trust deed or mortgage and, consequently, are not within the terms of the no recourse clause. And, further, that such clause can not be construed as relieving the individual defendants from liabilities imposed by statute for the issue of stock in violation of law [G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, §§ 15 and 16] or the making of false statements (both embraced under G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 156, § 36) after the bonds were issued. It was urged that, at most, the no recourse clause could relieve the directors from only such statutory liabilities which resulted from acts or omissions before or at the time the bonds were issued. So interpreted the no recourse clause would not relieve the directors in the present case since, with a possible exception, their wrongful acts occurred after the bond issue.

The court said that the no recourse clause was a part of the contract between the plaintiff and the defendant corporation but, nevertheless, was available to the individual defendants as a defence if it could be construed as applicable, on the facts in the case, to their statutory liability as directors for the contractual obligation of the corporation under the bond. If so construed, it was valid.

This construction was held applicable where, as in this case, the words "without recourse" are not used in a technical sense as in the indorsement of a negotiable instrument, but instead, are used as a part of the contract of the obligor of the bond and there is an express agreement that the bonds are "issued" without recourse against "the stockholders, officers and directors." Such a clause could not be construed as applicable merely to liabilities resulting from transfer after the bond had been issued. Its natural meaning was that a bearer of the bond by accepting it agrees that he will not enforce against stockholders, officers, or directors the obligations referred to in the clause.

The contention was held unsound that such statutory liabilities did not arise "by reason of" the covenant in the bond. To say that would be to ignore the obvious. The defendant corporation was primarily liable on the bond and its obligation arose "under or by reason of," its covenants or agreements contained therein. The statutory liability of the directors is a secondary liability for the same obligation. Under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 36, the directors' liability is for the "debts and contracts of the corporation." This secondary liability, therefore, depended for its existence upon the existence of the obligation of the corporation. It did not exist before the obligation was created by the bond issue and would be extinguished by its cancellation. This would be true even though the discharge in bankruptcy of a corporation does not extinguish the directors' liability, for such discharge does not cancel the corporation's obligation but merely puts an end to the remedy against the corporation itself. A construction of the bankruptcy act in a decision relied upon by the plaintiff to the effect that the liability of a director who became bankrupt did not arise out of any contractual obligation so as to make it a debt founded . . . upon a contract express or implied, results from an implication that a debt provable in bankruptcy must arise out of a contract of the bankrupt himself. But the court said there was no ground in the broader language of the no recourse clause for an implication that it applies only to liabilities arising out of contracts of the directors. On the contrary the use of the words "without recourse" indicated that the clause deals with secondary liabilities.

If the no recourse clause is not interpreted as applying to statutory liabilities the court said it would be meaningless. There is no liability upon stockholders for obligations created by the bonds apart from the liabilities created by statute. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 38. Furthermore, the no recourse clause applied only to contractual obligations and the statutory liability of the stockholders, officers and directors of a corporation is limited to the "debts and contracts" of such corporation. There is no statutory liability upon directors for torts committed by the corporation. That the no recourse clause and the statute imposing the liability deal expressly with the same kind of obligations the court took to be some indication that the parties to these bonds intended the no recourse clause to apply to the liabilities of stockholders and officers created by that statute.

To the plaintiff's contention that the words "are issued" in the phrase "bonds are issued without recourse" refer only to the situation existing at the time of their issue and make no provision for the future, the court replied that it was natural to apply the words "are issued" to bonds and notes of a corporation but they gave the no recourse clause no different meaning than it would have if it had provided that "contracts of the corporation are made without recourse" against stockholders, officers and directors. That clause is general in terms and looks to the future, for no such cause of action can come into existence until the covenants in the bonds have become operative, there has been some breach of them, and the corporation has either failed to pay the claim after demand within the time fixed by statute, or the corporation has been adjudicated bankrupt. See § 38. The clause cannot be interpreted, therefore, merely as a release of secondary liabilities which have matured at the time the bonds are issued. To have any meaning the court said it must relieve stockholders, officers and directors from secondary liability of some kind maturing after the issue of the bond.

The no recourse clause, as interpreted by the court was accordingly held valid to the extent, at least, that it precludes enforcement, for the purpose of compelling payment of the bonds by the individual defendants, of the secondary liabilities imposed upon them as directors of the corporation by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 36, for the debts and contracts of the corporation.

1. The clause was not invalid for the reason that in effect it releases the individual defendants from liabilities which had not matured at the time the bonds were issued.

Rights which have not matured may be released. Pierce v. Parker, 4 Met. 80, 89. Such a release of a right which has not yet arisen is to be interpreted as a contract which is self-operative to discharge the right when it arises. The principle that "a release of a future demand, not then in existence, is void," is applicable to "a possibility merely," but not to secondary liabilities, although contingent, of stockholders, officers, and directors upon existing covenants of the corporation which are more than mere possibilities. But the no recourse clause is not a release in a strict sense. The bonds which embody the obligation of the corporation contain also the agreements, to which the bondholders by accepting the bonds assented, that the bondholders should have no recourse to the secondary liabilities of the stockholders, officers and directors for the payment of the bonds. The principles stated above, however, are not limited to releases in a strict sense but are applicable to agreements which disclose an intention that secondary liabilities of stockholders, officers and directors when they may mature shall be discharged without further action by the bondholders. To paraphrase the language of the decision cited above, the bondholders were not, because their claims were contingent, in the bonds for the liabilities of the stockholders, officers and directors founded thereon, but out of the bonds for the discharge of such liabilities.

2. The clause was not invalid as against public policy.

The court here goes extensively into the law and decisions involved in the question of public policy. It said that in general public policy requires compliance with statutes regulating the management of corporations. Whether the effect of any specific statute can be avoided by contract depends upon the purpose for which it was enacted. The test was stated in Washington National Bank v. Williams, 188 Mass. 103, 107. An agreement to waive the provisions of law enacted on grounds of general policy for the protection of all citizens alike is generally declared invalid, but where laws like these under consideration are designed solely for the benefit of creditors in the protection of their rights of private property, a party who may be affected can consent to a course of action, which if taken against his will would not be valid. This test is applicable here where a party instead of consenting to a course of action agreed to discharge liabilities which may result from such action.

The court cited the express provision in the Massachusetts statute governing foreign corporations that "No officer, member or stockholder shall be liable for any bonded or mortgage debt of a foreign corporation." (G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 181, §§ 14-16.) There appeared to be no adequate reason in public policy to distinguish between stockholders and directors in respect to reliance upon their statutory liabilities. In each instance the secondary liabilities are created by statute solely for the benefit of creditors, and in the present case some of the creditors have agreed, so far as they are concerned, to look to the primary liability of the corporation for payment of the obligation rather than to secondary liabilities for it. They do not purport to agree that the statutes may be violated in the future by directors, but agree merely that they will not enforce their private rights growing out of such violations. Remedies of other creditors and of stockholders [See G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 16] remain unaffected.

The no recourse law is not invalid as applied to liabilities resulting from subsequent violations of law unless on the ground that it tends to promote such violations. Even a contract for protection by indemnity is not invalid as tending to promote illegal acts or omissions where, as here, no illegal conduct is intended. The no recourse clause may have been inserted in the bonds out of abundant caution to protect directors, as well as officers and stockholders, against possible but unlikely secondary liability to the bondholders. In any event, in the absence of a legislative declaration of public policy, it cannot be said that the bondholders owe such a duty to other creditors that they cannot relinquish their purely private rights to enforce secondary liabilities of directors because such relinquishment may tend in some degree to encourage violations of statute passed solely for the benefit of creditors.

Though the precise question here involved has not previously been decided, the court said the conclusion reached that the no recourse clause precludes recovery by the plaintiff bondholder necessarily follows from the interpretations put upon pertinent statutes and decisions in analogous cases. No authoritative decision adverse to this result has come to the court's attention.

CHILDS, JEFFRIES & Co., INCORPORATED, vs. WILLIAM ELLERY BRIGHT & OTHERS.
283 Mass. 283.

Suffolk, December 9, 1932. — June 27, 1933.

Corporation, Officers and agents. Agency, Scope of authority. Bona Fide Purchaser. Estoppel.

The president, vice-president and treasurer of a security corporation, under authority of a vote taken soon after organization, had authority to draw checks "for and in behalf of the corporation" upon any and all its bank accounts. In his official capacity, the treasurer signed a large check in partial payment of his private indebtedness to the defendants, with whom he had a heavy trading account which he had been asked to "lighten." Although he had had similar transactions with the defendants, for this one he opened with his corporation (the plaintiff) a special account to which he charged the amount of the check and credited certain stock released to him by the defendants. This stock was afterward included, with the treasurer's knowledge, in collateral to secure a loan of the plaintiff corporation which continued to keep available at least as many shares of the same stock.

The treasurer did not speak to any of the other officers of the transaction. It was, however, one which he would have had authority to put through for any customer of the plaintiff corporation who also had a margin account with the defendants. When it did come to the knowledge of the other officers and directors, the treasurer was called into conference and told by the corporation's attorney that he had no right to issue the check in question and at a special directors' meeting he was compelled to resign as treasurer, clerk, and director. At this meeting the authority of the principal officers as to the signing of notes, drafts, bills or checks was rescinded "without in any way invalidating any signature heretofore made thereunder" and a new vote was passed requiring two signatures upon corporate paper.

In an action brought in behalf of the insurance company upon which claim had been made under the treasurer's fidelity bond, to recover the proceeds of the check, the principal issues in controversy were decided as follows:

The transaction here in question was not, as contended by the defendants, a purchase from them of the stock by the plaintiff corporation for which the treasurer had actual or ostensible authority to draw its check in payment. Such contention would have to rest upon the assumption that the defendants had title to the shares in question. In this case it is clear that the transaction was intended by the treasurer and the defendants to be a payment on account of his personal debt to the defendants and a partial release of stock held by them to secure that debt. There was manifestly no express or implied authority ever conferred upon any officer of the plaintiff corporation to use its money to pay a part of his private debt.

That the defendant accepted such a large check without inquiry as to the treasurer's authority to draw it was not actual bad faith on their part, but was based upon their assumption without inquiry that the treasurer had some sort of arrangement with the plaintiff corporation whereby he was authorized to issue its checks in such transactions. Here, however, the rights and obligations of the defendants depend, not upon their good or bad faith, but upon the transaction being or not being with the plaintiff. Since the treasurer had neither express or implied authority to sign the check for the purpose for which it was given, the defendants could not be held to be bona fide purchasers of the check. The court pointed out as well settled law that where an officer of a corporation pays his private debt with a check drawn on account of the corporation the creditor is put on inquiry as to the authority of the officer so to do.

The failure of the plaintiff to give notice to the defendants of the treasurer's lack of authority until several months after the transaction had come to their attention was held not to work an estoppel against the plaintiff to deny the treasurer's authority, because there was no evidence that there was any injury done the defendants by such delay. Murphy v. Metropolitan National Bank, 191 Mass. 159, 165. DiLorenzo v. Atlantic National Bank of Boston, 278 Mass. 321, 325.

The vote of the corporation to rescind the authority to sign checks "without in any way invalidating any signature heretofore made thereunder" was held not to amount to a ratification of the treasurer's action. That vote confined only the signatures made under the early vote which definitely limited the authority of the named officers to the signing of checks "for and in behalf of the corporation." The retention of the stock by the plaintiff was not a ratification as matter of law. Silence is merely evidence of ratification from which an inference may be drawn by the fact finding body; it is not commonly a ratification as a matter of law.

The court held that the right of the plaintiff to recover the value of the check in question is not to be measured by rules of law applicable to a rescission of a contract between the defendants and the plaintiff. The obligation of the plaintiff to return the stock received by the treasurer for his own gain does not result from any rule that rescission requires restoration of property or consideration from the defendant, but rests upon the principle that he who would receive equity must do equity. The principle laid down by the court to be here applied gives the plaintiff the right to recover the full amount of the check with interest from the time of the unauthorized payment of its money to the defendant, but also requires it to account, with interest, for the shares of stock which it retained after it first learned of the treasurer's unauthorized action.

Corporation, Officers and agents, Corporate returns. Constitutional Law, Obligation of contracts.

The question for decision in this case is whether G. L. c. 156, § 36, as it was prior to its amendment by the Acts of 1931, Chapter 313, § 1 (now embodied in G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 156, § 36) gave to the plaintiff as a creditor of a bankrupt corporation, a right or remedy against its directors which could not be taken away by subsequent action by the General Court such as the amendment here involved.

By the provisions of G. L. c. 156, § 36, so far as here pertinent, the directors of a corporation were made "liable for all the debts and contracts of the corporation contracted or entered into while they are officers thereof . . . if any statement or report required" by that chapter "is made by them which is false in any material representation and which they know to be false."

The amendment of 1931 struck out the original section 36, and substituted a new one which added after the words already quoted, the following: "provided, that if a report of condition as a whole states the condition of the corporation with substantial accuracy, in accordance with usual methods of keeping accounts, it shall not be deemed to be false; and provided, also, that the officers or directors signing a false report of condition shall be liable only for debts contracted and contracts entered into before the filing of the next subsequent report of condition, and only to persons who shall have relied upon such false report to their damage."

The court showed it to be well established that the cause of action against directors for the debts of the corporation and the method of its enforcement are wholly the creatures of statute. They are unknown to the common law and do not exist apart from statutes by which they are established. It has been held, however, that the liability of directors created by § 36 before the amendment of 1931 was "compensatory and remedial" and not merely penal. "It is something which the creditor had a right to consider and rely upon when the debt was created. It constituted an implied term of every contract between the corporation and its creditors." E. S. Parks Shellac Company v. Harris, 237 Mass. 312, 319. The nature of the liability thus established by G. L. c. 156, § 36 is contractual. While the law was doubtless designed to have a deterrent effect upon directors in signing statements and reports without careful scrutiny of their truth, its primary design and dominant result are not punishment of the director, but security to the creditor of a corporation. The court said that since this was the character of G. L. c. 156, § 36, and of the liability thereby created, it follows that the force and effect of the contractual obligation as to debts theretofore incurred cannot be impaired by legislative mandate. Statutes to that end are forbidden by the clause in § 10 art. 1 of the Constitution of the United States forbidding the several states to pass any "law impairing the obligation of contracts." This point was fully covered in Coombes v. Getz, 285 U. S. 434, where the question involved was the same, the right of a creditor to enforce liability having become fully perfected and vested prior to the repeal of the governing liability provision. It was there said that while the repeal put an end for the future to the rule of contractual liability created in pursuance to the constitutional rule of law it did not and could not destroy or impair the previously vested right of the creditor (which it is settled is a property right) to enforce his cause of action. The court distinguished between Wilson v. Head, 184 Mass. 525 and Yeomans v. Heath, 185 Mass. 189, because the statute there involved was mainly punitive and gave no vested rights.

Since the statute of 1931 amending G. L. c. 156, § 36, changed the basis of the liability of directors, the court said it was unnecessary to inquire whether the statute of limitations might have been shortened so as to have effect on the present case.

The right of the plaintiff against the directors of the corporation which went into bankruptcy before the enactment of Acts of 1931, c. 313, § 1, was accordingly held not to be affected by the change which that statute wrought in the basis of the liability of direction.

Corporation, Officers and agents. Evidence, Presumptions and burden of proof. Fraud.

A stockholder in a mining corporation contended that the purchase of his stock by the president and by the general manager of the corporation, both of whom were also directors, without disclosing to him as a stockholder their knowledge of a geologist's theory as to the possible existence of copper deposits in the region where the property of the corporation was located, their belief in the value of the theory, their secrecy in regard to it for the purpose of securing options on adjacent land, their discontinuance of the unsuccessful exploratory operations of the mining company but with the plan ultimately to test the value of the geologist's theory, all constituted actionable wrong for which he as a stockholder might recover for losses sustained by him in selling his stock, by way of accounting, rescission of sales, or redelivery of shares.

The trial judge who heard the case ruled that conditions may exist which would make it the duty of an officer of a corporation purchasing its stock from a stockholder to inform him as to knowledge possessed by the buyer and not by the seller, but found on all the circumstances of this particular case, that there was no fiduciary relation requiring such disclosure by the officers of the corporation who purchased the stock to the plaintiff stockholder before its purchase through brokers. The stock was bought and sold on the Boston stock exchange. The stockholder did not know that the purchase was made for the defendant officers nor did they know the source of this particular purchase, since in view of their belief that if there was any merit in the geologist's theory the price of the stock would go up, they had by agreement bought many shares of the stock through agents on joint account. The stockholder sold his stock immediately upon reading an article in a paper that the exploratory operations were closed. The defendant officers appeared in no way responsible for the publication of the article. The finding of the trial judge was express that the defendants were not guilty of fraud, that they committed no breach of duty owed by them to the corporation, which was not harmed by their failure to disclose the geologist's theory, or by their purchases of the corporation's stock or by shutting down the exploratory operations.

The question for decision here is whether on these facts the defendants as directors had a right to buy stock of the plaintiff, a stockholder.

The court said that while directors of a commercial corporation stand in a relation of trust to the corporation and are bound to exercise the strictest good faith in respect to its property and business, the contention that they also occupy the position of trustee toward individual stockholders in the corporation is plainly contrary to repeated decisions and cannot be supported. A rule holding that directors are trustees for individual stockholders with respect to their stock prevails in comparatively few states but in view of many adjudications of the Massachusetts courts, supported by an imposing weight of authority in other jurisdictions, the court found it unnecessary to review such decisions.

Nevertheless, it was pointed out by the court, circumstances may exist which require that transactions between a director and a stockholder as to stock in the corporation be set aside. The knowledge naturally in the possession of a director as to the condition of a corporation places upon him a peculiar obligation to observe every requirement of fair dealing when directly buying or selling its stock. Mere silence does not usually amount to a breach of duty, but parties may stand in such relation to each other that an equitable responsibility arises to communicate facts. Purchases and sales on the stock exchange are commonly impersonal affairs. An honest director would be in a difficult situation if he could neither buy nor sell on the stock exchange shares of stock in his corporation without first seeking out the other actual ultimate party to the transaction and disclosing to him everything which a court or jury might later find that he then knew affecting the real or speculative value of such shares. Business of that nature, the court said, is a matter to be governed by practical rules. Fiduciary obligations of directors ought not to be made so onerous that men of experience and ability will be deterred from accepting such office. Law in its sanctions cannot undertake to put all parties to every contract on an equality as to knowledge, experience, skill and shrewdness, nor to relieve against hard bargains made between competent parties without fraud.

On the other hand, directors cannot rightly be allowed to indulge with impunity in practises which do violence to prevailing standards of upright business men. Therefore, where a director personally seeks a stockholder for the purpose of buying his shares without making disclosure of material facts within his peculiar knowledge and not within reach of the stockholder, the transaction will be closely scrutinized and relief may be granted in appropriate instances. The applicable legal principles "have almost always been the fundamental ethical rules of right and wrong."

In this case, where the facts found afford no ground for inferring fraud or conspiracy and where no wrong was done to the corporation by the nondisclosure of the geologist's theory which was at most a hope, possibly an expectation, the finding that the stockholder could not prevail was sustained. In these circumstances, there was no duty on the part of the defendant officers to set forth to the stockholders at the annual meeting their faith, aspirations and plans for the future. The disclosure of the theory at that time, if it ultimately was proved without foundation in fact, might involve the defendants in litigation with those who might have acted on the supposition that it was correct. It would have been detrimental to the interests of another mining corporation in which the defendants also were directors. The plaintiff stockholder was not a novice. He was a member of the stock exchange and had kept a record of sales of the corporation stock. He was acting upon his own judgment in selling his stock and made no inquiries of the defendants or of other officers.

WALTER J. BERRY & OTHERS vs. OLD SOUTH ENGRAVING COMPANY & ANOTHER.

Suffolk. May 9, 1933. — June 28, 1933.

Corporation, Corporate entity, Identity with previous corporation. Agency, What constitutes, Contract, What constitutes, With labor union. Labor Union. Fraud.

A suit in equity was brought by a labor union against a corporation for enforcement, through the medium of an injunction, of a "commercial agreement" between them in regard to the employment of union members only. Damages were also sought.

The officers and directors believed that the union had violated the terms of the agreement by discrimination against the corporation with the knowledge of the officers and members of the union. They did not purpose to contend it but followed the advice of counsel that the agreement between the corporation and the union was not binding on the individuals who composed the stockholders and directors and that there appeared to be no reason why the directors and stockholders as individuals could not start in business as a new corporation with the purpose of conducting it as a non-union or open shop. A new corporation was accordingly formed with the same officers, directors and stockholders as in the old corporation, the stock being held in the same proportion. The old corporation in compliance with the "commercial agreement" gave due notice to the union of its desire to terminate the agreement, and to its employees, all of whom were union members, of their discharge. Although the union stood ready and willing at all times covered by the agreement to furnish union labor as required, the old company employed no more help from that time on and performed no other corporate acts than to sell to the new corporation its machinery, equipment and accounts receivable, pay its debts and distribute a part of its surplus in its treasury.

The decision turns on whether the old corporation, as matter of law, was merely continued and consolidated in the new company, with the consequences that non-union men were employed by the old company under the cloak of the new company in violation of the commercial agreement. The master who heard the case assumed without deciding, that if this were the case, basis for injunctive relief would be afforded.

The plaintiffs contended on this finding that the new company was organized and stock issued to the old company, not for the purpose of participating in affairs of the new company in the normal and usual manner, but for the purpose of controlling a subsidiary so that it might be used as a mere agency or instrumentality of the old company and its stockholders.

The court upheld the contention of the old corporation that it could not be held responsible for any acts of its officers or stockholders or for any acts of the new corporation. There was no finding that the stockholders of the old corporation, as such, authorized the organization of the new corporation, or, on its formation, authorized it to act for the old corporation in any way, or that the new corporation has in any manner purported to act for or to represent the old company. The old corporation was expressly found to have employed eleven union members and the new corporation twelve non-union men, as respective crews of employers. The identity of stockholders and the control of the new corporation was held not to operate to merge the old and the new corporations or to make either the agent of the other. Marsch v. Southern New England Railroad, 230 Mass. 483.

Although the primary purpose of the officers and directors of the defendant corporation in organizing the new corporation was to escape from the commercial agreement, the court found nothing fraudulent in fact or in law in their motive since it was by their action as individuals that they became the incorporators of the new corporation through their desire to secure by that means the authority to do business exactly as the old corporation had but without the burden of the agreement as to the employment of union labor. Corporations, the court said, like individual stockholders are distinct entities, neither can be treated as agents of the other when openly contracting for themselves and in their own names. "In the absence of a fraudulent purpose in the organization of a corporation, it is settled law in this commonwealth that the ownership of all the stock and the absolute control of the affairs of a corporation do not make that corporation and that individual owner identical. Nor do such ownership and control make the property of the corporation subject to the payment of the stockholders' debts," nor subject the corporation to liability upon contracts which it has neither executed nor assumed. Star Brewing Co. v. Flynn, 237 Mass. 213, 217.

The contention that the new corporation was but a continuance of the old company was accordingly held to be without merit in fact or in law. The old company did not break the contract by ceasing to employ either members of the union or anybody else. Nor did the new company contract with the union or assume the contract of the old company. Bills against both the old and the new corporation were held rightly dismissed.

Corporation, Dividend, Transfer of shares. Uniform Stock Transfer Act. Equity, Pleading and Practice, Counterclaim, Agreed Statement of facts, Rule 32 of the Superior Court (1932). Rules of Court. Conflict of Laws, Trust. Words, "Delivery."

The plaintiffs in this case had a margin account with a banking and brokerage firm which held as security two certificates of stock, representing their entire holding of fifty shares, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company standing in the names of the plaintiffs and indorsed by them in blank. The plaintiffs ordered this stock sold and the proceeds credited to their account which was thereby left with a credit balance. The brokerage firm never delivered the certificates of stock to the purchaser, another member of the Boston Stock Exchange, because it was found that their accounts were in balance without such delivery. The brokerage firm, therefore, had the right to retain the fifty shares.

The defendant in the case had directed the same brokerage firm to transfer all the securities which he had purchased through it to his name, including one hundred and twenty-five shares of American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The firm instead of having these particular shares transferred to the defendant, segregated certificates totaling said number of shares and put them away in a special box which was also marked with the defendant's name. Included in the certificates so segregated were the two certificates to the amount of fifty shares described above as standing in the names of the plaintiffs and indorsed in blank.

Later upon an involuntary petition, the brokerage firm was adjudicated bankrupt. On a reclamation petition brought by the present defendant, the referee in bankruptcy, after an uncontested hearing, ordered the segregated certificates turned over to the defendant who obtained in due course a new certificate including the fifty shares. After the sale of the fifty shares at the plaintiff's order and before those shares were transferred upon the books of the company into the defendant's name, dividends on the shares became due and were received by the plaintiffs who appealed from an order to pay them over to the defendant with interest from the date of the demand made upon them for such dividends. Their claim to the stock made in their original bill was waived. The plaintiffs claimed no right to the dividends but contended that no title to the certificates or the shares passed to the defendant upon the order of the referee in bankruptcy, and that the trustee in bankruptcy and not the defendant is the proper claimant of the dividends received in the meantime. The object of the plaintiffs in making this contention appears to have been to require a new action to recover the dividends, to be brought by the trustee in bankruptcy, and then to declare in set-off for the credit balance due to the plaintiffs from the firm. The court said the question as to whether such a set-off could be allowed was not before it.

The referee in bankruptcy, on the defendant's reclamation petition, had authority to determine title to the stock. The plaintiffs urge, however, that they are not bound by that adjudication because they were not parties to it, and, further, that it did not extend to the dividends. The court ruled that it need not consider whether such determination could be ignored by the plaintiffs who apparently sought to attribute rights to the trustee in bankruptcy which the tribunal having jurisdiction over his rights has decided to be nonexistent, and that the case could be rested on the merits of the original transactions.

It was assumed by the court that until the transfer of the stock to the defendant was registered on its books, the corporation was entitled to pay dividends to the plaintiffs. See G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 155, § 29 (a). New York Personal Property Law, § 164 (a). But the plaintiffs having transferred their stock were not entitled to retain the dividends received. They belonged to the real owner of the stock, in the absence of contract to the contrary. If the defendant in this case was entitled to the dividends, either at law or in equity, an action of contract upon a common count for money had and received to his use afforded the natural remedy. When sued in equity for the stock, the defendant, if entitled to the dividends, could claim them by counterclaim under Rule 32 of the Superior Court (1932). The court said it was immaterial whether the right set up by counterclaim is legal or equitable, where it arises out of the transaction which is the subject matter of the suit.

The decisive question was, therefore, whether by the act of the firm in segregating the certificates and marking them with the name of the defendant, he acquired title to them and to the shares represented, by them either at law or in equity. The corporation was created by the laws of New York, but the certificates were in Massachusetts. No difficulty arises, however, as to the laws of which state govern a transfer in such case because in both states the uniform stock transfer act has been adopted in identical terms in all material respects. See G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 155, §§ 22-44 and especially the definitions of "Certificate" and "Shares" in § 26.

The inference the court drew from the agreed facts was that the firm intended by what it did, not merely to express an intention to transfer in the future the particular certificates segregated and marked for the defendant, but rather to transfer presently to the defendant, in accordance with its duty all the title and interest in the certificates and shares, and any dividend accrued thereon after the date of the defendant's purchase, to which it was entitled as against the plaintiffs, that it could transfer by the physical acts done, without further formality.

By the uniform stock transfer act, G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 155, § 27, the firm, having the certificates indorsed in blank by the plaintiffs who appeared by the certificates to be the owners of the shares represented thereby, could transfer the legal title to the certificates and the shares by delivering the certificates to the defendant. "Delivery" is defined as "voluntary transfer of possession from one person to another." § 26. The uniform sales act contains exactly the same definition of "delivery." G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 106, § 65. But no form of transfer of legal title is recognized by the uniform stock transfer act without delivery. Under that act there is no requirement of delivery for the transfer of an equitable title, however. See G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 155 § 26, definition of "Title," § 27.

The court concluded that even if there was no delivery sufficient to transfer the legal title to the defendant, the inference already drawn shows a transfer of the equitable title to the certificates, the shares, and any dividend accrued after the date of the defendant's purchase, to which the brokerage firm had a right. In substance the firm had declared itself a trustee for the defendant. Whatever may be the rule as to the creation of voluntary trusts, there is no principle of general application that knowledge or consent of the cestui que trust at the time is necessary to the validity of a declaration of trust.

The decree was therefore affirmed that the transfer in these circumstances gave the defendant such title to the stock that he was entitled to the dividends accrued from the date of the plaintiff's order to the brokerage firm to sell the stock up to the time of actual transfer of the stock into the defendant's name, with interest from the latter date.

Corporation, Issue of stock, Ratification by stockholders.

In this case the plaintiffs brought suit as stockholders to compel the return to the corporation for cancellation of certain certificates of shares of its capital stock standing in the names of the three defendants on the ground that said shares were illegally issued. The governing provision of law is G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 16, which provides as follows: "The whole or any part of any unissued balance of the authorized capital stock [of a Massachusetts corporation] may be issued, subsequent to the issue of stock certified by the articles of organization, by vote of the directors, under authority of the by-laws or of a general or special vote of the incorporators at the first meeting or of the stockholders at a subsequent meeting, if, within thirty days after such vote of the directors, a certificate signed and sworn to by the president, treasurer and a majority of the directors is submitted to the commissioner [of corporations and taxation] . . ."

The record shows that on July 30, 1930, the directors voted to issue to one of the defendants ten shares of stock in payment for services rendered. No certificate of such issue as required by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, §§ 16 and 17 was ever filed, however. At a special meeting of the stockholders on October 3, 1930, it was voted to issue fifty shares of stock to each of the incorporators, but again there was a failure to file the necessary certificate of issue with the commissioner. On February 13, 1931, at a special meeting of the directors it was voted to issue fifty shares to each of the incorporators and ten to the defendant as first intended and this vote was followed by the proper filing. No certificates of stock were shown to have been actually executed and delivered to the incorporators and this defendant after October, 1930, however.

A special meeting of the stockholders was called for April 4, 1931, but on April 3, without notice to one of the plaintiff stockholders, a stockholder and two of the defendants, including the one to whom the ten shares had been issued for services, voted to issue one hundred shares to the wife of the other defendant and fifty shares to the third defendant, both in payment of alleged debts. At a special meeting of the directors, a majority voted to approve such issue.

The court said there did not appear from the record to be any by-law authorizing the directors to issue any unissued balance of stock, or any general or special vote of the incorporators at the first meeting, or of the stockholders at a subsequent meeting where a certificate was submitted to the commissioner as required by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 16. The only stock which was issued after the original issue at incorporation was issued by vote of the directors, with the exception of the issue voted at the special meeting of the stockholders on October 3, 1930. That issue was illegal because no certificate of issue was filed with the commissioner.

A provision of the by-laws reciting that "The Directors shall have and exercise full control and management of the affairs and business of the corporation except such as are conferred by law or by these By-laws upon the stockholders or upon an officer of the Corporation or may be delegated to the Executive Committee," was held not capable of the construction that it conferred upon the directors authority to vote the issue of an unissued balance of stock without compliance with the above-named provisions of G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 16.

The basic principle is found in Elliott v. Baker, 194 Mass. 518, 523, where it was said, "The directors of a corporation act in a strictly fiduciary capacity. Their office is one of trust and they are held to the high standard of duty required of trustees. . . . Corporate directors cannot manipulate the property, of which they have control in a trust relation, primarily with the intent to secure a majority of the stock or of directors in any particular interest . . ."

The circumstance that the records of the special meeting of the stockholders held on October 3, 1930, mentions the defendant to whom it was first undertaken to issue ten shares in payment of services rendered, as a stockholder cannot rightly be held to be a ratification of the issue of stock to him by the directors. The court distinguished this case from Mitchell v. Mitchell, Woodbury Co. 263 Mass. 160, where there was an informality in the issue of stock which the corporation had power to create not affecting the essential rights of the corporation, its creditors or other stockholders.

A dissenting opinion held that the case was covered by the decision just cited; that there was no impropriety in the votes for the issue of fifty shares to each of the three incorporators and of the ten shares to the defendant for services. There was simply a failure to comply with a statutory requirement for validation. That requirement was met by the vote taken on February 13, 1931, and the filing of the certificate of issue with the commissioner on the following day. Such action served to validate the certificate for ten shares dated September 22, 1930, and issued pursuant to the vote of the directors on July 30, 1930, which was not followed by up a proper filing under G. L. c. 156, § 16. The dissenting justice expressed himself as in agreement with the decree calling for the return of the one hundred and fifty shares issued to the other two defendants for debt owed them by the corporation at the meeting of the directors properly found to have been called illegally, but as unable to see how the ten shares already referred to could be invalidated at the suit of the two plaintiff incorporators, relying in part on their ownership of fifty shares each which stand exactly as the defendant's ten shares, and by a decree which leaves outstanding the remaining fifty of the one hundred and sixty shares validated by the vote of February 14, 1931, in the defendant incorporator. The justice thought that all the one hundred and sixty shares should be treated alike.

Contract, What constitutes. Corporation, Stockholder's right to examine records.
Mandamus.

This is a petition for a writ of mandamus to enable the plaintiff corporation to inspect the records, books of account, files of correspondence, etc., designs, plans, drawings and models of the defendant corporation of which it owns all the outstanding preferred stock. The principal assets of the defendant corporation consist of rights in and to inventions and discoveries of an individual who had entered into a contract with the two corporations under which his employment by the defendant for a period of five years was agreed upon. During this time the plaintiff corporation agreed to make monthly purchases of the stock of the defendant corporation, which retained the right to repurchase, with the further agreement that either or both corporations, or any person designated by either on its behalf, would have the right of access to all records of research and development, provided only that such knowledge should remain secret within the two corporations. This was the only provision of the contract empowering the plaintiff corporation to examine records, designs and plans.

The court found error in the ruling of the single justice that as a matter of law by the terms of such contract, the plaintiff corporation had the right to enter upon the premises of the defendant corporation and make copies of or abstracts of any and all corporate records, books of account, correspondence, plans, models, etc. It held that the contract in question was an agreement by the individual alone, constituting an engagement by him which ran to both the corporations. It did not purport to confer any right on the plaintiff corporation against the defendant.

The plaintiff corporation urged that regardless of the contract, it had established a right to relief as a stockholder in the defendant corporation at common law, relying upon Varney v. Baker, 194 Mass. 239, and Andrews v. Mines Corp. Ltd., 205 Mass. 121, where such rights of a stockholder to examine the books of the corporation are stated.

The court held that apart from the erroneous ruling of law as to the interpretation of the contract, the single justice was right in exercising his discretion against issuing the writ. The common law right of a stockholder to examine the books of a corporation is not absolute but may be qualified. It quoted in this connection from Klotz v. Pan-American Match Co. 221 Mass. 38, 41, 42, as follows: "This common law right, however, is a qualified and not an absolute one; and further, the remedy in this commonwealth is by mandamus, which is a discretionary writ. A stockholder ordinarily will be permitted to examine the books and accounts when he is seeking information as to the condition of the corporation in good faith and for the purpose of protecting his own rights or advancing the interests of the corporation. But the rights of the corporation itself, especially in the protection of trade secrets, and the interests of the other stockholders, will not be disregarded by the court in acting upon the application."

In the present case, the granting of the writ would permit the plaintiff corporation to examine all the secret researches and results of skilled and technical investigations. Although through its holdings in the defendant corporation, the value of its stock depends largely upon the value of such inventions and discoveries, the court said that the plaintiff corporation has no special rights in these properties. That would have a tendency to diminish the value of properties of this nature to other prospective customers and to work a disadvantage to other stockholders and to the corporation as a whole. Whatever rights the plaintiff corporation may have as a stockholder to examine books and property of the defendant corporation if properly restricted so as not to work its detriment, the present petition was held to be too broad and to seek too much.

C. FRANK HATHAWAY, trustee in bankruptcy, vs. LAURA W. HUNTLEY.

Corporation, Officers and agents. Negligence, Of director of corporation, Proximate Cause. Proximate Cause.

A trustee in bankruptcy brought suit against a director of a bankrupt corporation to compel restitution for losses sustained by it through alleged misappropriation of its funds by its treasurer, on the ground that the defendant either knew or ought to have known of such misappropriations and utterly neglected her duty as a director.

The husband of the defendant was president, treasurer, a director and the general manager of the corporation. He held all the shares of its stock except three, one of which was held by each of two employees and the other by the defendant, these three stockholders with the defendant's husband constituting the board of directors. The business of conducting three garages in different parts of the city was carried on entirely by the defendant's husband who was the sole and active manager.

The defendant director was a woman over sixty years of age without business experience of any kind. She relied wholly upon her husband, signing whatever papers he presented to her without concerning herself with their contents and regarding the business after incorporation as merely a continuance of the business which her husband had previously carried on as an individual for about fifteen years. She never understood or comprehended her duties as a director of the corporation nor realized that any were incumbent upon her by virtue of holding that office. She did not know the financial condition of the corporation and never inquired into it. If she were held to the same degree of care and diligence that an ordinary business man would exercise she would probably have discovered that her husband was overdrawing his account to some extent but not sufficiently to jeopardize the solvency of the corporation. About the time of incorporation he had begun to feel the effects of competition and had adopted a policy of extension which proved to be unwise and resulted in the bankruptcy of the corporation.

The court said that the plaintiff in this case represents the corporation rather than its creditors because any right of action is an asset of the corporation and passed to its trustee in bankruptcy. Manning v. Campbell, 264 Mass. 386, 391. The record facts fail to show direct liability to creditors of the corporation. Ellis v. French Canadian Co-operative Association, 189 Mass. 566. The bill is not framed on that theory. The defendant as director of a commercial corporation stood to it in a fiduciary relation. Albert E. Touchet, Inc. v. Touchet, 264 Mass. 499. Goodwin v. Agassiz, Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933) 1299, 1301. As such director she was charged with the duty of caring for the property of the corporation and managing its affairs honestly. Directors of a business corporation in the absence of positive statutory enactment are not responsible for errors of judgment or want of prudence in conducting the business of a corporation, provided they act honestly. Lyman v. Bonney, 118 Mass. 222. Crowell & Thurlow Steamship Co. v. Crowell, 280 Mass. 343.

It was apparent, the court said, that while the defendant director did not actively mismanage the corporation, she was completely passive with respect to it and did not realize that she was under any obligation to do otherwise. This non-feasance on her part constituted negligence. She did not exercise the degree of care which a prudent person ordinarily would use as a director. Bowerman v. Hamner, 250 U. S. 504. The finding of the master who heard the case is explicit, however, that the cause of the bankruptcy of the corporation was the policy of business expansion adopted by her husband in a time of business prosperity but not adapted to the depression period which followed. There was no evidence of even bad judgment or want of prudence on his part. The definite finding that the negligence of the defendant director was not a cause contributing to the bankruptcy of the corporation based upon evidence not required to be reported, cannot be set aside, the court said, without full report of the evidence. A plaintiff is not barred from recovery unless his own wrongful conduct is a contributing cause to his damage. If it is only a condition, he may maintain his action. Ordinarily one cannot be held liable for conduct having no causal connection with harm constituting the plaintiff's cause of action. O'Connor v. Hickey, 268 Mass. 454, 459. Thibeault v. Poole, Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933), 1361. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway v. Toops, 281 U. S. 351. That is a principle of wide application founded upon an underlying sense of justice that one ought not to be held liable for that which has caused no damage to the plaintiff. The rule has been stated to be that when defalcations or mismanagement could be detected and prevented by the exercise of ordinary care and vigilance on the part of directors of a business corporation, they are personally liable for the losses sustained by their negligence. The court held that even measured by this rule in the light of all the findings of the master the defendant in this case is not liable.

The overdrafts which might have been discovered were not of a nature or extent to affect the solvency of the corporation. Deposits made in the name of the defendant in savings banks and the purchase of cooperative shares were not connected in any way with the funds of the corporation. The defendant had independent property of her own. Her husband's salary was not unreasonable in view of the extent of the business and the profits then being made. The only dividend paid by the corporation could not be pronounced a breach of the defendant's duty. The court said further discussion was unnecessary.

The finding in favor of the defendant was decisive except upon the single point of whether the defendant since the conveyance of the property to her had profited at the expense of the corporation by payments made on account of its purchase. If that were true the court held she should account for it, having no right to retain improper payments made for her benefit by the corporation on account of the property. On this point only, the suit was remanded for further hearing.

Corporation, Officers and agents. Equity Pleading and Practice, Findings by judge. Bankruptcy, Discharge.

The defendant corporation failed to pay a judgment for more than ten days after written demand by the judgment creditor, under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 38. A bill was brought to hold liable for the judgment the individual defendants who were officers of the corporation when the debt was contracted, and each of whom as president, treasurer or director signed one or more certificates of condition containing a material false representation as to the value of the real estate of the corporation, which on reasonable examination, he could have known to be false. The court upheld the finding that these facts established the liability of all the individual defendants, under G. L. c. 156, § 36. The principle governing the liability of officers and directors of a corporation under that statute before amendment was stated in E. S. Parks Shellac Co. v. Harris, 237 Mass. 312, 314 as follows:

"The liability extends to obligations existing at the time the false statement or report is made, and to those thereafter arising while they hold office." The relaxation of liability by St. 1931, ch. 313, § 1 (now G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 156, § 36) afforded no defence to this suit because that statute did not become effective until after the substantive basis of this suit became complete.

The defendants attacked the conclusion that on reasonable examination they could have known that the valuation stated was false and excessive. In sustaining such conclusion the court said that although value rests upon opinion, it is a fact, and one constantly found by juries. The fact of value may be stated falsely. A false statement of value has been the foundation for a conviction of perjury. Commonwealth v. Butland, 119 Mass. 317. It has likewise supported an action for deceit. Andrews v. Jackson, 168 Mass. 266. Buller v. Martin, 247 Mass. 169. Reinhertz v. American Piano Co., 254 Mass. 411. The cases in which a false representation as to value has been held non-actionable go on the ground that where the defendant has stated merely his own opinion rather than the opinion of the market which determines value, the plaintiff ought not to rely upon the representation. Deming v. Darling, 148 Mass. 504. Lynch v. Murphy, 171 Mass. 307. Gaucher v. Solomon, 279 Mass. 296, 299. Pointing out that even though the element of opinion so pervades value that some allowance must be made for honest difference of opinion, after reasonably careful examination, in the determination of statutory liability for a false statement of value, the court found the liability of officers and directors under G. L. c. 156, § 36, by reason of false certificates of condition, to pay a debt of the corporation contracted on an open account established where the valuation stated by them was false and a material representation, and where on reasonable examination they could have known its falsity.

A discharge in bankruptcy of one of the defendants was held not to avail him as a bar to this suit. Bankruptcy discharges only provable debts. U. S. C. Title 11, § 35. These were discussed at some length, and were shown to include "(1) a fixed liability, as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition . . . whether then payable or not . . ." (4) founded upon an open account, or upon a contract express or implied . . ." U. S. C. Title 11, § 103. The court cited Cunningham v. Commissioner of Banks, 249 Mass. 401, 424-427, where it was held that the liability for an assessment upon stockholders in a trust company "is an essential element in the contract by which the stockholders became members of the corporation," and "becomes a part of every contract, debt, and engagement of the" trust company and that such a liability is "founded . . . upon a contract" and provable in bankruptcy; and Frank Kumin Co. Inc. v. Moreau, 283 Mass. 332, where it was held as to the liability of directors under G. L. c. 156, § 36, that in its nature it is contractual and that "the force and effect of this contractual obligation as to debts theretofore incurred cannot be impaired by legislative mandate." Yet it was the court's opinion that the present case on the bankruptcy point was governed by the decision in Old Colony Boot & Shoe Co. v. Parker-Sampson-Adams Co., 183 Mass. 557, which held that the liability of a director under Pub. Sts. c. 106, § 60, "For debts contracted between the time of making or assenting to a loan to a stockholder and the time of its repayment," not reduced to judgment against the director (Lewis v. Roberts, 267 U. S. 467), was a liability "for a wrong done" and one that "does not arise out of any contractual obligation," and consequently one not discharged in bankruptcy. See also 62 A. L. R. 988. The court said that the liability of officers and directors now contained in G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 156, § 36, was dealt with in the same section of the public statutes, was enforced in the same way, and fell within the reasoning and principle of the Old Colony Boot and Shoe Company case which was recognized as law. In Cunningham v. Commissioner of Banks, a distinction was taken between the liability of officers and directors in general and that of shareholders in a national bank or trust company. The reasoning applied to the present case is that the statutory liability became attached to the contract between the corporation and the creditor in such a way that it could not be detached by subsequent legislation; but after all the liability is founded upon a statute and not "upon a contract" of the officer or director within the meaning of the bankruptcy act.

DECISION AFFECTING VOLUNTARY ASSOCIATIONS

HARRY TYLER vs. BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS UNION.

Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933) 2249.

285 Mass. 54.

Plymouth. December 12, 1933. — December 30, 1933.

Practice, Civil, Motion to dismiss, Plea in abatement, Demurrer, Parties. Voluntary Association. Labor Union.

A writ in which the description of the defendant as "a voluntary association having a usual place of business in Boston" rightly imported a voluntary, unincorporated association was held fatally defective on its face in not naming any defendant. The court said that the writ is the foundation of an action at law. To it resort must be had to ascertain the parties. It alone describes the defendant. No person or legal entity was described as defendant in the writ here in question because a voluntary unincorporated association cannot be a party to litigation. It has no capacity to sue or to be sued in its own name alone. The writ therefore appeared to describe something nonexistent as defendant.

It was pointed out by the court that a voluntary association "under a written instrument or declaration of trust, the beneficial interest under which is divided into transferable certificates of participation or shares" may in restricted and specified instances be sued as if it were a corporation, G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 182, §§ 1, 6. In order that an action may be maintained under that statute, the defendant should be so described in the writ as to show in substance that it is rightly suable under its name as an association in accordance with the statute. Bouchard v. First People's Trust Co., 253 Mass. 351. See Moynihan v. Murphy, id. 110.

DECISIONS AFFECTING CORPORATION EXCISES.

COMMISSIONER OF BANKS vs. HIGHLAND TRUST COMPANY & ANOTHER.

283 Mass. 71.

Middlesex. October 5, 1932. — May 24, 1933.

Trust Company, Liquidation. Tax, Excise. Commonwealth.

Since no provision is to be found in the statutes giving to the Commonwealth a preference over other creditors for the payment in full of excise taxes due from a trust company which is in process of liquidation by the commissioner of banks, it is held that the court can recognize no such preference. In such a case the Commonwealth must file proof of claim for the amount due, and accept such dividend as may be declared to general creditors.

G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 167, §§ 22-36, both inclusive, is a comprehensive statute purporting to cover the whole field of the taking of possession of the property and business of a trust company under specified conditions when demanded by the public welfare to liquidate its affairs and to distribute its assets by way of dividends. Under the legislative policy which it declares, the commissioner of banks acts as a public officer and not as a receiver appointed by the court. Although he is vested with powers often conferred upon receivers, and subject in many particulars to the control of the court, he is nevertheless a public officer with whose appointment and conduct as prescribed by the statute the court has no responsibility. It is a general principle that the enactment of a statute, seemingly designed to embrace completely a branch of administrative law, impliedly repeals the statutes and supersedes the common law theretofore governing the subject.

Trust companies were taken out of the operation of receivership laws by the Acts of 1910, chapter 399, when the present law in its main features was enacted. It contained no provisions as to preferences of sums due to the Commonwealth. It would have been simple to include a clause to that effect if it had been intended. This was done in the law as to insolvent estates by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 216, § 118, although that chapter is suspended by the Federal bankruptcy law; but the insolvency statute does not apply to banks. § 143. Taxes have a precedence in obligation for payment because government depends for its support upon their prompt and full payment. But preferences in statutory settlements of defunct corporations must be found in the governing enactment.

The commissioner of corporations and taxation is given authority by G. L.

(Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 73, to collect excise taxes like those here in question by action in contract in the name of the Commonwealth. This power is sufficient to enable the Commonwealth to file and prove its claim as a creditor without difficulty. Taxes are not commonly classified as debts. Boston v. Turner, 201 Mass. 190. A "tax does not create a contract. It is a unilateral act of superior power, not depending for its effect upon concurrence of the party taxed." Alabama v. United States, 282 U. S. 502.

The provisions of the Massachusetts law as to notice to "persons" and "creditors" [G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 167, § 28] are manifestly intended to be broad enough to comprise the claim of the Commonwealth for its excise taxes. "Administrative remedies for the collection of taxes, if not made exclusive by statute, do not preclude the recovery of the tax by" other appropriate and authorized process. Shriver v. Woodbine Savings Bank, 285 U. S. 467.

The court further held that the circumstance that one of the excise taxes may not have accrued until after the liquidation proceedings started constitutes no reason why proof of it should not be filed.

SAMUEL H. SULLIVAN vs. F. E. ATTEAUX & CO., INC.

Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933), 2079.

Suffolk. October 3, 1933. — December 2, 1933.

Contract, Construction, For sale of land, Performance and breach. Deed, Warranty. Waiver.

In an action of contract to recover a deposit made under an agreement of the plaintiff to buy, and of the defendant Massachusetts corporation to sell, real estate owned by the corporation, the question of interest from a taxing viewpoint is whether a provision in the agreement of sale that "premises are to be conveyed by a good and sufficient corporation deed, subject to any and all unpaid taxes and tax titles," includes the excise tax, levied or to be levied at the time of the execution of the agreement.

On the extended date on which it was agreed title was to pass, a deed was tendered to the plaintiff who defaulted, giving as his only reason that he was unable to raise the balance of the purchase money. On the following day the plaintiff requested the attorney of the defendant corporation to return the deposit money on the ground that the corporation could not give a deed in accordance with the agreement because (1) it had failed to give notice to the commissioner of corporations and taxation of a sale other than in the usual course of business as required by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63 § 76, and (2) that there were two outstanding undischarged attachments of record against the property.

The return of the deposit was refused on the ground that on September 12, 1928, the date when title was to pass, there was no outstanding tax or excise against the corporation and, of the two attachments, one was a non-entry and the other had been put on the inactive list and discharged automatically.

The court said that the agreement of the defendant corporation to convey "a good and sufficient deed" entitled the plaintiff to receive a good marketable title, that is, a title free from encumbrances beyond a reasonable doubt, but did not give him the right to receive a good record title free from the possibility or suspicion of a defect. It is established that a title not good on the record may be shown by evidence independent of the record to be marketable beyond reasonable doubt. The attachments referred to clearly did not constitute such encumbrance or defect in the corporation's title as to prevent it from being marketable beyond a reasonable doubt.

The plaintiff contended, however, that the failure of the corporation to notify the commissioner of corporations and taxation in conformity with G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 76, of "the proposed sale or transfer" other than in the usual course of business did constitute such an encumbrance for the reason that the statute cited "accelerates the time for the assessment as well as for collection" (Springdale Finishing Co. v. Commonwealth, 242 Mass. 37, 42) of the excise tax ordinarily due on September 20, 1928 so that such excise would have been due on September 12, 1928, and should have been included under the provision in the agreement 'all unpaid taxes.'

The court upheld the ruling that the plaintiff could not recover the deposit. It made it clear that its decision was based on the fact that the plaintiff had refused to accept the deed tendered by the defendant corporation, giving as his only reason that he could not raise the balance of the purchase money, although he had previously heard of the attachments and of the failure of the corporation to notify the commissioner of corporations and taxation. Such conduct under Massachusetts decisions constituted a waiver of his right to object to the title later. It was not necessary, the court said, that the defendant corporation come with the deed and certificates showing no record cloud on the title, and with a receipt from the commonwealth of the excise tax which was not payable until September 20, 1928, if the plaintiff refused to go on with the purchase for the unqualified reason that he could not pay the balance on September 12, 1928. Even if the power to seize the premises under a warrant for the payment of an excise were an encumbrance and yet did not fall within the limitation of the agreement provision for unpaid taxes, the decision would have been the same.

However, it was brought out, assuming that the excise tax was an encumbrance, as the plaintiff contended, or would have been one if there had been a sale or transfer of the property without notification of the commissioner of corporations and taxation five days before the proposed sale or transfer, that under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 72, which provides that the warrant for the payment of the excise tax "shall not run against the body of any person nor shall any property of such delinquent corporation . . . be exempt from seizure and sale thereon," the court thought the right of the commonwealth to follow the land sold is such that the excise tax is brought within the limitation of the agreement to convey the premises "subject to any and all unpaid taxes, and tax title if there be any."

Tax, Excise on corporation. Words, "Real estate."

In the computation of an excise based upon the amount of "corporate excess," deduction was denied a Massachusetts business corporation for the value of a leasehold estate, including a building in which it had some right but not the right of removal, standing on leased land, situated in New York, and let to various tenants for light manufacturing purposes.

The "corporate excess" of a domestic corporation is defined by law as "the fair value of its capital stock on the last day of the taxable year . . . less the value" on such date of certain allowable deductions. St. 1927, c. 258, § 1 (G. L. [Ter. Ed.] c. 63, § 30, cl. 3). The corporation contended that it was entitled to deduct the value of the leasehold estate under the provision of law granting to a domestic corporation deduction for the value of "its real estate, machinery, merchandise and other tangible property situated in another state or country . . .". It appealed from the decision of the Board of Tax Appeals, which sustained the Commissioner's refusal to deduct the value of the leasehold in another state, on the ground that the governing statutes should be given a construction which will fully accomplish the general purpose of preventing double taxation.

The court referred to the history of the law and pointed out that the deduction with respect to property situated outside Massachusetts in its original form read as follows: "In case of a domestic business corporation the value of the works, structures, real estate, machinery, poles, underground conduits, wires and pipes owned by it within the commonwealth subject to local taxation, . . . also the value of its property situated in another state or country and subject to taxation therein." (See St. 1909, c. 490, Part III, § 41.) The purpose of this deduction was to prevent double taxation. By St. 1919, c. 355, § 1 (3), the words "subject to taxation therein" were stricken from the law upon the representation to the Legislature that domestic business corporations were being deprived of the intended protection against double taxation, as to machinery and merchandise situated in New York and certain other states, by the adoption by those states of excise taxes instead of direct property taxes, with the result that the value of machinery and merchandise thus indirectly taxed could not be deducted in Massachusetts as "property situated in another state or country and subject to taxation therein." At the same time, in order to conform to a then recent decision that only tangible property was meant (Simplex Electric Heating Co. v. Commonwealth, 227 Mass. 225) the provision for the deduction of the value of "property" in other states was recast to read as first quoted, "its real estate, machinery, merchandise and other tangible property situated in another state or country . . . ."

In view of this history the court held that the deductions granted to a domestic business corporation do not include the value of a leasehold estate in another jurisdiction. Such a leasehold is not to be considered real estate or other tangible property for the purpose of deduction from corporate excess value. The court pointed out that the Legislature used substantially the same words — "real estate . . . owned by it" and "its real estate" — to describe deductible real estate within and without Massachusetts. It was conceded that these words are capable of including a leasehold but since it is a tax statute that is being construed and the idea of the deduction is that the real estate is likely to be taxed directly where it is situated whether in Massachusetts or some other state, the court thought it clear that the Legislature did not intend the words "real estate" to have a different meaning according to the location of the property in one state or another. The meaning naturally intended is that given by the Massachusetts tax laws with respect to property situated within its borders and the taxation of leaseholds is not contemplated. A real estate tax is a tax upon the land as a whole. So far as the leasehold was tangible property, it was real estate, and not to be considered by itself for purposes of taxation. Neither was the building on the leased property "real estate" or "other tangible property of the corporation." It was not to be considered apart from the land any more than it would have been if located here. The taxing of a building apart from the land upon which it stands is likewise not contemplated by the Massachusetts tax laws. G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, § 3.

A later provision of law making the value of certain leaseholds deductible applies only to property within Massachusetts. So far as it has any bearing in the present case it indicates only that the words "real estate" did not include leaseholds before.

The character of the leaseholds of the corporation with respect to being "its real estate" or not, was held not to be affected by the circumstance that the tax payer was bound by the covenants of the lease to pay the taxes assessed on the leased land.

DECISIONS AFFECTING THE INCOME TAX.

EDWARD TUELLS vs. GRACE L. FLINT.

283 Mass. 106.

Essex. October 7, 1932. — May 26, 1933.

Conservator. Probate Court, Appeal, Parties. Domicil. Jurisdiction. Constitutional Law, Full faith and credit.

This case is printed here for what is said in regard to the determination of domicil and for the statement of the principle that the adjudication of the fact of domicil by a court of one state is of no probative force upon the question of domicil raised in the courts of another state in a contest between different parties.

A relative of a childless widow who had long been a resident of Massachusetts, petitioned for the appointment of a conservator to care for her considerable amount of property in this state. There was no question of the respondent's mental weakness or that her domicil was here until December, 1930, when she went to the house of an aunt in Maine where she has since remained. There was testimony to the effect that she considered her indefinite stay in her aunt's house in Maine as a visit, that she was not happy there and had great difficulty in making up her mind to any course of conduct.

The court repeated the definition of domicil to be found in Commonwealth v. Edgar B. Davis, preceding, [Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933), 1551] and reiterated the general principles there set forth governing the nature, acquisition and change of domicil. It added that mere absences from home even for somewhat prolonged periods do not work a change of domicil. Intention without the concurrence of the fact of residence is not sufficient to change or create domicil. Both must coexist. Aspiration, hope, desire, or mere verbal assertion, although evidence of intention, cannot overcome the force of irrefutable facts. Cases arise in which there is a distinction between domicile and residence. A person may have a residence in one place for various reasons comparatively temporary in nature such as performing the duties of an office, transacting a business, seeking improvement in health, pursuing pleasure, or visiting relatives, and yet have his permanent home or domicile in a different place.

In the case under consideration, the court held that the retention of the respondent's home in Salem, keeping it fully furnished and in repair, her refusal to rent or sell it, with other facts, such as the management of her affairs mainly by a Salem attorney, the keeping of her checking account in Salem, and the payment of her income tax in Massachusetts, amply justified the finding of the trial judge that she had never lost her domicile in Salem. It found it unnecessary to determine whether such a finding might be supported on the ground that evidence warranted the conclusion that her mental condition was such that she was unable to form and execute an intention to change her domicile.

On the day following the filing of the present petition, there was filed in the probate court of the appropriate county in Maine a petition from which resulted a decree appointing a national bank in Maine as her guardian. Only those relatives having an interest in establishing the respondent's domicile in Maine were given an opportunity to be heard, however. It was contended that upon the introduction of this record of the Maine Court the Massachusetts Probate Court should dismiss the present petition for the appointment of a conservator as outside its jurisdiction.

The court held it to be plain that under the provisions of G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 201, § 1, the Probate Court of Essex County had a jurisdiction at least over the property of the respondent in Massachusetts and could rightly appoint a conservator. It was said in Thormann v. Frame, 176 U. S. 350, at page 356, "it is thoroughly settled that the constitutional provision that full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the judicial proceedings of other States, does not preclude inquiry into the jurisdiction of the court in which the judgment is rendered, over the subject-matter, or the parties affected by it, or into the facts necessary to give such jurisdiction." A presumption is always indulged in favor of the regularity and validity of a judgment rendered by a court of general and superior jurisdiction of another state. But the determination by a court of one state as to the domicile of a decedent does not bind the courts of another state as to such domicile with respect to property within its territory. Each state has full jurisdiction over its inhabitants and the property within its boundaries. The result is that the question of domicile in a case like the present is one not concluded under the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States by an adjudication of the court of a sister state rendered in the circumstances above set forth.

COMMONWEALTH vs. EDGAR B. DAVIS.

Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933) 1551.

284 Mass. 41.

Suffolk. November 16, 1932. — September 12, 1933.

Domicil. Tax, Income. Evidence, Presumptions and burden of proof. Practice Civil, Exceptions: Contents of bill.

In an action of contract to recover an income tax assessed upon a large amount of dividends received by one who was admittedly a resident of Massachusetts until the last week of December, 1926, the principal issue was whether a change of domicile had been accomplished under the following facts.

The defendant was a single man of large wealth, a native of Brockton, Massachusetts, where he had lived for over thirty years and which he continued to look upon as his legal domicile when, through extensive travel and widening business interests, he became accustomed to being absent from America about three fourths of the time. He voted in Brockton whenever possible, paid taxes there where he retained considerable financial interests, and generally maintained deep attachments for the place where all his near relatives resided.

In 1925, a corporation which he had organized in 1919, to engage in the oil prospecting business and of which he owned substantially all the stock, became financially very successful and the defendant received from it large sums by way of dividends. In July 1926, after conferences as to the rate at which this income should be taxed and also the rate at which his 1926 income would be taxed if, as contemplated, the assets were sold to another corporation, the defendant was notified that his dividends from the oil stock received in 1925 would be assessed at the rate of six per cent. That tax was paid in October 1926 and the contention again raised, not that income received during 1926 was exempt from taxation, but that the rate should be three per cent rather than six per cent. The defendant later testified that at this time he thought of changing his domicile but felt unable to make the change since he never wanted to lose contact with his friends and relatives in Brockton and wanted to retain the use of the family homestead. The Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation replied on December 14, 1926, that the same principles of law must be applied to transactions involving large and small amounts and that the income from the oil company must be taxed at six per cent. Thereafter, by advice of counsel, the defendant took various steps to avoid payment of the Massachusetts income tax.

Leaving Brockton on December 21, the defendant arrived on December 25, 1926, in a small town in Texas, receiving on that date the deed to a house which a friend gave him with the understanding that he and his family might continue to occupy it as long as they wished. Some of his personal effects were sent to the house which was kept substantially the same as before except that the defendant paid the expenses. Elaborate arrangements were made to show a change of domicile; he wrote to the registrars of voters requesting the removal of his name from the voting list, telegraphed to the assessors and the city clerk of Brockton, and wrote to the Commissioner, notifying them that he had become a citizen of Texas and had ceased to be a citizen of Brockton, and published a notice to that effect in the local newspaper.

On December 28 he paid a poll tax in Luling, Texas, although none was due, and since December 21, 1926 has made Federal income tax returns and paid Federal income taxes to the collector of internal revenue in Texas, has voted there, and has given that address on hotel registers. He remained there, however, but five days after his arrival, being called away on business. Since December, 1926 the defendant has been as frequently in Brockton and at the family summer home as before, has retained his office in Brockton, adding after his name on the door "of Luling, Texas," and maintained deposits in two Brockton banks. He was in Texas less than before his alleged change of domicile.

A main contention of the defendant was that there was no evidence to support the finding that he did not change his domicile from Massachusetts to Texas. He did not contend that he would not be subject to the Massachusetts income tax laws for the year 1926 if his domicile remained in Brockton after December 31, 1926 but held that the attempt to tax him in 1927, under the circumstances described, violated his state and federal constitutional rights.

The court said that since it was admitted that the domicile was and always has been Brockton until December 25, 1926, that domicile is presumed to have continued, in the absence of compelling evidence that it was changed. Every one must have a domicile somewhere. Every one has a domicile of origin. Domicile of origin is not lost until a new domicile is actually acquired. The burden of proof of such change rested upon the defendant because he is the one who asserted that such change had taken place and set it up as an affirmative defense. In order to prevail he must prove it.

It was pointed out as a familiar principle that ascertainment of the domicile of an individual is mainly a question of fact to be determined from all the evidence and circumstances. It rarely can be ruled as a matter of law in the absence of binding admissions or agreements as to facts that particular facts have been proved, or that the burden of proof has been sustained. This is especially true when the evidence consists in essential particulars of oral testimony and the facts depend upon the degree of credibility to be attributed to a witness.

It is difficult, the court said, if not impracticable to give a definition of domicile at once accurate and comprehensive. It commonly depends upon no one fact or combination of circumstances but upon all the factors disclosed in the particular case. In general it is said to be the place of actual residence with intention to remain permanently or for an indefinite time and without any certain purpose to return to a former place of abode. "In general terms, one may be designated as an inhabitant of that place, which constitutes the principal seat of his residence, of his business, pursuits, connections, attachments, and of his political and municipal relations."

In the present case manifestly the defendant had deep attachments in Brockton where most if not all his near relatives resided and where he had considerable financial interests. Doubtless one may change his residence in order to live under different tax laws. But when that is the underlying purpose of an attempt by any one to change his domicile, it is but natural that his testimony be scrutinized with care to determine whether it establishes all facts necessary to accomplish that result. "A man cannot elect to make one place his home for the general purposes of life, and another place his home for the purposes of taxation."

In a statement intended to influence the Commissioner as a public officer, the defendant disclosed that his alleged change of domicile was made under "Divine Guidance" and "is the result of religious conviction," but did not mention that his real reason was to avoid the Massachusetts income tax law. This omission, he testified, was unintentional on his part.

The court said in trying to ascertain what is the deep and settled intent of a person, much may depend upon his manner of testifying. The credibility of witnesses is ordinarily for the fact-finding tribunal. Candor is always important. It was for the jury to determine in this case whether all the facts as they found them manifested a real intention to change the domicile of a lifetime in Massachusetts and to fix it in Texas, and whether, if such purpose sufficiently appeared, there was an actual change of residence or merely an ostensible and temporary sojourn to escape from what the defendant regarded as excessive taxation. The fact that he made no change in his method of living, the relative attractiveness to him of Brockton, Massachusetts, and Luling, Texas, as places of abode, the small amount of time spent and the meagre personal belongings left in the latter place, and the evidence as to his philanthropic, social and family interests, the various reasons for the change put forward from time to time and the very elaborateness of his formal public announcements on the subject, all might have been regarded as negating, or at least as failure to prove, a change of domicile.

The court accordingly held that the case falls within the general rule that there was no error of law in the denial of the defendant's request for the direction of a verdict in his favor on a point depending upon oral testimony. Whether the defendant had sustained the burden of proof resting upon him as to a change of his domicile was for the jury, whose answer that his domicile was not changed was justified.

The defendant sought to incorporate a further exception over the objection of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation as to the invalidity of the tax on the ground of classification of the taxable income as strict income taxable at six per cent instead of capital gains taxable at three per cent. The court pointed out that the rights of an excepting party are not defeated by mere verbal errors or unimportant defects in phraseology, but if a party files a bill containing certain exceptions and omits altogether to state another exception, it cannot be added against the objection of the other party after the expiration of the time for filing exceptions. The original bill as filed conveyed no intimation of contention as to the invalidity of the tax on any other ground than a change of domicile. Evidence as to the details of the ultimate sale during 1926 of the property from which the income tax was derived, at most, served as a background for the chief contention as to change of domicile. But even if the questions of rate of taxation and the constitutionality of the tax were to be regarded as open, the result would not be changed as the Commissioner is sustained in levying the tax by various decisions which hold in similar circumstances that such income as that received by the defendant was taxable at the rate of six per cent and that there was no constitutional objection.

HARVARD TRUST COMPANY, trustee, vs. COMMISSIONER OF CORPORATIONS AND TAXATION.

Mass. Adv. Sh. (1933), 1899.
284 Mass. 225.

Suffolk. November 23, 1932. — October 31, 1933.

Tax, On income. Conflict of Laws.

A Massachusetts trust company, duly appointed in Vermont as trustee under the will of a deceased resident of that state, contended for the total abatement of a tax levied in Massachusetts by the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation on gains realized from purchases and sales of securities, belonging to the principal of the trust estate, which it held in trust and kept here.

The will gave the residue of the testator's estate to the trust company in trust for certain payments of the net income to the testator's children, one of whom resided in Massachusetts, one in Vermont and one in Illinois, and for the distribution of the principal, upon the termination of the trust, among their issue. The persons entitled to the remainder were accordingly unknown or unascertained.

The trust company, under the General Laws of Vermont (§§ 5013, 5014, 5015, as amended by Acts of 1925, No. 84), upon which it later relied, filed a stipulation agreeing that "any funds, securities or property" held by it by virtue of its appointment as trustee in Vermont should be "taxed in the same manner and to the same extent as funds of the same character held by a banking corporation or a trust company" in Vermont. It had accordingly received a certificate of authority to act as trustee in that state and had been assessed a property tax there. Its contention was that the tax so paid prevented a legal assessment of the income in Massachusetts.

The tax was assessed in Massachusetts under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 62, § 10 which, as it then stood, (1929), provided materially as follows: "The income received by estates held in trust by trustees, any one of whom is an inhabitant of the commonwealth . . . shall be subject to the taxes assessed by this chapter to the extent that the persons to whom the income from the trust is payable, or for whose benefit it is accumulated, are inhabitants of the commonwealth. Income accumulated in trust for the benefit of unborn or unascertained persons or persons with contingent interests shall be taxed as if accumulated for the benefit of inhabitants of the commonwealth."

If subject to taxation in Massachusetts, the gains on which the tax was assessed, belonging to the body of the trust fund, were taxable as income accumulated for the benefit of those interested in the remainder who confessedly were unborn or unascertained. The trust company being incorporated under Massachusetts laws and having its principal place of business here, is well established as an inhabitant of and domiciled in this state.

In the absence of any interpretation in similar facts by the Supreme Court of Vermont, it became the duty of the court to construe subsection V of the Vermont General Laws, c. 38, § 703, as amended by Acts of 1929, No. 21, under the first clause of which the Vermont property tax was assessed according to evidence received from the local assessors or "listers." It found that this statute in its first clause provides for a tax on the corpus of the fund to a resident trustee only in the event that the beneficiary resides outside Vermont. It makes no provision for a tax on the body of the fund when, as in this case, the trustee is a nonresident. The equitable interest of the beneficiaries resident in Vermont alone could have been taxed under that part of that subsection. No situs of the trust in Vermont for taxation purposes was created. In no part of subsection five did the court find any authority to levy a tax on the body of the trust fund, but only on the equitable interest of a beneficiary.

It was accordingly held that the exercise of the taxing power by Vermont was no bar to the tax levied by Massachusetts on gains from purchases or sales of securities belonging to the principal of the trust fund.

Reliance by the trust company upon the Vermont law cited, with which it had complied, requiring the submission by a foreign banking corporation or trust company acting as trustee to the authority of that state for purposes of taxation, the court held to be of no avail since the method of such taxation is left to be determined by subsection V. The same difficulties about treating a nonresident corporate trustee as subject to taxation on the body of the trust fund remain as existed before its enactment. The views of the assessors levying the tax create no presumption as to the validity of the tax.

Taxation of income received by a resident trustee accruing within a state upon gains from sales of intangible securities held within the state, the court said, cannot be held free from an income tax because payable ultimately to unascertained or unborn persons. The receipt of such income is sufficient basis for taxation. The securities on which the gains taxed were realized, were held physically in Massachusetts by their legal owner resident here. Presumably the profits accruing from the sales were received here. This is income of a nature different from dividends and interest. Tax Commissioner v. Putnam, 227 Mass. 522, 531. Such income may be taxed here. Farmers Loan Co. v. Minnesota, 280 U. S. 204, 210.

Doubtless it would have been within the power of the state of Vermont to fix a situs there for the taxation of the corpus of a trust fund held by such a foreign trust company as is here contending for abatement, but until jurisdiction to that end has been exercised, the court saw no bar to an exercise of the right of taxation by the state of the actual residence of the trustee. The provisions for taxing equitable interests so far as valid and applicable do not have the effect of excluding the jurisdiction of Massachusetts to tax the income of the trust to a trustee resident here where presumably the income was received and is held. The situs of intangible property in these conditions follows the person of the trustee. In all essential constitutional and other aspects the court found this case to be governed by First National Bank v. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, 279 Mass. 168, 171.

These conclusions the court said were not affected by St. 1928, c. 128, granting reciprocal privileges to banking associations and corporations of other states. That act relates to the doing of business and does not purport to change the laws of taxation. Nor is this decision affected by the amendment of G. L. c. 62, § 10 by St. 1931, c. 456, which made material changes as to income subsequently received in 1931 and thereafter.

MARY H. SAYLES vs. COMMISSIONER OF CORPORATIONS AND TAXATION.

Mass. Adv. Sheets (1934), 625.

286 Mass. . . .

Suffolk. November 17, 1933. — March 30, 1934.

Tax, On income. Interest. Words, "Interest from Bonds."

An inhabitant of Massachusetts paid an income tax upon interest received from certain bonds which contained provisions in substance that the corporations issuing them would reimburse a Massachusetts holder thereof for any income tax imposed by the state. Application to the corporations for such reimbursement was duly made by the tax payer but the sum so received was not included in any return of taxable income.

In an appeal from the decision of the Board of Tax Appeals upholding the refusal of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation to abate an additional tax thereupon assessed, the only issue was whether the amount received by the taxpayer as reimbursement for the tax paid by her on interest received from the bonds was in turn taxable as "interest from bonds" under G. L. c. 62 § 1 (a), which provides as follows: "Income of the classes described in subsections (a), (b), (c) and (e) received by any inhabitant of the commonwealth during the preceding calendar year, shall be taxed at the rate of six per cent per annum. (a) Interest from bonds, notes, money at interest and all debts due the person to be taxed . . ."

In the opinion of the court, the word "interest" as here used should be taken in its usual sense defined in a previous decision as "the compensation fixed by the parties or allowed by law for the use of money or as damages for its detention." The bonds obligated the corporations issuing them to make regular periodical payments of sums of money computed at a stated rate on the principal amount of the bonds. Such payments are manifestly to be made as compensation for the use of that amount of money and are generally and properly described as payments of "interest." The bonds contain a further obligation of the corporation to any owner residing in Massachusetts. Such an owner is entitled to receive not only interest at the stated rate but, as well, a further sum of money if the amount he has received as "interest" becomes depleted by the payment of an income tax assessed to the bond owner based on that "interest." By reason of this tax refund provision, which made the bonds more salable and desirable to an investor, the owner's actual yearly income from the bonds was not permanently diminished by reason of the payment of that income tax. The total income from a bond containing a tax refund provision is the stipulated interest plus the amount of the refund. The court pointed out that these two elements are not severable in source or purpose. From the time the bonds were issued the refund provision was an integral part of the corporation's promise to pay compensation for the use of money.

Income thus received by a Massachusetts bond owner by way of reimbursement under a tax refund provision to insure his receipt of the full amount of interest at the rate stated in the bonds was held to be taxable under the statutory classification "interest from bonds."

To the contention of the taxpayer that if a tax on the refund already made was held valid the corporation would be compelled to refund the amount of that additional tax and there would be a succession of such taxes and refunds in diminishing amounts, the court replied that it had been deemed a sufficient reference to a similar argument to say that since no attempt had been made to collect such further taxes it was not necessary to answer such argument. Even if it assumed without deciding that such result were possible, the court saw no reason to attach a more restricted meaning than here given to the words "interest from bonds."

DECISION AFFECTING GASOLINE EXCISE.

JOHN BRADY vs. HENRY F. LONG.

Mass. Adv. Sh. (1934), 201.

Suffolk. November 16, 1933. — February 15, 1934.

Refund of gasoline excise — Accuracy of determination of claim.

This is a case brought to determine whether or not a writ of mandamus would lie against the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation to compel him to approve for payment and submit to the comptroller of the Commonwealth for certification a claim presented by the petitioner for reimbursement of the excise tax paid under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) Chapter 64A in connection with purchases of gasoline which the petitioner alleged was not consumed in the operation of motor vehicles upon or over the highways of the Commonwealth.

The petitioner operated a number of motor trucks which beside travelling on the highways were part of the time in operation on private land while being loaded or unloaded and the claim for refund was based on the estimated amount of gasoline consumed by the trucks while they were upon private land. The petitioner stated that it is impossible and impracticable to calculate and itemize the amount of gasoline not used over or upon the highways with more than reasonable certainty and that the amounts computed were calculated with such reasonable certainty as was possible and practical. The Commissioner denied the application for refund on the ground that it was not based on any accurate measurement but on an estimate. The court held that the Commissioner was justified in his denial, and that the statute was not to be construed as requiring payments from the treasury of the Commonwealth, of claims for reimbursement, the amount of which it is impossible and impracticable to calculate and itemize even if such a claim can be calculated and itemized with such reasonable certainty as is possible and practicable.

The board of assessors and not the town is the party respondent in an appeal taken by a person aggrieved by the refusal of assessors to abate a tax.

A board of selectmen of a town has no power to authorize an attorney to appear for the board of assessors in an appeal to the Board of Tax Appeals from the refusal of the assessors to abate a tax.

The Board has the authority and the duty, either by express grant or by necessary implication, to determine, in case of dispute, whether a person claiming the right to appear for a party is that party's attorney or agent, and to exclude from participation in a proceeding a person claiming to represent a party as attorney or agent whose appearance it finds is unauthorized. The name of such a person should be stricken from the docket.

Rule 4 of the Board of Tax Appeals, providing that upon the filing of a petition with the clerk of the board, "the appellant shall forthwith serve a copy thereof upon the appellee" is not unreasonable, and must be construed together with G. The word "forthwith" in the rule means without unnecessary delay, or as soon as reasonably may be under all the circumstances.

Where service of a copy of a petition appealing to the Board of Tax Appeals from a decision of a board of assessors was not made until eighteen days after the filing of the petition, and in the meanwhile the sixty days limited by G. L. c. 59, § 65, as amended by St. 1933, c. 167, § 1, had expired, it was held that the conditions necessary to the board's jurisdiction of the appeal had not been fulfilled.

The power of assessors to make a decision on an application for abatement of a tax, subject to appeal under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, §§ 64, 65, is exhausted by its first exercise, and after the right of appeal from such decision has expired it cannot be revived by a second application and a decision thereon.

A petition should state the names of all persons who it is claimed are aggrieved by the refusal of assessors to abate a tax, in whose behalf the petition is filed.

A person applying to the assessors for abatement of a tax on real estate, under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, §§ 59, 61, must include in his application "a sufficient description of the particular real estate as to which an abatement is requested," but is not required to furnish further information concerning his real estate to the assessors.

No abatement of a tax on personal property, under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, §§ 61, 64, 65, may be had if the list required by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, § 29, was not seasonably filed, unless there was good cause for the delay.

|-------------|---------------------|-----|---|-----------------------|

On appeals to the Board of Tax Appeals from decisions of assessors on applications for abatement, it is the function and duty of the board to hear and determine anew every issue of fact raised by the pleadings, on evidence introduced before the board.

In such an appeal, where the appellant alleges that the property assessed was overvalued, that fact is an essential part of the appellant's case, and the burden is on the appellant to prove the fact.

The assessors' record of assessments is not evidence of value of the property assessed.

Failure of a party to testify or offer evidence within his reach to control or explain evidence given by others, adversely affecting his rights or interests, is a circumstance entitled to consideration, and may be regarded as conduct in the nature of an admission. (For Appellant.)

In an appeal taken under G. L. c. 59, § 65, prior to the amendments made by St. 1933, c. 130, § 2, and c. 167, § 1, the burden of proof was on the appellant to show that the petition was filed within thirty days of the giving of the notice of the assessors' decision, and where the petition was not filed within that time the appeal must be dismissed. (For Appellee.)

|--------------|-----------------|-----|--|----------|

In general, the term "literary, benevolent, charitable and scientific institutions," as used in G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, § 5, cl. 3, covers those institutions whose purposes and activities are charitable in the broad sense, which embraces the improvement and promotion of the happiness of man.

In order to come within the exemption given by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, § 5, cl. 3, the dominant purpose and activities of an institution must be for the public good. A society or club maintained primarily for the benefit of its members is not one whose property is exempted by the statute, because such an object lacks the quality of indefiniteness essential to a public charity.

The burden is on the appellant claiming an exemption under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, § 5, cl. 3, to show clearly that it comes within the terms of the exemption.

|-----------------------------|-----------------|----|---|----------|

Applications for abatement of 1933 taxes left with a member of the board of assessors on January 1, 1934, and taken to the office of the board on January 2, were seasonably filed.

The refusal of the board to abate taxes on the ground that such applications were filed too late is a decision on the applications though the reason stated was erroneous in law.

Appeals to the Board of Tax Appeals taken more than sixty days after notice of such a decision are not within the board's jurisdiction and the lack of jurisdiction must be considered by the board of its own motion.

In determining exemption from taxation of real estate under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 59, § 5, cl. 3, it was held that the beneficial aims and objects of a corporation organized for a charitable purpose are not deprived of their character of a public charity even though the class to be benefited may be limited to the members of a particular race or religion.

In determining whether a payment of money is interest, the underlying question is whether the amount paid is compensation for the use of money or for some collateral undertaking by the lender. If a lender makes no collateral agreement, anything paid by the borrower beyond the amount of the loan must be compensation for the use of the money loaned, and is therefore interest.

A sum of money received by a taxpayer holding corporate bonds, as a tax refund, under an agreement in the bonds that the corporation will reimburse any bearer or registered holder thereof who is a resident of Massachusetts for any income tax imposed by the Commonwealth on account of interest from such bonds, on condition that application for refund is made within a specified time after payment of the tax, is interest taxable under G. L. c. 62, § 1 (a).

L. c. 62, § 11.

The provision in G. L. c. 62, § 1 (g) that "accumulated profits shall not be regarded as capital under this provision" is not applicable to the distribution by a trustee of the principal of a trust fund under a will.

The principal office and one of the two sales offices of a foreign corporation in the wholesale lumber business were in Boston, where New England orders and remittances were received, where the corporation's most active bank account was maintained, from which New England salesmen and dividends were paid, and also where the corporate books, records and securities were kept, the treasurer's office located and the directors' meetings held.

It was held that the corporation was not engaged exclusively in interstate commerce but did some local business in Massachusetts and hence was subject to the excise imposed by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, §§ 39-43.

Where a foreign corporation owned substantially all the capital stocks of its subsidiaries, from which it purchased lumber for shipments to its customers, which subsidiaries did no business and owned no property in Massachusetts, held that such stocks are not assets employed in business within the Commonwealth and no part of their value should be included in the determination of the corporate excess employed within the Commonwealth by the Corporation.

Billboards, erected and maintained by a corporation on land in this State under contracts (distinguished from leases) with the land owners giving an exclusive right to maintain advertising signs on the premises, are not "works, structures or real estate," the value of which is deductible under G. L. c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (a), in determining corporate excess.

Billboards so maintained outside Massachusetts are not "real estate, machinery and merchandise" within the meaning of those words as used in G. L. c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (d) so as to result in a deduction from the corporate excess of the corporation for any portion of its cash, accounts and bills receivable, excluding notes, attributable to an office outside this State.

Unless a corporation owns or rents premises outside Massachusetts for the transaction of business, all its expenditures for wages, salaries, commissions or other compensation to its employees and all its gross receipts from business, under G. L. c. 63, § 38, cls. 5 and 6, are assignable to Massachusetts, although it has an office outside the Commonwealth which it does not own or pay rent for, and the portions of the remainder of net income allocated by G. L. c. 63, § 38, cl. 2 (b) and (c), must be allocated to Massachusetts.

L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 67, exceeds the minimum tax imposed by § 32. The excise imposed by § 67 is separate and distinct from that assessed to business corporations under § 32.

The term "real estate," as used in G. L. c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (c), does not include leasehold interests in real estate.

A leasehold interest in real estate in another State is not "other tangible property situated in another state," within the meaning of G. L. c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (c).

A corporation owning such a leasehold interest under a lease by the terms of which it is required to pay taxes, is not subject to double taxation if it is not allowed to deduct the value of the leasehold under G. L. c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (c), in determining corporate excess, since the tax liability is on the owner of the real estate, and the corporation's obligation is merely a contractual one under the lease.

A building for purposes of taxation is real estate with the land on which it stands, and a lessee of the real estate is not entitled to deduct the value of the building, under G. L. c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (c), even though, by agreement with the lessor, the building belongs to the lessee.

In determining the corporate excess of a domestic business corporation, it is not entitled to a deduction under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (d), where it has no real estate, machinery or merchandise outside Massachusetts.

The deduction given by G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (c), is limited to tangible property.

Cash on deposit is not deductible under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (c).

Notes, being for most purposes intangible personal property, taxable to the owner at his domicile, are not deductible under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 30, cl. 3 (c).

If cash on deposit and notes of a domestic business corporation, held in another state, are in fact subjected to taxation in that state, nevertheless, being intangible personal property, they are not allowed as a deduction in determining corporate excess under G. L. (Ter. Ed.) c. 63, § 30, cl. 3.

SPECIAL RECESS COMMITTEES AND COMMISSIONS

To the list printed upon page 57 of the department report of 1929, page 90 of 1930, page 65 of 1931, and page 90 of 1932, there may be added the following:

1. Special Report of the Director of Accounts relative to fees and allowances to Public Officers (Senate Document 5, 1933), 10 p.

2. Special Report of an Investigation relative to providing for certain annual payments by the Commonwealth to certain towns on account of the construction of certain additions to the Metropolitan Water System (House Document 228, 1933), 11 p.

3. Report of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation on ways and means for raising revenue required for financing the furnishing of adequate assistance to certain aged citizens (House Document 410, 1933), 63 p.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LEGISLATIVE ACTION

In accordance with the General Laws the following was duly communicated:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

DEPARTMENT OF CORPORATIONS AND TAXATION,
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, December 5, 1933.

To the General Court of Massachusetts.

In compliance with the provisions of section 33 of chapter 30 of the General Laws, Tercentenary edition, there is submitted herewith such part of the annual report of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation (Pub. Doc. No. 16) as contains recommendations or suggestions for legislative action, accompanied by drafts of bills.

HENRY F. LONG,
*Commissioner of Corporations
and Taxation.*

RECOMMENDATIONS
CORPORATIONS

1. Dissolution. — This recommendation is for a continuance of the practice whereby annually an act is passed to dissolve certain corporations. Many of these corporations have ceased to function; some apparently have no officers; others have failed to file certificates of condition or tax returns; and many have been enjoined by the Supreme Judicial Court by action of the Attorney General from doing business. It is requested that such of these as will be submitted be dissolved. Certain other corporations which have satisfied all requirements, and have by a vote of the corporation expressed their desire to be dissolved, are also submitted.

2. Foreign. — The proposal contained in sections 1 and 3 relates to the taxation of corporations engaged in Massachusetts exclusively in interstate commerce. The case of Alpha Portland Cement Company v. Commonwealth, 268 U. S. 203, held that the present excise cannot constitutionally be applied to such corporations. Unquestionably a tax may constitutionally be imposed upon the property, both tangible and intangible, of such corporations so far as it has a situs in Massachusetts. Probably a tax may also be imposed upon the income of such corporations earned within Massachusetts. This proposal provides for the taxation of the property and income. In order to avoid discrimination against this type of corporation provision is made whereby such a corporation may at its option be assessed under the provisions of the excise applicable to other business corporations. The proposal contained in section 2 relates to the determination of the corporate excess of foreign corporations. Undoubtedly the purpose of the Legislature in defining corporate excess was to avoid double taxation by certain deductions, but as the law is now worded deductions are required of items which are not 100 per cent present in the amount from which the deduction is to be made. This proposal corrects this situation and limits the deduction to the proper amount. To contrast the present statute with the proposal by way of formulae the following examples are set forth:

Under the present statute, assuming X represents the deductible items, the formula would read as follows:

$$\frac{\text{Value of assets employed in Mass.}}{\text{Value of total assets}} \times \text{Share value less X} = \text{Corporate Excess.}$$

Under the proposal the formula would read as follows:

$$\frac{\text{Value of assets employed in Mass. less X}}{\text{Value of total assets}} \times \text{Share value} = \text{Corporate Excess.}$$

The inconsistency in the present statute lies in the fact that the deduction is granted on the basis of gross values of assets deductible without making any allowance for liabilities of the corporation, whereas the value from which the deduction is made is in fact the net value represented by the value of the capital stock which roughly corresponds to the value of the assets after deduction for liabilities. The proposal contained in section 4 abolishes the dividend credit granted to foreign corporations. The present provision ignores the whole theory of an excise tax and attempts to give an illogical deduction to certain corporations because stockholders thereof have paid a personal income tax. It is thought that no corresponding provision exists in any other State at the present time. A similar provision in the Oregon law was declared unconstitutional. It is to be noted that during the years 1934, 1935, and 1936, the operation of the dividend credit provision is suspended. This proposal goes further and repeals it altogether.

3. Subsidiary. — The purpose of this bill is simply to make a corrective change. The context of section 39A of chapter 63 of the General Laws, inserted by chapter 303 of the Acts of 1933, clearly indicates that the word "parent" in the sixth line of the first paragraph of the section is inappropriate, and that the right intent is expressed by the word "foreign."

4. Corporate Excess. — This proposal abolishes the corporate excess measure and the capital stock minimum. It increases the rate as to the income measure from  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent to 5 per cent, to replace partially the loss in revenue resulting from abolishing corporate excess; and provides a substantial minimum based on the value of property not locally taxed, tangible and intangible, to stabilize revenue and with the increase in the income rate replace the revenue lost by abolishing the corporate excess measure. It also provides a nominal minimum tax of ten dollars for all business corporations. The purposes of these changes are in respect to administration of the corporate excess measure which has always been troublesome because of the difficulty of valuing shares of stock not freely bought and sold. Both under the existing law and under the former franchise tax the difficulty of valuing shares of stock has led to a great many claims for abatement. Recent decisions of the Board of Tax Appeals indicate that the Board will not sustain formulae produced valuations. It is accordingly impossible to lay down guiding rules for assessing clerks which will produce values which will stand the test before the Board of Tax Appeals. The filing of abatement claims is accordingly naturally invited. The number of claims which has heretofore been shrinking somewhat has this year increased over the claims of last year. It is believed that a measure of tax which tends to encourage the filing of a large number of claims for abatement should not be unnecessarily continued. The capital stock minimum raises the same question of valuation of stock that the corporate excess measure does, and should be abolished for the same reasons. With the minimum tax herein provided it is unnecessary. More than half of the revenue from the business corporation excise comes from the corporate excess measure. Obviously if the corporate excess is abolished, the loss in revenue must be compensated for in some way. An increase in the income rate from  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent to 5 per cent, coupled with the proposed minimum, will under present conditions probably about approximate this result. It is to be noted that at the present time the corporate excess measure yields far more than the income measure, due to the falling off of incomes during the period of depression. It is to be noted that the minimum proposed by this bill is not in addition to the tax with respect to income, and only becomes effective in the event that the income is so small that the minimum applies. In this respect it is distinguishable from the existing corporate excess measure, which is in addition to the tax measured by income. The 5 per cent rate on income is so correlated to the rate under the minimum (five dollars per thousand, or two-fifths of 1 per cent) that the computation of the excise is simplified very greatly and hence the expense of administration reduced. The reasons for the proposed minimum based upon property locally exempt from taxation are —

(a) To stabilize the tax yield. An income measure only would result in too great fluctuation.

(b) To more equitably place the burden of the excise as between corporations. Under existing law many corporations pay only a nominal excise, even though the grounds upon which they have been excused from a local tax upon merchandise is the payment of an excise. Indeed, it might well be held unconstitutional to continue exemption of merchandise to corporations unless the excise can be deemed to provide a reasonably substantial substitute.

(c) A rate of five dollars per thousand is probably sufficient to prevent evasion of the present income tax. If the tax on corporate excess were abolished and an inadequate minimum provided it would in many instances enable individuals to incorporate to escape the tax on interest and dividends.

It is believed that every business corporation should pay an excise of at least ten dollars. The expense of handling tax returns of corporations that might better be dissolved, and that in many instances have to be repeatedly notified of delinquency, is considerable. In cases where the retention of the charter is of real value the ten dollar minimum is so small that none can reasonably object.

If enacted into law the principal cause of complaint under the existing law would be eliminated and would reduce abatement claims from approximately 10 per cent to 1 or 2 per cent of taxes assessed. It would produce nearly the same amount of revenue as the present law with much less friction, and would more fairly distribute the tax burden as between corporations, as well as be fairer to the 90 per cent of corporations who now abide by the Commissioner's assessment. It would, in addition, simplify the work of preparation of the tax returns for the tax paying corporation, and greatly simplify administration of the law.

5. Security. — This is to prevent evasion which is made possible by a recent enactment. Section 9 of chapter 307 of the Acts of 1933 lays a tax of 6 per cent on dividends received by Massachusetts inhabitants during the years 1933, 1934 and 1935 from corporations, both domestic and foreign. It provides that subsection (b) of section 1 of chapter 62 of the General Laws shall not apply to income received during said years. Paragraph (a) of section 38B of chapter 63 (unlike the provisions of section 30) specifically limits income subject to tax to such "as would be subject to taxation under section one of chapter sixty-two." It would seem that the tax on dividends received during 1933, 1934 and 1935 is imposed by chapter 307 of the Acts of 1933, and not by chapter 62 of the General Laws. This being true it follows that investment corporations, so called, are not taxable on dividends received during these years. It seems apparent that some provision should be enacted which will prevent the accumulation by investment corporations during 1933, 1934 and 1935 of dividends to be later, say in 1936, disbursed in the form of tax-free domestic dividends. The proposed bill accordingly lays a tax upon the excess of the income received by such corporations over the amount disbursed by them in the form of dividends, during the three-year period. It is believed that this measure will prevent undue accumulation by this type of corporation and avoidance of the provisions of section 9 of chapter 307 of the Acts of 1933.

INCOME TAX.

6. Verification. — Existing law which in many instances might be construed to compel the Commissioner to expose to the taxpayer the information that he has received which indicated that the taxpayer had not made a complete return of his taxable income operates to hamper the work of the Commonwealth in investigation. It would appear that to investigate tax returns it would be advisable to give the taxing authority broad powers and similar general authority which is given to the Federal Revenue Department in making examinations. Under the existing law which might be construed to place the burden of ascertaining whether or not a taxpayer has made an error upon the taxing authority before an audit can be made is to put a premium upon carelessness and fraud. To allow a taxpayer to decide doubtful questions in his favor and leave the investigating authority handicapped is to lose taxes and encourage evasion. No matter how honest a taxpayer may be, he is apt to make mistakes. Experience shows that nearly 50 per cent of the returns investigated show errors of omission or commission. If the Commissioner is to have any power of investigation, he should be allowed full discretion.

7. Associations. — Since dividends from Massachusetts corporations, from whatever source derived, are now taxable, there is no good reason why dividends from partnerships, associations and trusts with transferable shares, which are in essence, corporations in their method of doing business, should not be taxed in the same way.

8. Deductions. — This proposal becomes necessary because of a decision of the Supreme Judicial Court, and provides for the elimination of the arbitrary deduction of 5 per cent of the assessed value less mortgages of stock in trade and other tangible property, real and personal, owned by persons taxed and used in a profession, employment, trade or business. This is an arbitrary deduction, a parallel of which is not to be found in any other income tax law in existence, and does not appear to have any sound logical basis in economics. Its continuance in the statute will not only indicate an unconstitutional provision, but also will prevent the flow of income which is properly taxable under the theory of the Massachusetts Income Tax Law.

LOCAL.

9. Exemptions. — It appearing clearly that the Commonwealth has reached a point when it is unlikely that it can continue further to add to the already crushing burdens on real property by the large exemptions that have already crept in, it would appear that at least the land which is taken by tax-exempt institutions should continue to pay a tax locally, even though the buildings which are erected thereon are freed from taxation.

10. Titles. — It appears with changes in the law in respect to tax titles that there was possibility of invalidity, and no opportunity of correcting it, when the invalid tax title was held by an individual who surrendered his claim to the collector.

11. Sales. — It would appear that there is some difficulty where a tax sale is held after September first of the year following the year of assessment, the statute now providing that subsequent taxes can be added to the tax title account as of September first each year but no opportunity was given for credits of subsequent year's taxes if the sale is held subsequent to September first of the following year.

12. Delinquencies. — Under existing law where a tax title is taken for a delinquent tax there is a period of redemption before the municipality can collect its tax through foreclosure. During this period it is possible for the owner to diminish the value of the property, as the municipality has no right of entry or possession. It is thought that the income flowing from property, so taken, should be used in the first instance to discharge the tax delinquency instead of being permitted, as now under the law, to inure to the benefit of the delinquent taxpayer who may leave the property incapable of being translated into money value, either by destruction of the property or the actual diminishing of its value.

13. Assessments. — Under existing law there is no provision to care for the warrant to the collector for omitted assessments which are subsequently laid by the assessors.

14. Collectors. — Under existing statute it is possible, where collectors are collecting on commission, for a town to have two or three collectors pursuing the same delinquent taxpayers. In some towns it has been found that there were as many as four collectors undertaking to collect taxes because under existing law they did not have to turn their books over to their successors as they were collecting on commission. The proposal herewith makes possible the continuation of commission, but prohibits more than one collector at a time in a community.

15. Corrective. — It appears that where there is reassessment there is question about the lien, and the proposal herein submitted provides that where there is a reassessment the lien shall continue as if it had been assessed properly in the first instance.

16. Assessments. — Where there are unpaid town, betterment, district or water taxes and rates of assessment, the collector, provided he is collector for both municipality and the district, in selling property for all of the accumulated delinquent charges, is sometimes unable to make the separation, particularly if the town takes the foreclosure, between the district taxes and the town taxes. In many other instances the sale is imperfect because the collector has not made the proper statement at the time of sale. Under existing law if the property is sold there should be but one deed, which, if taken by the town and kept in the custody of the town treasurer, upon redemption foreclosure and sale might not be properly apportioned as between the tax due to the town and that due to the district. This result might be the same in the event that some other than the town took. It is therefore deemed advisable to give a broader meaning to the word "taxes" as appearing in section 43 of chapter 60, so that it will be possible, where there are district and other assessments as well as the town taxes unpaid, that the property sold for taxes under the various taxing units can be properly credited with the amount to which they are entitled, whether the property is taken by the town or some other purchasers at the time of the tax sale.

COMMISSIONER'S LEGISLATIVE REPORTS

The Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation was charged by the Legislature in 1930 to make reports in respect to finding revenue to provide for the operation of the law effective July 1, 1931, to provide for adequate assistance to certain aged citizens. This report is designated as House No. 1, 1931, and was printed in my report for 1930.

Chapter 398 of the Acts of 1931 entitled "AN ACT IMPOSING AN OLD AGE ASSISTANCE TAX ON MALE INHABITANTS OF THE COMMONWEALTH ABOVE THE AGE OF TWENTY TO PROVIDE REVENUE FOR CARRYING OUT THE TERMS OF THE LAW PROVIDING ADEQUATE ASSISTANCE TO CERTAIN AGED PERSONS," provides by

SECTION 9 thereof that "The commissioner is hereby directed to consider ways and means for permanently raising the revenue required by the commonwealth and by the cities and towns thereof to provide for financing the old age assistance act, so called, giving special consideration to various forms of sales taxes, amusement taxes, luxury taxes, increases in income and inheritance taxes and any other form of additional taxation by which such revenue may be provided, and shall report to the general court his findings and recommendations, together with drafts of legislation necessary for carrying said recommendations into effect, by filing the same with the clerk of the house of representatives not later than the first Wednesday in December of the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two." (No Report made for submission to 1932 session [see Chapter 259, 1932].) (See report to the General Court; House 410, 1933.)

DIVISION OF EXCISE TAXES

There was established in the department in July, 1933, a Division of Excise Taxes to administer the gasoline tax under Chapter 64A of the General Laws (Ter. Ed.) and the excise on wines and malt beverages proposed by Chapter 120 of the Acts of 1933 as amended by Chapter 234 of the Acts of 1933. This division will also administer the excise on alcoholic beverages proposed by Chapter 376 of the Acts of 1933 when this law becomes effective on the repeal of Prohibition.

MAIN OFFICE

GASOLINE EXCISE TAX

Privilege of Registering Motor Vehicles

General Laws, Chapter 64A (Chapter 316 of 1928)

The operation of the Gasoline Tax Law in its fifth year has produced substantially the same amount of revenue as such produced in the fourth year of its operation. When the law was originally enacted, the rate of tax was two cents per gallon. The rate was increased May 1, 1931, to three cents per gallon, and this rate will be in effect until April 30, 1936.

EXCISE ON WINES AND MALT BEVERAGES

Privilege enjoyed by licensed manufacturers and wholesalers and importers

Chapter 120, Acts of 1933, Chapter 234, 1933

In Chapter 120 of the Acts of 1933 legalizing the sale in this Commonwealth of wines and malt beverages having an alcoholic content not in excess of 3.2%, there was provided in Section 10 an excise for the privilege enjoyed by licensed manufacturers and foreign manufacturers' agents in the amount of $1.00 for each and every barrel of 31 gallons of wines and malt beverages sold within the Commonwealth by such manufacturer or foreign manufacturers' agents, the tax being payable monthly to the Commissioner not later than the tenth day of the month following the month for which report was made. This act was in effect from April 7, 1933, to the repeal of Prohibition in December, 1933. Licenses were issued by the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission to 14 manufacturers and 203 foreign manufacturers' agents. Chapter 234 of the Acts of 1933 amended Section 10 of Chapter 120 of the Acts of 1933 by providing for the waiver of payment of the excise by the Commissioner in respect to any wines or beverages where it appeared an excise had already been paid under the provisions of that section. This amendment is necessary to avoid double taxation of sales of malt beverages by the licensed manufacturers and foreign manufacturers' agents.

The following table shows the amount of taxes collected between April 7, 1933, and November 30, 1933:

|                     |             |
|---------------------|-------------|
| April . . . . .     | $32,650.42 |
| May . . . . .       | 46,849.12   |
| June . . . . .      | 64,969.51   |
| July . . . . .      | 76,102.99   |
| August . . . . .    | 79,361.32   |
| September . . . . . | 70,234.56   |
| October . . . . .   | 55,641.40   |
| November . . . . .  | 41,558.00   |

Total for Year . . . . . $467,367.32

This tax was administered without any additional expense, the work being absorbed by the department. The proceeds from this tax, including the fees for licenses received by the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, were, after deducting the expenses of the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, placed in the treasury of the Commonwealth for the purpose of reimbursing the cities and towns for the State's share of the cost of the Old Age Assistance Act, Chapter 118A of the General Laws.

The administration of the gasoline tax law has been established as heretofore without any expense, the entire administration costs being absorbed by the department generally. The administrative practice was changed January 1, 1933, by eliminating those Distributors known as "licensed Distributors E" who were authorized to sell gasoline without the excise for certain non-taxable purposes, principally for use by boats. The elimination of this class of Distributors removed a possible source of tax evasion and while persons who had heretofore been able to obtain the gasoline without payment of the tax were by this arrangement compelled to pay the tax at the time of purchase, it was made possible for them to obtain upon application prompt refund of the tax upon the filing of an application for refund showing that the gasoline was used other than in the propulsion of a motor vehicle.

During the year the department investigated numerous complaints with respect to the evasion of the gasoline tax and in cooperation with the Department of Public Safety prosecuted one Harry Wallace of New Bedford who was found guilty of selling gasoline without a Distributor's license as required by Chapter 64A of the General Laws, (Ter. Ed.) in the Second District Court of Bristol and was fined $100 which he appealed. He was later arrested and charged with the same offense and found guilty in the Third District Court of Bristol and was fined $50 on two counts which he also appealed and which the Superior Court, sitting in New Bedford in November on the case, reserved for report to the Supreme Judicial Court. In an appeal to the Board of Tax Appeals by said Wallace for abatement of taxes assessed upon him for his operations as a Distributor without a license, the Board of Tax Appeals dismissed the appeal December 22, 1933.

Under the provisions of Chapter 370, Acts of 1933, there was taken from the Highway Fund the sum of $8,028,300 which was transferred to the general fund of the Commonwealth, thus reducing the amount of State tax necessary to be raised by the cities and towns, and in this way tending to reduce the burden on real estate and tangible personal property.

MOTOR VEHICLE FEES AND REGISTRATIONS.

For three years, contrary to the experience of all previous years but two, motor vehicle registration in Massachusetts for the fiscal year ended November 30, 1932, revealed a loss from the previous year. The year 1933, however, shows an increase over 1932. The loss of 1932 was the fourth such loss on the books of the registry, the first being in 1927, the year of the Ford shut-down, and the second in 1930, the first full year of the "depression."

Passenger car registrations for the fiscal year reached 816,302, a gain of 10,843 from 1933. The number of business cars and trucks reached the peak in 1931 with registrations totaling 116,580, against 110,506 in 1933. Popularity of the motorcycle is still on the wane. Registrations of motorized "bikes" numbered 3,068 in 1931 and only 1,023 in 1933, compared with 10,333 in 1925, or more than 90 per cent decline in the past eight years.

Fees from registrations, licenses, etc., totaled $6,029,102 for the 1933 fiscal year, $113,027 under the previous year's total, and under half of the 1928 figure. Registration fees were lowered beginning with 1929, but the difference has been more than offset by the gasoline tax.

The desire to drive is apparently as strong as ever, as evidenced by the fact that in 1933, 1,022,662 persons hold Massachusetts permits to operate motor vehicles in this State, against 1,014,635 in the previous year. Only 74,988 persons took examination for driving licenses during the year, as compared with 184,077, the number of 1929, — no doubt a reflection of the business situation.

Record of motor vehicle registrations in Massachusetts for the fiscal year ended November 30, 1933, compared with previous years:

AN ACT PROVIDING FOR THE PAYMENT BY THE COMMONWEALTH TO ITS MUNICIPALITIES OF SUBSTANTIALLY THE WHOLE OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE TEMPORARY INCREASE IN THE GASOLINE TAX.

Whereas, The deferred operation of this act would tend to defeat its purpose, therefore it is hereby declared to be an emergency law, necessary for the immediate preservation of the public convenience.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

SECTION 1. There shall be paid on June first in the current year, from the appropriation made by item five hundred and eighty-nine of the general appropriation act of the current year, to towns then entitled to state aid for repair and improvement of public ways, other than state highways, under section twenty-six of chapter eighty-one of the General Laws, as most recently amended by chapter one hundred and seventy-one of the acts of nineteen hundred and thirty, the sum of four hundred and fifty-six thousand three hundred dollars, the same to be apportioned among said towns at the rate of fifty dollars for each mile of public ways, other than state highways, within their respective limits. Amounts paid to towns as aforesaid shall be in addition to the amounts to which they are entitled under said section twenty-six. There shall also be paid, without appropriation, from the Highway Fund on said June first to cities and towns not entitled to state aid as aforesaid the sum of five million five hundred thousand dollars, the same to be apportioned among such cities and towns in proportion to the amounts for which they will be respectively assessed for the state tax of the current year; provided, that no such city or town shall receive a sum less than was received by it under section seven of chapter one hundred and twenty-two of the acts of nineteen hundred and thirty-one. The amount of any sum payable to a city or town hereunder shall, in the current year, be included by the assessors thereof as an estimated receipt and deducted from the amount required to be raised by taxation to meet appropriations made in said year for the construction, reconstruction or maintenance of highways.

SECTION 2. Said section seven is hereby repealed.

Approved May 20, 1932.

Acts of 1932, Chap. 248.

AN ACT EXTENDING THE TIME DURING WHICH THERE SHALL BE COLLECTED AN ADDITIONAL EXCISE TAX ON SALES OF GASOLINE.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

The time during which the additional excise tax of one cent is imposed on each gallon of fuel, as defined in section one of chapter sixty-four A of the General Laws, sold in the commonwealth, is hereby extended to and including the thirtieth day of April, nineteen hundred and thirty-six, and the provisions of section four of chapter one hundred and twenty-two of the acts of nineteen hundred and thirty-one shall apply to the tax so imposed during such extended period.

Approved May 23, 1932.

VALUATION OF MACHINERY, POLES, WIRES AND UNDERGROUND CONDUITS, WIRES AND PIPES OF TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH COMPANIES

General Laws, Chapter 59, Sections 39-42

The value at which machinery, poles, wires and underground conduits, wires and pipes of telephone and telegraph companies shall be assessed is determined annually by the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation and certified by him to the assessors of the various cities and towns of the Commonwealth. This is the only class of property subject to local assessment, the value of which is not determined by the local assessors. Such property is in reality one continuous piece of property cut across by the various town lines, and the value as a whole should be considered in determining its fractional subdivision.

The total valuation for 1933, as determined by the Commissioner, was $56,674,025, the value as determined for 1932 being $56,342,341, an increase of $331,684. It is to be borne in mind that this does not include all the poles and wires of such corporations, but only those which are erected upon private property or in a railroad location. It does include conduits with the wires and pipes therein laid in public streets, but not the poles and wires erected in public streets or ways. This property is in substance reached through the corporate franchise tax. The property thus valued by the Commissioner at $56,674,025 is subject to taxation at the local rates. Using the average rate throughout the State, which is about $30.02 per thousand as a basis for computation, the corporations paid about $1,701,354.23 in 1933 on this class of property. A right of appeal against the value as thus determined is granted by the statute to the corporations and also to the assessors. No appeals were taken during 1933.

The valuation of the machinery of such corporations as determined by the Commissioner for 1933 was $567,298. There are altogether twelve corporations whose property is subject to valuation under the provision of this statute.

THE TAXATION OF STOCK TRANSFERS

General Laws, Chapter 64

Chapter 64 of the General Laws imposes an excise "on all sales or agreements to sell or memoranda of sales or deliveries or transfers of shares or certificates of stock in any domestic or foreign corporation, whether made upon or shown by the books of the corporation, or by any assignment in blank, or by any delivery, or by any paper or agreement or memorandum or other evidence of transfer or sale, whether or not entitling the holder in any manner to the benefit of such stock or to secure the future payment of money or the future transfer of any stock." The excise is at the rate of two cents on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof, except in cases where the shares or certificates of stock are issued without face value, in which case the excise is at the rate of two cents for each share of stock.

The payment of the tax is denoted by adhesive stamps to be affixed and cancelled by the person making the sale or transfer. Section 2 of the law makes the excise also applicable in the case of certificates of participation or shares of voluntary associations existing under an instrument or declaration of trust.

The Old Colony Trust Company, 17 Court Street, Boston, Massachusetts, has been constituted an agent for the sale of stock transfer stamps and applications for stamps should be made to said agent. Checks for stamps should be made payable to the Old Colony Trust Company, which accounts monthly for the sale of stamps to the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation. Rules and regulations relating to the Stock Transfer Tax have been issued by the commissioner and may be had upon request. Because of the arrangement with the Old Colony Trust Company the expense of collection of the tax has been nominal. The proceeds of the tax are retained by the Commonwealth.

During the fiscal year ending November 30, 1933, the total amount received from the sale of stamps was $303,203.56. Refunds for stamps erroneously affixed amounted to $666.57, leaving the net amount of $302,536.99.

The revenue from the sale of stamps from December 1, 1914, to November 30, 1933, inclusive, on the basis of fiscal years ending November 30 is as follows:

|                    |                    |                    |                    |

The average yield for nineteen years is $309,116.62.

INSURANCE COMPANIES

General Laws, Chapter 63, Sections 20-29

Tax upon Premiums

Under the provisions of these sections there were subject to the premium tax 26 foreign life companies; 350 fire and marine companies, of which 53 were organized under the laws of Massachusetts; and 150 miscellaneous companies, of which 36 were domestic companies.

The basis of the tax is the total gross premiums written or renewed for insurance, or reinsurance, of property or interests in Massachusetts, deduction being granted for all premiums returned or credited to policyholders during the taxable year, including so-called dividends in the case of mutual companies, and for reinsurance paid to authorized companies, provided it is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation that the tax upon such premiums is being paid in full by the reinsuring company.

The rate of tax provided by the statute is 1 per cent for domestic companies and 2 per cent for foreign companies, but retaliatory provisions specify that the tax upon every foreign insurance company shall be not less in amount than would be imposed by its parent state or country upon a like insurance company incorporated in Massachusetts, if doing business to the same extent in such state or country.

The following table shows the assessment upon net premiums, classified by the rates per cent charged in conformity with the above provisions and in reconciliation of differing bases of taxation:

| Net Premiums Subject to Tax | Rate Per Cent       | Amount of Tax |
|-----------------------------|---------------------|---------------|
| \$2,591 69                  | $\frac{1}{10}$ of 1 | \$2 59        |

| 316,206 05                  | $\frac{3}{8}$ of 1  | 1,185 76      |
| 151,757 68                  | $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1  | 758 79        |

| 1,083,657 42           | 21 $\frac{1}{10}$ | 28,175 10                 |
| 55,140 14              | 21 $\frac{8}{10}$ | 1,540 00                  |
| 23,887 77              | 23 $\frac{3}{4}$  | 656 91                    |
| 241,916 96             | 3                 | 7,257 50                  |
| <hr/> $159,070,939 93 |                   | <hr/> $2,421,086 67      |

So far as the tax authorized by these sections relates to foreign life insurance companies, the statute now embodies the decision of the court sustaining the interpretation of the Commissioner, that the premium tax shall be exacted only in cases where and to the extent that such tax exceeds the tax assessed under Section 20 upon the net value of policies described below. (Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Commonwealth, 198 Mass. 466.) The amount of premium tax which would have been paid by these 26 foreign life companies, were it not for the credit to be given on account of the tax on the net value of policies, is $768,995.67. But in the case of 9 of the 26 companies upon which a premium tax of $673,673.88 was computed, the tax upon the net value of policies exceeded the premium tax, and so no premium tax was exacted, and in the case of the other 17 companies upon which a premium tax of $95,321.79 was computed, there was given a credit of $54,559.14 assessed as the tax on the net value of policies under Section 20. Therefore these 17 foreign life companies are actually required to pay only $40,762.65 as a premium tax.

The total premium tax to be collected is as follows:

|                                | Domestic           | Foreign              | Total                |
|--------------------------------|--------------------|----------------------|----------------------|
| Life companies . . . . .       | —                  | $40,762 65          | $40,762 65          |
| Fire and marine companies. . . | $57,833 11        | 573,433 41           | 631,266 52           |
| Miscellaneous companies . . .  | 119,221 57         | 901,602 91           | 1,020,824 48         |
| <hr/> Total . . . . .          | <hr/> $177,054 68 | <hr/> $1,515,798 97 | <hr/> $1,692,853 65 |

In settlement of claims the following abatement was made on account of taxes of previous years: 1932, $726.11.

Additional taxes, due to audit, were assessed as follows: 1932, $57.31.

Tax upon the Net Value of Policies of Life Insurance Companies

Foreign and domestic life insurance companies are alike subject to tax upon the net value of all policies in force upon the lives of residents of Massachusetts at the rate of one-fourth of 1 per cent. The aggregate net value of such policies issued by 47 companies, of which 12 were domestic companies, was $828,470,215.62. The total excise assessed was $2,071,175.55.

TAX UPON SAVINGS AND INSURANCE BANKS

General Laws, Chapter 63, Section 18

Under this section the General Insurance Guaranty Fund and the life insurance departments of twenty-two savings banks were taxed upon all funds held or in possession as a part of their insurance reserve or surplus at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent, deduction being granted for certain investments specified by Section 12 of Chapter 63. The total amount taxable was $4,483,730.06, and the tax assessed, $22,418.65.

Adjustments due to audit of the taxes of previous years resulted in the following additional assessments:

1931, $133.04; 1932, $956.42.

THE APPROVAL OF CORPORATE ORGANIZATIONS AND REPORTS

Articles of organization, amendments, certificates of condition and reports of various kinds some of which are required to be filed by corporations in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth and must first be approved by the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation. Certificates thus presented for the approval of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation are submitted by domestic corporations including public service corporations, foreign business corporations as defined in Chapter 181 of the General Laws, religious, charitable, social corporations and the various other classes of companies that may be organized under Chapter 180 of the General Laws, and voluntary associations.

MASSACHUSETTS CORPORATION ORGANIZATION

The number of corporation organizations which received the approval of the Commissioner during the year, together with the authorized capitalization thereof, follows:

SUMMARY

The foregoing shows that 22,733 amendments and certificates have been examined and approved by the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation during the year; an increase of 1,010 over 1932.

FOREIGN CORPORATIONS

General Laws, Chapter 181

The term "foreign corporation" as used in the General Laws, Chapter 181, is defined as a corporation, association or organization, except an insurance company or a corporation organized for a purpose for which domestic corporations can be organized under chapter one hundred and eighty, which has been established, organized or chartered under laws other than those of Massachusetts.

REGISTRATION

Foreign corporations under the provisions of General Laws, Chapter 181, Sections 3 and 5, as a condition precedent to doing business in Massachusetts, must file with the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation —

<sup>1</sup>Includes change of name, par value of stock, location, nature of business, classes of capital stock subsequently to be issued, and their voting power, right to sell, lease or exchange of all property and assets, including good will and corporate franchise.

1. Appointment of the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation as its attorney upon whom all lawful processes in any action or proceeding against it may be served.

2. A copy of its charter certified by the Secretary of State (or other qualified officer) of the State or country which issued it.

3. A certificate regarding its capital stock, officers, and other information.

4. A true copy of its by-laws.

189 corporations registered and 292 corporations filed affidavits of withdrawal during the year ending November 30, 1933, or have been withdrawn from the list of active companies because of their repeated delinquency as to taxes and the filing of certificates of condition. The companies registered have an aggregate authorized capital stock of $211,715,806, and 5,413,088 shares without par value. The fees amounting to $9,450 have been deposited with the Treasurer and Receiver-General.

AMENDMENTS

Under the provisions of said chapter, there have been filed 11 certificates of increase and 59 certificates of decrease of capital stock. 26 corporations have filed amendments changing their corporate names.

Increases in authorized capital stock reported aggregated \$25,898,000, and 2,835,973 $\frac{1}{2}$  shares without par value and reductions aggregated \$436,903,584 and 7,750,029 $\frac{1}{2}$  shares without par value.

CERTIFICATES OF CONDITION

Foreign corporations are required annually to submit to the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation for his approval a certificate of condition. After examination, if the certificate conforms to the requirements of the statute, the Commissioner indorses his approval thereon. The certificate is then filed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth. 1,984 certificates of condition have been examined and approved during the year.

SERVICE OF PROCESS

Under the provisions of Sections 3 and 3A of Chapter 181 of the General Laws, as amended, 826 writs have been served upon the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation during the year, and the fees accompanying, $1,652, have been deposited with the Treasurer and Receiver-General.

VOLUNTARY ASSOCIATIONS

REGISTRATION

Section 2 of Chapter 182 of the General Laws provides that, as to voluntary associations under a written instrument or declaration of trust, except certain "Voting Trusts," when the beneficial interest is divided into transferable certificates of participation or shares a copy of the written instrument or declaration of trust creating it be filed with this Department. 40 such voluntary associations have registered during the year, and the fees, amounting to $2,000 have been deposited with the Treasurer and Receiver-General.

PETITIONS TO REVIVE CERTAIN CORPORATIONS, ETC.

Section 7 of Chapter 3 of the General Laws, as amended, provides that whoever intends to present to the General Court a petition to establish or revive a corporation of a certain class, amend the charter, change the corporate purpose or name, shall, on or before November 1, prior to the intended presentation, deposit the same with the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation; and if the petition relates to a corporation organized for business or profit it shall be accompanied by a fee of $25.

Under the provisions of this section there has been received and turned over to the Treasurer and Receiver-General the sum of $345, and the petitions forwarded to the General Court.

MISCELLANEOUS RECEIPTS

There has been received $1,369.05 for copies of documents filed in this office and for witness fees, and this amount has been deposited with the Treasurer and Receiver-General.

DIVISION OF MISCELLANEOUS TAXES
TAXATION OF NATIONAL BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES
General Laws, Chapter 63, Sections 1-7 as amended

In compliance with the law, the following procedure was followed to obtain the 1933 rate applicable to "banks."

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
DEPARTMENT OF CORPORATIONS AND TAXATION
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, June 16, 1933.

*To the Cashier of each National Bank
and the Treasurer of each Trust Company in Massachusetts:—*

Subject
1933 Bank Tax Rate

Pursuant to and under the authority of the requirements of sections 1 to 7, inclusive, and in particular, section 2 of Chapter 63 of the General Laws (Ter. Ed.), you are hereby notified of a hearing to be held in Room 239, State House, Boston, on Thursday, June 22, 1933, at 11.00 o'clock in the forenoon.

Section 2 of Chapter 63 provides that Every bank shall pay annually a tax measured by its net income, as defined in section one, at the rate assessed upon other financial corporations; provided, that such rate shall not be higher than the highest of the rates assessed under this chapter upon mercantile and business corporations doing business in the commonwealth. The commissioner shall determine the rate on or before July first of each year after giving a hearing thereon, and at or prior to such hearing he shall make available to all banks requesting the same a statement showing the aggregates of the income returnable during the preceding calendar year and taxable under this chapter and the aggregates of the taxes under this chapter of such year, with respect to the following classes of corporations: (1) domestic financial corporations, (2) foreign financial corporations, (3) domestic manufacturing corporations as defined in section thirty-eight C, (4) foreign manufacturing corporations as defined in section forty-two B, (5) domestic business corporations as defined in section thirty, (6) foreign corporations as defined in said section thirty. The commissioner shall seasonably notify the banks of his determination. Appeal by a bank from the determination of the commissioner may be taken to the board of tax appeals within ten days after the giving of such notice.

Very truly yours,

HENRY F. LONG,
*Commissioner of Corporations
and Taxation*

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON, June 30, 1933.

*To the Cashier of each National Bank
and The Treasurer of each Trust Company in Massachusetts:*

Subject
1933 Bank Tax Rate

In compliance with the provisions of section 2 of chapter 63 of the General Laws as appearing in the Tercentenary Edition, and after due notice of a hearing which was held on June 22, 1933, I have determined the 1933 rate at which the income of banks shall be taxable to be 9.91 per cent.

Very truly yours,

HENRY F. LONG,
*Commissioner of Corporations
and Taxation*

AN ACT RELATIVE TO TAXATION OF BANKS, TRUST COMPANIES AND CERTAIN OTHER CORPORATIONS, ESPECIALLY WITH RESPECT TO THE DEFINITION OF NET INCOME.

Whereas, The deferred operation of this act would tend to defeat its purpose, therefore it is hereby declared to be an emergency law, necessary for the immediate preservation of the public convenience.

Be it enacted, etc., as follows:

SECTION 1. Section one of chapter sixty-three of the General Laws, as appearing in the Tercentenary Edition thereof, is hereby amended by striking out the paragraph defining "Net income" and inserting in place thereof the following:—

"Net income," the gross income from all sources, without exclusion, for the taxable year, less the deductions, other than losses sustained by the bank in other fiscal or calendar years and other than dividends, allowable by the federal revenue act applicable for said taxable year.

SECTION 2. Section two of said chapter sixty-three, as so appearing, is hereby amended by adding at the end of the first sentence the words:—; and, provided, further, that such rate shall not be higher than six per cent,—so as to read as follows:—Section 2. Every bank shall pay annually a tax measured by its net income, as defined in section one, at the rate assessed upon other financial corporations; provided, that such rate shall not be higher than the highest of the rates assessed under this chapter upon mercantile and business corporations doing business in the commonwealth; and, provided, further, that such rate shall not be higher than six per cent. The commissioner shall determine the rate on or before July first of each year after giving a hearing thereon, and at or prior to such hearing he shall make available to all banks requesting the same a statement showing the aggregates of the income returnable during the preceding calendar year and taxable under this chapter and the aggregates of the taxes under this chapter of such year, with respect to the following classes of corporations: (1) domestic financial corporations, (2) foreign financial corporations, (3) domestic manufacturing corporations as defined in section thirty-eight C, (4) foreign manufacturing corporations as defined in section forty-two B, (5) domestic business corporations as defined in section thirty, (6) foreign corporations as defined in said section thirty. The commissioner shall seasonably notify the banks of his determination. Appeal by a bank from the determination of the commissioner may be taken to the board of tax appeals within ten days after the giving of such notice.

* * * * *

SECTION 7. This act shall apply to taxes assessed in the year nineteen hundred and thirty-three and thereafter.

Approved July 17, 1933.

The following tables show the amount of taxes flowing from the taxation of "banks."

SAVINGS BANKS AND TRUST COMPANY SAVINGS

General Laws, Chapter 63, Sections 11-17

This heading includes 193 savings banks, the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company and 67 trust company savings departments. The tax is assessed semi-annually, in May and November covering the preceding six months, upon the average deposits, less those deposits exempt under Section 12, at the rate of one-quarter of one per cent. The essential facts relating to this tax are shown in the following tables:

TAXATION OF PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS

General Laws, Chapter 63, Sections 53-66

This heading includes railroads, street railways, telephone and telegraph companies, gas and electric light companies, power companies, water companies, and a few miscellaneous corporations which are here included for the reason that they are not subject to Chapter 156 of the General Laws (The Business Corporation Law). The whole number of these public service corporations making tax returns as of April 1 is 234. Of these, a tax was assessed upon 139. The total amount of taxes so assessed was $2,354,104.50, of which $7,285.32 was laid upon the street railways and $2,346,819.18 upon the other public service corporations. Of the $7,285.32 assessed upon street railways, $7,233.65 is apportioned to cities and towns in proportion to mileage of tracks, and $51.67 to the Commonwealth principally on account of trackage in public reservations. Of the $2,346,819.18 assessed upon other public service corporations, $1,378,484.54 is apportioned to cities and towns, and $968,334.64 to the Commonwealth. The part distributed to the cities and towns is governed by Chapter 58 of the General Laws which prescribes different methods of distribution for different classes of corporation taxes. Taxes of gas, electric light and water companies are distributed to the cities and towns where the business of the corporation is carried on. The taxes of railroads, telephone and telegraph companies are distributed to the several cities and towns in proportion to the total assessed value of property, actually taxed in each city and town for the preceding year. Taxes assessed on some miscellaneous companies are distributed to cities and towns in proportion to shares of stock owned by residents. The part apportioned to the Commonwealth is on account of shares of stock owned by non-residents of the Commonwealth or by certain corporations. The following table will show the amounts applicable to the different classes of corporations in detail:

|                                   | Cities and Towns | Commonwealth | Totals         |

The total value of the capital stock of the public service corporations as ascertained by me for the purposes of taxation is — $659,352,625.

The value of the corporate excess actually taxed is $74,615,059.

APPORTIONMENT AND DISTRIBUTION OF CORPORATION TAXES

During the year there has been distributed $879,019.41 on account of taxes of years prior to 1933. This net amount follows:

In addition to the above, there has been collected and distributed: Business Corporation taxes of the years 1934 and 1935 in the amount of $7,125.48, of which five-sixths was distributed to the cities and towns.

The amount shown above as accruing to the Commonwealth and to the cities and towns should not be confused with the sums reported as collections relating to corresponding items, because the distribution made in one fiscal year includes taxes paid in a previous fiscal year. These amounts indicate the distributions made during the fiscal year ending November 30, 1933.

Details of the distribution of corporation taxes appear in tables farther on in this report.

The total tax assessed upon domestic business and manufacturing corporations in 1933 is $5,357,109.90, and upon foreign business corporations, $1,894,651.47. There is apportioned to the Commonwealth on account of these corporations $892,851.65 of the tax on domestic and $315,775.24 of the tax on foreign companies; the balance of $4,464,258.25 on domestic and $1,578,876.23 on foreign companies is apportioned to cities and towns under the provisions of Section 20 of Chapter 58 of the General Laws, as amended. The foregoing figures of apportionment in relation to business corporations show the amounts which would accrue to the Commonwealth and to the cities and towns if all assessed taxes were paid; it should be borne in mind, however, that the amounts actually accruing to the Commonwealth and to the cities and towns vary from these figures.

The amount of the 1933 corporation and bank taxes and interest thereon distributed to the close of the fiscal year, November 30, 1933, aggregated $8,806,960.22. These taxes were paid by corporations, as follows:

|   |                |

CARE AND CUSTODY OF DEPOSITS

General Laws, Chapter 58, Section 28

This statute provides that the Commissioner shall assess one-twentieth of 1 per cent upon certain corporations and organizations on account of trust funds deposited with the Treasurer and Receiver-General. The amount of these funds as reported to me by the Treasurer and Receiver-General was $6,187,654, upon which $3,093.83 was assessed.

EXPENSES OF COMMISSIONS

General Laws, Chapter 25, Section 11

The Comptroller reported that $12,404.02 was the amount to be assessed upon corporations, individuals and municipalities for the expenses of the Gas and Electric Light Division of the Department of Public Utilities. The amount is that appropriated by the Legislature less any unexpended balance remaining from the previous appropriation and as provided in Section 12.

This amount was assessed, and notice thereof, respecting the amounts due from cities and towns, given to the Treasurer and Receiver-General.

EXPENSE OF INQUESTS

General Laws, Chapter 38, Section 11

The expense of inquests assessed for 1932 was $1,198.57, being the amount reported to me by the Department of Public Utilities.

INCOME TAX DIVISION

The returns filed in 1933 reporting income received in the calendar year 1932 show that revenue has again declined and is now comparable with the returns filed in 1922 on 1921 income. This result flows from the drop in income of business and salaries, the passing of dividends, defaulting of interest payments, reduction of interest rates and lack of gains on transactions in securities.

The fall in revenue approximating $5,500,000 comes principally in the six per cent tax on interest and dividends which shows a loss of $3,500,000, although the business tax at one and one-half per cent fell off $1,600,000, and the three per cent tax on gains from dealing in intangibles fell off $400,000.

The collections on 1933 taxes proved exceptionally good. Of the amount of $12,946,765.22 assessed, 96.02 per cent has been collected, leaving but 3.98 per cent uncollected as compared to 4 per cent uncollected at the same date in respect to 1932 taxes.

In addition there was collected in 1933 $1,560,252.33 on account of assessments made on prior years' taxes, bringing the total collection for the year to $13,971,959.34.

The total number of returns filed dropped from 427,162 to 402,521, a loss approximating 25,000 returns, which seems not surprising in view of unemployment and reduced incomes during 1932.

Changes through tax legislation in 1933 should materially increase the revenue on returns filed in 1934. The income tax still remaining an important revenue source for the cities and towns, conservative estimates of revenue must continue because of the danger in overestimation of the results in fixing local tax rates.

The work of the Division is explained by the employment of general headings as follows:

ASSESSMENT OF TAXES

During 1933 there were 402,521 returns filed, showing income received during the calendar year 1932, as compared with 427,162 filed in the prior year, a decrease of 24,641 returns. In the fiscal year 1933 there were also filed 97,548 returns for other years, including 69,595 telephone tax forms, making a grand total of 524,710 returns. In addition to the regular assessments, there were 7,954 additional assessments made covering all years, bringing the number of cases handled to a total of 532,664.

Temporary female clerks were employed during the period of peak load in order that there be no serious delays. This procedure proves more economical than permanently increasing the regular clerical force. The work of assessing and billing tax returns required the services of 80 clerks, of which 69 were regular employees and 11 temporary comptometer operators for three months. There were 17,204 cases handled through correspondence in the correction of apparent errors, omissions and the development of omitted income. These 17,204 cases were handled through correspondence during the assessment period; the cases referred later in the year are mentioned under "delinquents." In the section handling correspondence there is one assessor, four deputy assessors and eight to eleven clerks and stenographers.

As a result of the correspondence work there developed 10,209 cases where additional taxes were assessed in the amount of $80,648.90 in addition to the tax shown on the original return. This result was accomplished by the sending out of 31,214 letters and forms, personal interviews with 7,212 taxpayers or their representatives and the handling of 3,906 telephone calls.

The fiduciary returns are handled by a group especially trained in the interpretation of wills, deeds and trusts, consisting of one assessor, one deputy assessor and eight clerks and stenographers, with an additional clerk as a comptometer operator for three months. There were 30,665 returns assessed by this group during the current year on forms 2, 2-B and 2-A. In addition there was developed through correspondence and personal interviews $47,820.43 in tax omitted from the original returns in error or through misinterpretation of the fiduciary instrument.

The partnership section consists of one assessor and five clerks and stenographers who do all the necessary work on returns filed on Forms 3, 3-C and 3-M. There were 7,591 returns filed in this section, and by correspondence and personal interviews errors and omissions were discovered, resulting in $954.83 of tax being assessed over the tax as shown by the original returns.

The corporation section consists of one assessor, one deputy assessor, one regular stenographer and at times two additional clerks. Questions are handled in this section pertaining to corporation dividends, mergers, reorganizations and liquidations. The section also handles the filing and assessing of 770 returns filed on form 3-F by partnerships, associations and trusts with transferable shares.

The value of a careful examination of returns as filed is justified by the fact that the total of these activities produced additional revenue of $129,424.16.

DELINQUENTS

Since the enactment of the income tax law (chapter 269 — 1916), there has been a constant drive to uncover delinquent taxpayers through every available method. Many thousands of returns have been obtained by checking taxpayers who omit to file a particular year, checking of information forms filed with the division, records in the local assessor's offices, registrar of voters, registrar of motor vehicles, registry of deeds and probate, directories, telephone books, chattel mortgage records, banker and tradesman, blue books, records filed in Washington and every other possible available source. Very few cases of deliberate evasion are discovered, most of the fault being lack of knowledge of the requirements of the law, newly acquired residence and advice of persons on the street. The results obtained year after year indicate the value of this work and demonstrate the necessity of constant attention to this part of the work. The results for the fiscal year 1933 show that 31,973 returns were thus obtained, covering income for the calendar years 1930, 1931 and 1932, upon which a tax of $124,654.99 was assessed.

The correspondence, fiduciary, domicile and auditing sections of the main office and assessors and deputy assessors in the ten district offices carry on this line of endeavor throughout the year.

In the fall of each year statistics are taken from the current year's returns and a check made of each individual case to be sure that all returns are filed which are required under the law. Where a return for any year is missing a reference is made to the correspondence section to ascertain the reason or require a return to be filed. During the current year 9327 such cases were investigated, requiring the sending of 7,114 form letters and dictated letters, personal interviews of 5,475 taxpayers or their representatives and the handling of 3,196 telephone inquiries. 6,374 returns were filed as a result of this work disclosing additional tax of $22,871.46.

The domicile section consists of one assessor, one deputy assessor and five clerks and handles cases where domicile adverse to Massachusetts is claimed. There were 4,554 such cases referred to this section during the year. It was clearly demonstrated in 1936 of these cases that domicile was in Massachusetts, 639 domiciled outside of Massachusetts and 1,733 cases were doubtful, being held in abeyance awaiting additional facts or results of investigation. The 1936 cases held to be taxable in Massachusetts involved taxes in the sum of $89,103.40. At the close of the fiscal year there were approximately 200 cases not as yet determined and not included in the foregoing figures.

The fiduciary section consists of one assessor, one deputy assessor and eight clerks and stenographers who handle all returns filed by executors, administrators, trustees, guardians, conservators, trustees and receivers in bankruptcy and other fiduciaries. This work involves the interpretation of many involved wills, trusts and indentures. During the assessment of the taxes in this section and a review of probate records errors and omissions were discovered in numerous cases, and also that 1,315 fiduciaries had omitted to file returns at all, so that $30,250.03 in taxes were produced. Of the 1,315 returns required to be filed, 1,136 were the direct result of the information obtained by a review of the records in the various probate registries.

There are maintained outside of the main office, in various parts of the state, ten district offices, wherein delinquent and audit work is carried on throughout the year in addition to assisting taxpayers in filing returns, collection of taxes and other detail work. These district office activities brought in 22,185 delinquent tax returns and produced additional revenue of $74,719.88.

The auditing section is a part of the main office and is assigned to the larger and more complicated tax cases, but incident to their work of auditing have discovered 163 delinquent taxpayers and assessed taxes involving a revenue of $7,710.22.

AUDITS AND INVESTIGATIONS

The auditing work is carried on in the field by personal contact with the taxpayer by the assessors and deputy assessors in the ten district offices and the auditing section of the main office. The primary object is to check the taxpayer's original records with the return as filed and has covered the 1931, 1932 and 1933 returns filed for the income of the calendar years 1930, 1931 and 1932 respectively. Particular attention was paid to the 1931 returns as the statute of limitation began September 1, 1933. In the course of audits 3,628 returns were found to be incorrect and resulted in the assessment of $251,812.57 in additional taxes.

There are thirty-one assessors and deputy assessors in the district offices who have examined 4,262 returns filed by 3,793 taxpayers, including individuals, partnerships and fiduciaries and developed $101,062.39 in additional taxes.

The main office force of auditors is now composed of twenty-one men under an assessor as chief auditor and divided into fifteen auditors and six investigators. These men are experienced accountants and are assigned the larger business and financial returns. During the year this section completed the examination of 2,716 returns filed by 2,216 individuals, partnerships and fiduciaries, with a gain in tax of $150,750.18. These figures are comparable with the figures of last year showing 2,110 audits of 1,513 cases with a tax gain of $167,788.40.

The total audits for the fiscal year covered the return of 6,009 taxpayers showing an average gain in tax of $41.91 as compared with an average gain of $64.33 in the prior year. There were 6,978 returns audited showing that in 51.99 percent of the cases, errors or omissions were found. This percentage is comparable with 54.88 per cent in the prior year. While the percentage may seem high it must be borne in mind that these examinations because of limited time and personnel cover only a small portion of the returns filed and have to do with the larger cases where, due to the ramifications of business and complications of income, the opportunity for error or misunderstanding is apt to be present. Results of special investigation are included in above figures.

The total increase in revenue from field audits was $251,812.57, a decrease of $64,201.03 which was to be expected in view of depressed conditions.

The results of the last eight years of field audit work are clearly shown in the graph following. The varying lines are an indication that each year has its peculiar problems and cannot be taken as a guide of future field work. The fact that gains continue to be made emphasizes the need and desirability of constant attention to conditions of business and other forms of income of each year.

It is well known that no law will administer itself and although seventeen years of experience has been had by the division and the taxpayers, eternal vigilance is still the answer to effective administration and production.

Graph shows seven years of field audit work.

TOTAL GAINS IN TAXES FROM ADMINISTRATIVE ACTIVITIES

Gains from additional assessments due to desk audits during the assessment period, new returns through delinquent work and audit work in the field, total an aggregate amount of $505,891.72, which except for administrative activities would not have been obtained.

There was of necessity a falling off of additional revenues from this work because business dropped off and income was correspondingly lessened. While this is a loss of 19.84 per cent the gain in money about equals the total cost of administration.

There was collected up to March 15, 1933 by payments made in advance of due date $1,114,880.67, which money the Commonwealth had the use of to the due date of bills on October 1, 1933. If it is assumed that the Commonwealth was paying 3 per cent for borrowed money there was a savings because of this collection of $18,116.80 in interest. The Commonwealth also had the use of approximately $12,000,000 from October 10, 1933 to the distribution date on November 15, 1933, to the cities and towns, which at an assumed rate of 3 per cent was a further saving in interest charges of $36,000. The total of additional taxes and savings on account of interest indicates a revenue gain through administration activities of $560,008.52.

INFORMATION REPORTS

The information reports required to be filed under sections 33 and 34 of the law by individuals and partnerships, also by corporations doing business in Massachusetts, and the reports filed by the Commonwealth and the cities and towns, form the basis of much of the audit and delinquent work. These information reports are filed on cards of uniform size supplied by the Division. Cards are of different color for reporting salary, wages, commissions and all compensation of over $2,000 paid to any inhabitant of Massachusetts; stockholders of record in foreign corporations doing business in Massachusetts; interest paid on bonds, notes and other evidences of indebtedness; and annuities paid to inhabitants of Massachusetts. When filed these cards are arranged alphabetically and their contents checked to the respective returns, or if no return has been filed, are canvassed by the district offices as delinquent work.

There were 859,121 such cards filed, which includes approximately 25,000 cards filed with the corporation division as the basis of a credit on the corporation tax. All Massachusetts corporations were circularized even though no dividends were paid.

There were 16,906 separate reports filed by those required by law to submit such reports, giving information concerning 859,121 items. There were 51,305 pieces of mail handled in this section, assistance given to 1,120 individuals and 3,005 letters written in answer to inquiries.

COLLECTION OF TAXES

Ready comparison may be had in the table following of the net amount of taxes warranted for collection since the law became operative, the net amount actually collected, the balance remaining uncollected and the percentage of tax collected.

The difference between certain of the figures in this table and the figures for corresponding years in prior reports is due to additional assessments, subsequent collections and abatements.

In addition to the collection of income taxes, the collector acts for the commissioner in the collection of all taxes levied by the State. These include corporation taxes, legacy and succession taxes, estate taxes, gasoline taxes, bank taxes, insurance company taxes, public utility taxes, liquor taxes and other miscellaneous and special taxes. This work requires the services of the tellers in the Income Tax Division and some clerical assistance, in addition to two regular clerks assigned to the Income Tax Division by the Corporation Division. The amount of revenue collected and handled by the collection office totals $43,381,057.80 in addition to income tax revenue.

The total revenue collected by this section during the fiscal year 1933 was as follows:

ABATEMENT OF TAXES

There were no court cases which added in any particular to the number of cases abated during the year.

Eliminating Court and Board of Tax Appeals cases, there were 3,509 claims for abatement filed and disposed of during the fiscal year, a decrease of 81 claims. The total abatements granted covered 3,163 claims and $126,428.82 in tax as compared with $259,309.93 the prior year in 2,908 cases.

During the year 3,642 claims for abatement were filed, of which 346 were disallowed in total, saving $49,109.44 in tax. There were 3,509 claims allowed in whole or in part involving a tax in total of $126,428.82. The amount allowed in abatement included $122,686.12 regular taxes, $531 penalties and $3,211.70 accrued interest at the time the assessment was made. The total abated also included $11,903.07 covering 93 claims brought under section 27 of Chapter 58 of the General Laws (Ter. Ed.).

There were also handled in this section 1,433 refund cases without claim for abatement, being cases in which the taxpayer had paid his tax at the time of filing his return and the subsequent assessment of the correct amount of the tax disclosed the overpayment.

Personal interviews were held with 1,815 taxpayers or their representatives in order to assist in the proper filing of the claim or to obtain necessary or additional information to properly judge the claim.

In the great mass of returns assessed and billed only 58 claims for abatement were found to be due to departmental errors, indicating that the system of billing and checking is nearly perfect.

At the end of the fiscal year 861 cases remained to be acted upon, of which 29 had been approved but certificates had not been issued.

The table following displays the amount of the tax levy, the abatements granted in their respective years, and the percentage abated.

STATISTICS OF THE 1933 TAX LEVY

The following tables disclose the principal classes of income which contributed the tax assessed in 1933.

The tax assessed upon salaries, wages and business income was $2,485,693, a falling off of $1,632,067.28 from the total in 1932 of $4,117,760.28 or about 37.20 per cent, while the income from annuities increased $1,758.83 over the total of $47,449.14 in 1932.

The revenue from the excess of gains over losses from the purchase or sale of stocks, bonds, rights and other intangible personal property, taxed at the 3 per cent rate was $159,552.94 as compared with $576,472.07 in the prior year, a drop of 72.32 per cent.

The loss in revenue of approximately $5,800,000 is attributed largely to the unsettled business conditions, the lack of opportunity to realize profit from trading in intangibles and the cutting down and passing of dividend and interest payments. There were substantial net losses from dealings in intangible personal property which are not reflected in these figures, as a net loss in this class of property is not deductible from other classes of income, as would be the case in a general income tax law. This fact has saved many dollars for the cities and towns in taxes and emphasizes the soundness of eliminating capital net losses from current income.

Analysis tables can never be complete for the year at the time of their preparation as additional taxes may be levied for two years or until September 1, 1934, and abatements may be granted. The analysis figures below do not tie in exactly with figures of some of the other tables, because of minor clerical errors, absence of returns from the files temporarily and the closing of various estates during the fiscal year.

ANALYSIS OF 1933 ASSESSMENT

COST OF ADMINISTRATION

The main office force of the Division at 40 Court Street, Boston, consists of the director, assistant director, collector, 38 assessors and deputy assessors and 157 to 210 clerks, stenographers, bookkeepers, messengers, telephone operator and photostat operator. There are also 10 offices maintained outside of the main office where 31 assessors and deputy assessors are employed, together with the necessary clerical force of 12 persons. The regular force provided for in the budget appropriation totals 230 persons and additional provision is made for temporary female help during filing, collection and assessment periods.

In the main office 1,410,720 pieces of mail were handled including both incoming and outgoing mail and also some 160,000 pieces of outgoing mail for the Divisions located at the State House. This same force also handled $13,971,959.34 of income tax collections, besides the necessary work involved in the collection of $43,381,057.80 of other taxes collected by the state.

The ten outside or district offices, located in accessible centers, handled 107,519 pieces of mail, both incoming and outgoing, interviewed 124,069 persons at the offices, collected and deposited $1,034,947.29 of income tax money.

The total cost of administering the income tax was $556,328.99 or 3.98 per cent of the total income tax collections during the year. This percentage of cost to collection will necessarily vary with the amount of revenue collected and as the revenue decreases the percentage of cost increases. It is well, however, to call attention to the additional revenue obtained through administrative efforts which amount equals this year the cost of administration and has in some prior years been nearly double the cost.

ADVANCE PAYMENTS

More and more taxpayers, assisted by an urge from the Division, have been paying their tax or a part of the tax at the time of filing their returns, although legally the tax is not payable until the following October 1. This applies more particularly to the smaller taxes and saves many dollars of expense to the Division, in postage, envelopes and time. This also eliminates the extra effort often necessary to collect small accounts. During the filing period of 1933 there were 64,157 such advance payments made or 10.78 per cent less than the prior year of 71,916. The total amount paid was $1,114,880.67 or about 16.64 per cent less than the prior year of $1,337,541.21. The average advance payment in 1933 was $17.37 per payment. These payments being deposited with the Treasurer and Receiver-General give the Commonwealth the use of $1,114,880.67 to November 15, when distribution is made to the cities and towns, so that assuming an interest rate of three per cent $26,478.40 has been saved in interest charges on borrowed money.

The following table shows the volume of advance payments and the amounts, since the second year of the operation of the law.

LITIGATION

During the fiscal year 1933 only one case was handed down by the Supreme Judicial Court affecting the income tax law.

Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation vs. J. Warren Alford and others, trustees.

This was an appeal by the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation from a decision of the Board of Tax Appeals.

This decision merely construed the meaning of the words "unborn, unascertained or contingent" as found in section 10 of chapter 62 of the General Laws prior to the amendment of this section by chapter 456 of the Acts of 1931

On November 30, 1933, there were four cases before the Supreme Judicial Court for decision.

There were sixteen appeals taken from the decisions of the Commissioner to the Board of Tax Appeals. The Board of Tax Appeals has promulgated decisions in seventeen cases, thirteen of these in favor of the Commissioner and four against the Commissioner. Two cases have been withdrawn and one appeal taken to the Supreme Judicial Court.

There are now eight cases before the Board.

DISTRIBUTION OF TAXES OF THE VARIOUS YEARS

The following table shows the Income Taxes assessed and collected for the years ending November 30, as distributed to cities, towns and districts. On November 15, 1933, the sum of $11,728,556.87 was distributed.

This table shows the accounting of the Division for the tax levies of the various years:

DIVISION OF CORPORATIONS

The number of business and manufacturing corporations subject to taxation as of November 30, 1933, was, Domestic 22,248; Foreign 2,263.

There has been a continued decrease in excise taxes due to the abnormal business conditions. Under the heading "statistics" a detailed comparison is shown.

ASSESSMENT AND ABATEMENT

The following table gives the total number of original assessments made and total sums assessed during the fiscal year with respect to the business and manufacturing corporation taxes for the years indicated. "Regular" assessments mean those made upon returns filed. "Estimated" assessments mean such assessments as are based upon estimate in case the corporation has failed to file a return. "Accelerated" assessments are those laid previous to the normal due date by reason of the sale or transfer of corporate assets otherwise than in the ordinary course of business. This table does not include so-called "additional" taxes nor taxes resulting from Federal changes. (See post.)

CHANGES IN FEDERAL NET INCOME

During the fiscal year additional taxes amounting to $111,090.20 were assessed by reason of changes in net income as determined by the federal government and $48,644.08 was certified for refund or abatement because of such determination. As a result there was a net gain in taxes for the year in the amount of $62,446.12. The "gain" or "loss" for each year is shown in the following table. A "loss" indicates an excess of refunds or abatements over assessments and a "gain" indicates an excess of assessments over refunds or abatements.

LITIGATION

In the case of J. G. McCrory Company v. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts sustained the findings of the Board of Tax Appeals upon a record which presented a part only of the evidence before the Board, the Court holding that there might have been other evidence upon which the Board would have been justified in finding that the J. G. McCrory Company, although admittedly a subsidiary of another corporation, disclosed its true earnings in its tax return and had sustained the burden of proving that no part of its indebtedness was incurred to reduce taxes. The Court held that while the burden is on the corporation to satisfy the Commissioner that no part of its indebtedness was incurred to reduce taxes, the decision of the Commissioner is subject to review as to its reasonableness by the Board of Tax Appeals. The Court found it unnecessary to pass upon the question as to whether if a corporation is undercapitalized with a general view to constantly recurring indebtedness which would tend to reduce taxes, such indebtedness may be disregarded by the Commissioner under the provisions of Section 31 of Chapter 63 of the General Laws. Although the Court sees no analogy "in facts or in governing statutes" between the instant case and the case of Palmolive Co. v. Conway, 43 Fed. Rep. (2d) 226, affirmed in 56 Fed. Rep. (2d) 83, by the United States Supreme Court, October 10, 1932, it is believed that the dictum in the McCrory case is in direct conflict with principles enunciated in the Palmolive case. In the Palmolive case, the Wisconsin statute authorized the Tax Commission to tax a subsidiary corporation on its true earnings but was silent as to how the Commission should estimate the true earnings if it believed them to differ from the net income reported. The Commission in fact estimated them by applying the allocating factors adopted by the Wisconsin statute for allocation of the income of a single corporation within and without the State to the consolidated income of the subsidiary and the parent corporation. In this it was sustained by the federal courts. In the McCrory case the Commissioner applied the allocating factors of the Massachusetts statute to the consolidated income of the subsidiary and the parent corporation to estimate the true earnings of the subsidiary. The Massachusetts Court says that there was no justification in the Massachusetts statute for adopting this method, in spite of the fact that later in the opinion the Court finds it unnecessary to consider the "elaborate argument" of the Commissioner wherein it was contended that "net income" as used in General Laws, Chapter 63, Section 32, means "true earnings." It seems clear that if this contention is sound, the Massachusetts statute and the Wisconsin statute are not distinguishable, neither one expressly authorizing the application of allocating factors to the consolidated net income to estimate the true income of the subsidiary. It would also seem clear that when this analogy is discerned and recognized, the Massachusetts Court must either disregard its dictum in the McCrory case or frankly refuse to adopt the principle established by the federal courts in the Palmolive case. (See Chapter 303, Acts of 1933.)

DIVISION OF INHERITANCE TAXES

Following is a statement of the amount of inheritance taxes paid to Massachusetts during each fiscal year since the present law became effective:

|                |              |                |                |
|----------------|--------------|----------------|----------------|
| 1908 . . . . . | $357,529 46 | 1921 . . . . . | $7,322,947 10 |
| 1909 . . . . . | 908,134 42   | 1922 . . . . . | 6,805,977 44   |
| 1910 . . . . . | 1,467,697 10 | 1923 . . . . . | 6,158,924 99   |
| 1911 . . . . . | 2,029,225 13 | 1924 . . . . . | 6,489,173 41   |
| 1912 . . . . . | 2,154,406 85 | 1925 . . . . . | 5,920,307 41   |
| 1913 . . . . . | 2,832,674 12 | 1926 . . . . . | 6,511,302 84   |
| 1914 . . . . . | 2,277,382 19 | 1927 . . . . . | 10,751,882 63  |
| 1915 . . . . . | 3,204,177 32 | 1928 . . . . . | 10,337,738 99  |
| 1916 . . . . . | 4,223,843 35 | 1929 . . . . . | 12,082,348 57  |
| 1917 . . . . . | 3,900,247 10 | 1930 . . . . . | 14,337,250 92  |
| 1918 . . . . . | 5,841,204 68 | 1931 . . . . . | 11,688,657 25  |
| 1919 . . . . . | 5,002,697 13 | 1932 . . . . . | 10,970,740 81  |
| 1920 . . . . . | 4,607,663 00 | 1933 . . . . . | 7,996,136 68   |

The net amount collected in 1933 is about 27 per cent less than the collection in 1932 and about 56 per cent of the amount collected in 1930, the year that yielded the largest net amount since the inheritance tax law was enacted in 1907. The net return for the year is about the amount estimated and probably more than will be realized in 1934, as there are comparatively few large estates in process of settlement and refunds already allowed since the beginning of the fiscal year will reduce the gross collections by a substantial amount. While the expense of collection has not increased, owing to the reduced amount collected it represents nearly one per cent of the net collection.

In the collection for 1933 there is included Estate Taxes of $1,477,684.77, under Chapter 65A, General Laws (Ter. Ed.). The net amount collected from this source since this act was passed in 1926 is $11,423,013.67. This chapter was enacted in consequence of the Federal Revenue Act of 1926 (re-enacted in 1928) that inheritance, transfer and estate taxes paid to the several States may be credited on account of the Federal Estate Tax to an amount not in excess of 80 per cent of the Federal Estate Tax. As it appeared that in some of the larger estates the sum of all the State taxes would be less than 80 per cent of the Federal Estate Tax, it was clear the Massachusetts tax, in such cases, could be increased without adding to the gross amount of death taxes payable by the estates. This increase was effected by the Act above cited, which provides that estates of all resident decedents shall pay a Massachusetts Estate Tax equal to the amount by which 80 per cent of the Federal Estate Tax exceeds the sum of all state taxes. If this chapter had not been enacted, the estates which have paid a Massachusetts Estate Tax would have paid the same amount to the United States in addition to the Federal Estate Tax they have actually paid. This act applies only to the estates of persons dying after February 26, 1926 and is effective for such time as the Federal Estate Tax Law allows this credit. A perfecting amendment providing for refunds was added in 1930 by Chapter 301.

This chapter was amended by Chapter 284 of 1932 which makes the estates of non-residents who died subsequent to June 5, 1932 subject to a Massachusetts Estate Tax. The estates of non-resident decedents owning a large amount of real estate or tangible personal property in Massachusetts may increase the estate tax revenue, payable under this act, by a substantial amount.

By the provisions of Chapter 316, Acts of 1933, effective as of December 1, 1932, the estates of decedents who are not residents of the United States are subject to a Massachusetts Estate Tax and some collections have already been made under the provisions of this act.

The Federal Revenue Act of 1932, providing for an additional Estate Tax has reduced the net values of estates substantially and consequently the Massachusetts inheritance has been diminished since this act took effect.

Chapter 293, Acts of 1933, applicable to estates of persons dying on or after June 27, 1933, increased the rates on beneficiaries or distributees under Class A whose beneficial interest is in excess of $500,000.

Chapter 319, Acts of 1933, provides for reciprocal relations in respect to death taxes upon estates of non-resident decedents. The purpose of this act is to ensure that the domiciliary State of any non-resident decedent shall receive all death taxes to which it may be entitled. Eight other States already have reciprocal acts and it is expected many more will enact similar legislation in the near future.

Of the amount collected in 1933, $24,930.67 was derived from estates of non-resident decedents and $22,370.75 has been assessed in ten estates under the so-called "collateral inheritance tax law" which was in effect from July 11, 1891 until June 27, 1907 and was applicable to the estates of persons who died between those dates and which has been administered by this Division since January 1, 1923. Further taxes will become payable under this law upon the termination of trusts and the distribution of property under the wills of persons who died while the law was in effect.

While stock of Massachusetts owned by non-residents who died before December 1, 1926 was generally subject to an inheritance in Massachusetts, our laws always contained a reciprocal provision. The law was amended by Chapter 156 of the Acts of 1927 which exempts from inheritance taxes in Massachusetts intangible personal property of all non-residents dying on or after December 1, 1926. Under the law now in effect, General Laws, (Ter. Ed.) § 1, Chapter 65, as amended by Chapter 292 of the Acts of 1929, the only property of non-residents dying subsequent to December 1, 1928, subject to an inheritance tax in Massachusetts, is real estate and tangible personal property having a situs in Massachusetts.

The Supreme Court of the United States in the case of First National Bank of Boston vs. State of Maine, January 4, 1932, 284 U. S. 312 said "shares of stock, like other intangibles, constitutionally can be subject to a death transfer tax by one state only." As a result of this decision it seems that property of a decedent can not now be subject to more than one State inheritance or transfer tax.

As our law provides that an executor or administrator is liable for the inheritance tax (§ 6, Chapter 65, General Laws, (Ter. Ed.), waivers will not be issued for the transfer of securities belonging to the estate of a resident decedent, when an executor or administrator has been appointed by a Massachusetts court and given bond as the law requires. Waivers are not required for the transfer of securities of a non-resident decedent, except in estates of persons who were not residents of the United States and who died on or after July 7, 1933. Such estates may be subject to an estate tax under Chapter 316 of the Acts of 1933 and personal property in Massachusetts should not be transferred until permission is given by the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, or the exhibition of a receipt showing that the Massachusetts Estate Tax has been paid.

In 1933 there were received from the probate courts, executors and administrators, wills, inventories and other papers relating to 5,628 estates. As frequently as possible a representative of the Division has visited the registry of probate in each county of the State, and upon examination of inventories and other papers there on file has excused the register from sending to this Division copies of papers in estates that appeared not subject to a tax. The number of cases from the mailing of which the registers were thus excused aggregated 9,237. It thus appears that 14,865 new estates have been dealt with by the Division in 1933. The total number of cases examined by a representative of the Division during the year is 36,705 including incomplete cases. It will be seen that the number of cases examined is about 22,000 in excess of the number of cases received from the probate court and the number from which the registries have been excused from mailing. This latter number represents cases pending in the probate courts which were not completed in 1933 and includes all unfinished cases since the present law took effect September 1, 1907.

In the registries of deeds 2,480 deeds of trust have been examined. At some future time property passing by some of these deeds will be subject to a tax and records have been made which will enable the Division to certify and collect such taxes when due. There are still many deeds of trust to be examined but the work is going on as speedily as possible with the limited force provided and it is probable the deeds now on file and not yet examined will yield a substantial inheritance tax.

The total amount of tax assessed and certified in 1933 was $8,188,376.56. The reason why the amount of tax assessed does not correspond with the amount collected is because the date the tax becomes due or is paid does not always fall in the same fiscal year in which the tax is assessed.

In many estates upon request, partial assessments of the tax have been made. As it is impossible to give a complete summary of such cases, the following analysis deals only with cases that have been completed during the fiscal year.

ANALYSIS OF COMPLETED CASES

Number of cases completed in the year 1933:

Total tax assessed on $167,303,410.40 contained in 3,411 estates:

|                                   |                |
|-----------------------------------|----------------|
| Massachusetts decedents . . . . . | $6,926,522 35 |
| Foreign decedents . . . . .       | 24,930 67      |

$6,951,453 02

The discrepancy between $6,951,453.02 which is the total tax assessed on 3,411 finished cases and $8,188,376.56 reported as the total amount of tax assessed and certified in 1933 is because taxes in an estate may be certified on account over a period of years, but the tax may not be certified in full until a distant date, when it is then shown in the compilation of completed cases.

The amounts and proportions of this tax assessed at various rates are:

|                |                |                              |

| At 8 per cent  | 414,233 13 =   | 6.07 per cent of whole tax.  |
| At 9 per cent  | 236,285 16 =   | 3.46 per cent of whole tax.  |
| At 10 per cent | 137,745 72 =   | 2.02 per cent of whole tax.  |
| At 11 per cent | 11,300 62 =    | .16 per cent of whole tax.   |
| At 12 per cent | 250 07 =       | 0.00 per cent of whole tax.  |

The items in the preceding tables indicating that some taxes were "settled" instead of computed at definite rates, refer to settlements made under the provisions of law by which the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, with the approval of the Attorney General (§ 14, Chapter 65, General Laws, Ter. Ed.) is authorized to settle by agreement the tax upon present or future beneficial interests which are so involved in uncertainties and contingencies that the value of the interest to the beneficiary cannot be accurately determined.

During the year, 6,046 estates have been appraised by the appraisal Section and the total valuation put upon the same is $246,620,237.80 as compared with a total valuation $235,027,834.28 as returned by the estates. This is an increase of 4.93 per cent of the values returned by the estates, while the increase in determined values in 1932 over the reported values was 3.35 per cent.

The above figures representing reported and determined values in 1933 are about $115,000,000 less than the corresponding figures in 1932, indicating the tremendous shrinkage in values of all classes of property.

Since Chapter 416 of the Acts of 1930 became effective, three appeals from the valuations of estates as determined by this division have been taken to the Board of Tax Appeals. In the first case, Harold T. Davis, Admr. vs. Commissioner of Corporations, the Board sustained the valuation as determined, its decree was accepted by the Probate Court and on appeal to the Supreme Court the decree was affirmed (Harold T. Davis, Admr. vs. Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, 280 Mass. 138, July 16, 1932). In the second case the Board found for the appellant and is now before the Probate Court. The third case is still before the board for a hearing at some future date.

There have been no Supreme Court decisions in inheritance tax cases since the Davis case mentioned above and no inheritance tax cases are now pending.

Within the past few years there has been an increasing tendency on the part of administrators and executors to file inventories of estates with the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation, under the provisions of General Laws, Chapter 65, as amended, rather than in the probate court and at the present time a very large percentage of inventories are here. This has resulted in much additional work for the Division in filing papers, additional correspondence and in numerous ways, particularly in additional space for filing cabinets.

We are still lacking needed working space and sadly need additional competent clerks to carry on the work as it should be carried on. This year has been notable for absence on account of sickness, due largely to lack of sufficient working space and proper ventilation. Lack of facilities to properly appraise estates, assess and certify taxes in proper time, carry on the work of examination of probate records and registries of deeds, results in a loss of inheritance taxes many times the additional cost of a competent force and proper quarters to properly do this class of work.

DIVISION OF LOCAL TAXATION

The work of the Division of Local Taxation has continued throughout the year 1933, substantially along the same lines as in the past, but greatly increased owing to the prevailing conditions, many difficult situations having developed with respect to the tax payers, city and town officials and the municipalities themselves, which have entailed even greater time and consideration on the part of the personnel of the Division, thus adding heavily to the duties and consuming much time in the solution of all such problems of assessment, collection, settlement and official acts of city and town officers. This is partially disclosed in the following comparative statistics regarding visits and correspondence for the years 1932 and 1933:

|  | 1932   | 1933   |
|--|--------|--------|
| Visits of boards of assessors . . . . .                    | 1,297  | 1,383  |
| Calls of assessors and collectors at this office . . . . . | 1,686  | 2,156  |
| Other calls at this office . . . . .                       | 2,697  | 3,092  |
| Letters received . . . . .                                 | 11,171 | 13,138 |
| Letters sent . . . . .                                     | 38,622 | 43,801 |

Owing to present conditions, many inquiries are being constantly made at this office by letter, telephone and personal calls by various persons and organizations, many of a civic nature, regarding the status of uncollected taxes in the cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth. This is particularly true regarding surety companies who desire this information in connection with the bonding of collectors and treasurers. Where formerly we called for one report of this kind in the year, we now require and tabulate this information every three months. However the many demands for this data appear to fully repay the time and effort consumed in compiling the requisite information. The collection and tabulation of these figures has made a heavy drain on the time of the office force and has consequently delayed other necessary work.

By the passage of Section 3 of Chapter 168 of the Acts of 1933, which requires the Commissioner to approve all forms used in the assessment and collection of taxes, there has been placed upon the Division the tremendous task of correcting and approving about sixty such forms, which, if thought of in terms of three hundred and fifty-five cities and towns, gives some idea of the labor and time required to properly conform to the mandate of the Legislature. The last revision of the tax forms was made in the year 1908 and the many changes which have been enacted by the Legislature affecting the tax laws since that time will indicate the large amount of work necessary to bring all the forms up to date in order that they may conform to existing conditions as well as comply with the statutes now in effect. Formerly there were only twenty-three statutory forms, all of which applied to the work of the collector of taxes. Under the present situation the forms are divided into three classes, those to be used by the assessors, by the collectors and by the treasurers in handling tax titles. During the past few years there have been many forms devised and recommended. These have now been incorporated in a list of approved forms and given a legal status not present in many forms prior to the enactment of the above mentioned statute.

The present situation is emphasized by many extra duties which during the past two years have been placed upon the Division, such as the writing of certifications for the transfer or use of available funds to be used by the assessors in the computation of the tax rate, necessitating the sending of such certificates to two hundred and eighteen cities and towns, involving $10,114,389, although the recapitulation tables show $14,047,614 available funds to have been used by the various boards of assessors; the certification of approval of the appointment and also of the bond of deputy collectors. During the year 1933 there were one hundred and eleven deputy collectors appointed representing two hundred and thirty-five cities and towns, there being several persons who were appointed and approved for more than one municipality.

The certification of old age assistance taxes continued throughout the year. It was found that in many cases the late assessments were not reported by the assessors and this necessarily caused some delay. Also the refunds on account of these taxes because of their uncollectibility needed the almost exclusive attention of one of our clerks for months and consequently other work was seriously retarded on account of them.

The checking of post cards from assessors and collectors with respect to the correctness and the balancing of the valuation and commitment lists was continued as usual.

The members of the office force have accepted these added burdens willingly and cheerfully and in view of the circumstances it is remarkable that the various duties have been completed on time and have been so well done.

During the year the calls upon the four supervisors for assistance and advice have been constant and never before have their activities proven so valuable not only to the taxing officials but also to many other city and town officers and taxpayers constantly seeking their counsel and guidance.

REIMBURSEMENT OF CITIES AND TOWNS ON ACCOUNT OF TAXES LOST ON LAND HELD FOR STATE INSTITUTIONS, ETC.

Under the provisions of Section 16 of Chapter 58 of the General Laws, the Commissioner, on July 28, 1933, certified to the Treasurer and Receiver-General that the value of land in cities and towns held for public institutions, fish hatcheries, game reservations, State forests and for the military camp ground at Framingham, was $3,973,423. The amount reimbursed to cities and towns in lieu of taxes upon this valuation, at the State rate of $31.55 per thousand, was $125,361.51. The following table shows the detail of reimbursement:

ADJUSTMENT OF VETERANS' EXEMPTIONS BETWEEN THE CITIES AND TOWNS

Under the provisions of Section 85 of Chapter 59 of the General Laws, assessors of every city and town must make a return to the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation of the value of property exempted from taxation under the provisions of clauses 22 and 23 of Section 5 of said Chapter 59, as amended, together with the amount of taxes which would have been assessed on such property but for said exemption. The Commissioner must determine from the returns or otherwise the total amount so exempted, and apportion one-third of such taxes as a charge upon the cities and towns, according to the basis determined by him for the apportionment of the State tax. He must also credit to each city and town one-third of the amount of taxes exempted. On the fifteenth day of November notice of the charge or credit was sent to the assessors of each city and town, and since no appeals were taken within the statutory ten days the amounts were certified to the Treasurer and Receiver-General (see Sections 11 and 12, Chapter 58, General Laws as amended). The total amount of taxes lost on account of the exemption was $112,360.62, one-third of which was adjusted between cities and towns under the provisions of said sections.

Part I of Public Document No. 19 gives full details of assessed values and taxes as laid in the original assessment of each year throughout the Commonwealth. Part II of the same document gives the same information in regard to assessments laid in December pursuant to the provisions of Section 75 of Chapter 59 of the General Laws.

TABLE TWENTY-ONE —

The total value of real estate and tangible personal property as assessed by cities and towns in selected years is: (Including 1916 the assessment was on tangible and intangible property but beginning April 1, 1917, only tangible property is locally assessed, the intangible property being freed from local taxation but subject to the income tax.)

The above figures include the April and December assessments.

<sup>1</sup> "State Tax" is really a deficiency bill. The State for its purposes having certain revenues which are estimated in the State budget as an offset to the estimated cost of running the State activities. The balance is assessed directly upon the cities and towns in proportion to an equalization made every three years, when the ability of the municipality to pay is determined.

<sup>2</sup> "County Tax" is an amount authorized by legislative act that the counties are permitted to spend in their budget; they then assess directly upon the cities and towns in the proportion used for the "State Tax."

<sup>3</sup> The figures for 1929 to 1932, inc., do not include the amount of tax on Registered Motor Vehicles. The figures for 1928 and the earlier years do include Motor Vehicles. The assessed value of and the amount of the tax upon registered motor vehicles in 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932 and 1933: 1929, value $389,777,927; 1929, tax $10,363,324.71; 1930, value $352,760,905; 1930, tax $8,534,837.50; 1931, value $304,113,291; 1931, tax $7,611,555.12; 1932, value $240,317,775; 1932, tax $6,183,706.22; 1933, value $212,093,824; 1933, tax $5,287,438.63.

COLLECTION OF OVERDUE TAXES

DIRECT TAX AND BONDS OF TREASURERS AND COLLECTORS

Under the provisions of Chapter sixty-five of the Acts of 1926 the Commissioner is required to establish the minimum amount of indemnity which may appear in the surety bond of each treasurer and collector of taxes of each city and town in the Commonwealth.

This duty was first performed with respect to the bonds of these officers for the year 1926 and the minimums established together with other information relating thereto appear on pages 8 to 12 of my report for 1926.

The form to be used for the bonds required under the provisions of Chapter 65 of 1926 is found on pages 6 and 7 of my report for the year ending November 30, 1926.

The following table shows the amount of direct tax in each municipality in 1932 and 1933 and the minimum established for the bond of each treasurer and collector of taxes for the years 1933 and 1934.

DIVISION OF ACCOUNTS

The work of this division, consisting of the auditing of city, town and county accounts together with the certification of city and town notes, is more fully described in Public Document No. 79. This publication is of necessity many months later than this report for the reason that many of the city financial years do not end at the same time that the town year ends, which is December 31. Because of the necessity of getting accurate and complete figures by way of tabulation, correct amounts for inclusion in the report must be delayed until Public Document No. 79 is ready for printing. Information as to the number of audits made during the year and information of that character is more completely carried in the report of this division, "Statistics of Municipal Finances." In addition to this publication, information in respect to counties will be found in Public Document No. 29 and in the estimate of county receipts and expenditures filed each year with the Legislature which goes under a legislative document number.

The amount of work done by the division in respect to audits and certification of town notes and other activities is dealt with under the heading "Statistical" in the introductory text of this report.

Chapter 38 of the Acts of 1934 relates to the establishing of the fiscal year of the City of Waltham, as ending Dec. 31, in 1934.

Chapter 229 of the Acts of 1934 relates to establishing the end of the fiscal year of all cities as Dec. 31, beginning in 1935.

FINANCIAL STATUS OF THE MUNICIPALITIES

Revenue and Expenses

Referring to the tables "Revenue for Current Charges" and "Current Charges against Revenue" which follow, it will be noted that receipts from revenue for current charges have been reduced from $294,544,521 to $290,523,610, a reduction of $4,020,911. Receipts from taxes show a decrease of $7,787,276. The loss of revenue from taxes was offset partly by the distribution of gasoline taxes to cities and towns by the Commonwealth which is reflected in the increase of $3,120,193 in grants and gifts for expenses. Departmental revenue shows an increase of $1,764,401, this increase being due principally to the return to the cities and towns by the Boston Elevated Street Railway Company of $1,409,253 which had been advanced by the cities and towns in previous years to cover the deficit in the operation of the Boston Elevated Street Railway Company.

Of the current charges against revenue, general government shows a decrease of $159,956, or 1.43 per cent, but the total expense for this function is still 5.32 per cent over that for 1929; protection of persons and property shows a decrease of $294,367, or 0.79 per cent; highways, $463,686, or 1.95 per cent; recreation, $562,270, or 7.64 per cent; public service enterprises, $274,063, or 1.70 per cent; cemeteries, $30,941, or 2.09 per cent; and interest, $402,808, or 2.06 per cent.

The following functions show increases in current charges: health and sanitation, $102,682, or 0.54 per cent; charities, $9,699,980, or 44.28 per cent; soldiers' benefits, $602,649, or 25.12 per cent; schools, $549,320, or 0.72 per cent; libraries, $90,090, or 2.22 per cent; pensions, $287,128, or 7.05 per cent; unclassified, $351,928, or 10.65 per cent; administration of trust funds, $6,644, or 3.24 per cent; and debt, including transfers to sinking funds, $1,217,378, or 4.30 per cent.

The total current charges against revenue for 1931 show an increase over the previous year of $10,719,708. As mentioned above, several of the functions show a decrease over the previous year, but of those which show an increase, the increases, with the exception of charities and soldiers' benefits, are less than in normal years. The figures indicate clearly that there has been a curtailment in activities, but the increase in debt charges is a direct result of the free borrowing noted in my previous report. It will be noted that the increase in welfare expenses is about $20,000 less than the increase in the total current charges against revenue.

In the tables in this report, the transactions for the city of Cambridge, for the first time, are for the fiscal year ending December 31 instead of March 31 as formerly. This shortened year causes the expenditures reported to be less than in other cities of similar size, but, in adjusting the financial year, the legislative act provided that the amount of estimated saving in current charges by a shortened year should be levied and appropriated for school buildings and other permanent improvements of which the city was in need, thereby avoiding the incurrence of debt by the city which otherwise would have to be done.

A comparison of revenue for current charges and current charges against revenue for the years 1930 and 1931 for all cities and towns, together with the percentage each class of receipts bears to the total receipts, and the cost of each function of government as compared with total expenditures, as well as the outlays for these years, will be found in the following tables:

Expenditures for outlays are not included in current charges against revenue. Although a portion of these expenditures may have been financed from revenue sources, in reality they have been financed mostly from non-revenue funds. Outlays include expenditures for any work of construction for public improvement or additional equipment which increases the visible assets of the municipality. The line of demarcation between current charges against revenue and outlays is admittedly often exceedingly difficult to draw; generally, however, if the improvement or equipment will last for several years, or is an object for which a loan might be issued under our indebtedness statute, the cost of the same may properly be regarded as an outlay.

THE DEBT BURDEN

The net funded or fixed debt of all municipalities at the close of the year 1931 was $316,650,623, an increase over the preceding financial year of $14,940,516, or 4.95 per cent. The assessed valuation of taxable property decreased $121,084,408, or 1.60 per cent. The debt figures for the close of the financial year 1931 should not be confused with those previously reported for the calendar year 1931. On page 211 of this report will be found the date of the fiscal year ending of the cities. In all towns the fiscal year ends on December 31.

The total net funded or fixed debt January 1, 1933, was $311,666,745, a decrease of $4,817,854 over January 1, 1932, or 1.52 per cent. In this connection, I would call attention to debt incurred for traffic tunnel in the city of Boston of $5,950,000, this being an extraordinary project. The actual decrease of indebtedness for ordinary purposes was, therefore, more than appears. For the cities the net funded or fixed debt was $261,265,745, a decrease of $443,171, or 0.17 per cent; for the towns over 5,000 population it was $38,843,680, a decrease of $3,201,114, or 7.61 per cent; for towns under 5,000 population, $11,557,320, a decrease of $1,173,569, or 9.22 per cent.

Loans in anticipation of revenue of 1932, outstanding January 1, 1933, aggregate $63,144,183, but to meet these loans there were unpaid taxes of 1932 amounting to $77,410,865. The statute which provides for the assessment of property as of April 1 for taxes payable October 15 necessarily requires that in most cases there should be temporary loans in anticipation of the collection of taxes. These loans are usually for a short period of time and under the general laws cannot exceed one year.

The policy of requiring an initial contribution from revenue as a condition precedent to borrowing has served to retain a relatively low ratio of debt to valuation, but even with these restrictions the debt has increased slightly while the assessed valuation of taxable property has decreased. The valuation of taxable property shows a decrease of $121,084,408 from the amount assessed in 1930. With the exception of the year 1917, when intangible property was eliminated from the valuation list because of the income tax law, there has been no decrease in valuation since 1910 until the year 1931, but further reductions are certain to follow. It will be necessary for corresponding reductions to be made in the long term debt, as taxes on real estate are the chief source of revenue and real estate cannot bear any additional burden. The present emergency, which calls for such large welfare expenditures, does, however, justify the spreading of a portion of these costs over a term of years by means of borrowing, at least to the extent that we liquidate our present funded or fixed debt through the serial payment plan.

The wisdom of conservative borrowing and the planning of necessary improvements during more prosperous times has, I believe, been thoroughly demonstrated, for while Massachusetts has felt this depression more than any one could possibly have foreseen yet we do find our finances in far better condition than other sections of the country. The present problem is that of public welfare, and this will be solved by the decision of an educated citizenship as to what service is to be rendered at public expense, and by better municipal planning for the future than has been provided in the past.

THE CERTIFICATION OF TOWN AND DISTRICT NOTES

The amount of borrowing by towns by the issuance of town notes is constantly increasing. The data collected for use in connection with this report and the records of town notes issued are being used constantly throughout the year by investors in municipal securities. Information relative to tax levies, tax rates, uncollected taxes, outstanding indebtedness, both funded or fixed and temporary, are proving to be of great service to investors and the general public.

The number of notes certified and the amount of loans represented by them since the town note act took effect on January 1, 1911, are shown in the following table:

THE AUDITING OF ACCOUNTS AND INSTALLATION OF ACCOUNTING SYSTEMS

During the past year systems have been installed in four cities and towns, 205 audits have been made, and assistance has been rendered in one other town. Systems have now been installed in 213 cities, towns and districts.

The work of the examiners in making the audits and installing systems of accounts has been done in a most satisfactory manner. Much time is necessarily devoted to assisting and advising the officials as to the better way of meeting some of their problems, and from the many requests received for assistance of this kind, it is very evident that the aid rendered is appreciated by city and town officials. The general advisory work being done is, in my opinion, most important for it assures greater cooperation with this department, better budgets and better accounting, resulting in greater economy and efficiency in government.

The force of examiners has not been increased and no additions are contemplated, as the present force can make an examination of every city and town, with but few exceptions, as often as required by the statute.

Decrease due to items now presented in Column 4.

Total does not show actual increase in amounts reported by assessors, because one municipality had in previous years reported erroneously intangible personal property estimated at $58,000,000, and which is not reported this year.
